For the past two summers this settlement has been used by the Union settlement of New York as a vacation home for some of the working girls connected with the settlement clubs. In the summer of 1908 the homestead was opened during August and twenty-four girls entertained. Plainfield friends paid the running expenses and the Union settlement paid for the transportation. Last year the homestead was open during July and August and seventy-three persons enpoyed the privileges.

The Union settlement has acknowledged its indebtedness to Mr. Roberts and other members of the family who have made it possible for the settlement to use the homestead for the important branch of its work, which has made many friends.

SLEVIN'S CASE AGAIN PUT OVER A WEEK.

The hearing in the case of John Slevin, which was to have come up in the borough court tonight before Recorder Dolliver has been put over one week, owing to the fact that Michael Martin, the complainant, is unable to leave the hospital yet. Martin was run down by Slevin's automobile on Somerset street, Saturday night, July 2. His wheel was badly damaged and he was severely injured. Since then he has been in the Muhlenberg hospital. Slevin is held under a bond of $1,000 for his appearance.

At Proctor's.

Youna and Wardell, at Proctor's this week, do some clever juggling and balancing feats. Miss Ernie Wolf, a dainty singer has the audience with her from the moment she appears in "Meet me tonight in Dreamland," until she closes her act. Harris and Hillard, a bright and breezy pair, get a number of laughs with their catchy songs and comedy, and the Living Bronze Statues as presented by the Wolfheims are correct portrayals of well known pieces of sculpture. The bill this week is by far the best that has been seen in some time and combined with the low temperature maintained in the auditorium by the many electric fans, one can spend a pleasant evening there.

SPENT 31 YEARS ABED IN RAGE OF SILENCE

When Silas Hoffman died last Monday in Bedminster township he had spent nearly one-half of his sixty-seven years in silence, though his vocal organs were not affected, and in bed, though his health was excellent until shortly before his death. For years he had been known as the holder of the world's record for treasuring up a "grouch." Gossipers speculated on whether or not Hoffman would get up, or speak again, or die first. He died without saying a word, his silence having been maintained from the day, thirty-one years ago, upon which a mortgage was foreclosed on his farm.

Opinion was divided as to the real cause of Hoffman's withdrawal from human association. Some declared that he just hated the world and all its people and works. Others, and they were in the majority, held to the opinion that when the mortgage he had signed came back to gall him he determined never to speak again to any one who might suggest that he sign anything and to stay in bed because in bed he would be in less danger of using a pen.

During his long rest Hoffman ate only one meal a day. One of his sisters kept his house and waited on him, the township authorities paying her for his maintenance, as he was practically a pauper after he lost his farm. At one time he was regarded as being wealthy as wealth went in those days and in this place. Four brothers and two sisters survive him.

Ambassador Hill's Epigram.

Because Ambassador David Jayne Hill is an American, his countrymen have been much pleased that the epigram he coined evoked much applause when he said in his Fourth of July speech at the American celebration at Gumeau-on-Spree that America is a country with a "brief past and an immeasureable future." Plainfielders may be pardoned for especial pride in the remembrance that Ambassador Hill is a Plainfield boy the son of Rev. Daniel T. Hill, pastor of both Baptist churches and a power in his generation.

Baptists Had a Fine Day.

The Baptist excursionists had a fine day at Asbury Park, yesterday, the weather being ideal. They reached the shore about 10 o'clock and had a full day there, starting on the return trip at 7:20 and getting in Plainfield about 9 o'clock. The bathing was fine and thousands of people, including the excursionists, enjoyed a dip in the old ocean. Not an accident was reported among the Plainfielders and it is believed that from a financial point of view the outing was a success.

Luncheon for William Dutcher.

William Dutcher, of 990 Central avenue, president of the aNtional Association of Audubon Societies, was entertained at a luncheon yesterday in the City Lunch Club, 165 Broadway, New York, by a group of ornithologists, zoologists and authorities on wild life. Mr. Dutcher has just returned from the international ornithological congress in Berlin.

Eleven Boys Off for Camp.

Feeling jovial and light hearted, a party of eleven boys, members of the Y. M. C. A., left early this morning in charge of G. L. Listman, prysical director at the association, for a two weeks' outing at Camp Waywayanda, the association's outdoor home in Sussex county. This section will join the first section of five, who have been there for two weeks already, and both divisions will return July 29.

Another Picnic Tomorrow.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of Hope chapel will hold a picnic tomorrow afternoon at the "Notch," Scotch Plains. The picnicers will meet at the chapel at 3 c'clock and from there they will go by trolley to Scotch Plains. Supper will be served at the "Notch."

City Judgeship Petitions.

A petition for Francis J. Blatz for the Republican city judgeship nomination is being circulated today by Horace G. Adams. Another for V. W. Nash, Jr., is being circulated by Armstrong Mulford.

Fireman Joseph P. Clark, attached to the Second street house, leaves tomorrow on his vacation for a twelve-day trip to Reno, Nevada.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hazell, of Oak Tree, leave on July 23, for Antwerp, on the Steamship Kroonland. They secured passage through Mulford Estil's agency.

COURT OF PARDONS GRANTS THIRTY PAROLES

Trenton, July 15.—Among the thirty paroles granted by the Court of Pardons Wednesday were four to Essex county prisoners—Eugene P. Pinchback, Charles W. Rochefort, Philip Schilling and Saverio Sposaro. Pinchback, who is colored, was serving a three-year sentence. He was sentenced in September, 1908, after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery. It was alleged that he attempted to pass a bogus check for $10 upon the Goerke Company. Pinchback posed as the son of former Governor Pinckney S. B. Pinchback, of Louisiana. Rochefort was sentenced in 1906 for five years on a charge of larceny; Schilling was sentenced last year for breaking and entering, and had two years yet to serve. Sposaro's crime was assault and battery, and he was serving a year's term.

Twelve capital cases were before the court, and in only two, those of Samuel Shinn, of Mercer County, and John Delmonico, of Hudson county, was parole granted.

Shinn was convicted in 1910 for the murder of his employer, Thomas Applegate, a farmer of Ellisdale, near this city. Applegate was found one morning lying in one of the stalls of his stable, almost beneath the feet of a horse, which had never been known to show any vicious tendencies. At first, it was thought that death was accidental, but an examination of the bruises on the head and the body led to suspicion of foul play. There was much feeling in the neighborhood against Shinn on account of alleged trouble in the Applegate family, which was attributed to him. He was convicted and sentenced to eighteen years, his term expiring in 1914. Delmonico was serving thirty years and his term would have expired in 1920.

Antonio Sarionelli, the Passaic County man, who at the last session of the Court of Pardons was almost released from the State prison through a mistake in making out the parole papers, suffered another disappointment yesterday. He had been led to believe that his conduct and that of his counsel in rectifying the former mistake would operate to gain him a parole at this session of the court. His case was laid over, however. He is serving ten years for keeping a disorderly house.

Other paroles were as follows:

Atlantic County—Walker T. Parker, serving one year for taking an automobile out for a spin without consent of owner; John Stone, assault and battery.

Bergen—Albert Schaeffer, twelve years for rape.

Burlington—Wm. Lamb, breaking parole.

Camden—George K. Calver, one year for desertion of wife; James Walker, three years for burglary, and Edward White, seven years for atrocious assault and battery.

Hudson—Frank Geslenschenck, three years for burglary; Bernard Herman, three years for bigamy; Frederick Jaeger, two years for uttering; Joseph Pagano, twenty years for rape; William Ward, two years for uttering, and John Delmonico, serving thirty years for murder.

Hunterdon—John H. Beam, one year for larceny, and George Schuyler, nine months for high misdemeanor.

Monmouth—William Carver, two years for forgery; Robert Tyree, six years for grand larceny, while Wm. C. Jones was deceased before the court got to his case.

Morris—Frank Selvio, robbery.

Passaic—Alexander Chezanowski, two years for sending threatening letter; Joseph De Ball, twenty-four years for burglary; Edward Westervelt, five years for burglary.

Salem—Wm. Denelsbeck, twelve years for assault and battery and attempt to kill.

Somerset—Salvatore Sferra, four years for 'ntent to kill.

SOME CENSUS RETURNS.

The population of Peoria, Ill., according to the thirteenth census, is 66,950, an increase of 10,850 over 1900.

East St. Louis, Ill., has almost doubled in population Tuesday giving that city 58,547 inhabitants, against 29,655 in 1900.

Belleville, Ill., has increased from 17,484 in 1900 to 21,122 in 1910, and St. Clair county, which contains both East St. Louis and Belleville, has grown from 86,685 ten years ago to 119,870 in 1910.

Census returns show that Enid, Okla., has grown from 10,087 in 1910. Garfield county, which contains Enid, has increased in the same period from 28,300 to 33,050.

Auto Runs Down Old Man.

Elizabeth, July 15.—While working on Elizabeth avenue shortly before noon yesterday, Stephen Walsh, an old employe of the Elizabeth Street Department, was run down by an automobile. He was severely bruised and perhaps hurt internally. He is seventy-one years old and resides at 75 Little Smith street, Elizabethport. He was removed to the Alexian Hospital.

ELIZABETH OPENS FIRST PLAYGROUND.

Elizabeth, July 15.—In the presence of the Playground Commissioners and a number of city officials, the first public playground was formally opened late yesterday on the grounds of Public School No. 1, East Jersey street, between Second and Third streets.

A few minutes after the ceremonies the ground was thronged with school children, all eager to make the initial use of the first playground which Elizabeth has provided for them.

During August the grounds will be opened to any one for inspection. Those present yesterday included Mayor Victor Mravlag, Superintendent of Schools Richard E. Clement, President of the Board of Education Charles W. Wenke, Playground Commissioners Benjamin H. Campbell, Robert B. Cissel and Walter B. Timms.

Laborer Left Fortune.

Mendham, July 15.—Michael Flanagan, a laborer on the estate of former Governor Murphy, at $1.75 a day, has received notice that he has been left $50,000 by his brother-in-law, John Hagan, who kept a saloon in Brooklyn.

CHAPTER VII.

The Hour of Vengeance.

For perhaps 20 seconds after the last echoes of the gun had rolled through the forest the girl lay passive in Nathaniel's arms, so close that he could feel her heart beating against his own and her breath sweeping his face. Then there came a pressure against his breast, a gentle resistance of Marion's half conscious form, and when she had awakened from her partial swoon he was holding her in the crook of his arm. It had all passed quickly, the girl had rested against him only so long as he might have held a dozen breaths and yet there had been all of a lifetime in it for Nathaniel Plum, a cycle of joy that he knew would remain with him forever. But there was something bittersweet in the thought that she was conscious of what he had done, something of humiliation as well as gladness, and still not enough of the first to make him regret that he had kissed her, that he had kissed her mouth and her eyes. He loved her, and he was glad that in those passing moments he had betrayed himself. For the first time he noticed that her face was scratched and that the sleeves of her thin waist were torn to shreds; and as she drew away from him, steadying herself with a hand on his arm, his lips were parched of words, and yet he leaned to her eagerly, everything that he would have said burning in the love of his eyes. Still irresolute in her faintness the girl smiled at him, and in that smile there was gentle accusation, the sweetness of forgiveness, and measureless gratitude, and it was yet light enough for him to see that with these there had come also a flush into her cheeks and a dazzling glow into her eyes.

"Neil has escaped!" she breathed. "And you—"

"I was going back to you, Marion!" He spoke the words hardly above a whisper. The beautiful eyes so close to him drew his secret from him before he had thought. "I am going to take you from the island!"

With his words there came again that sound of a great gun rolling from the direction of St. James. With a frightened cry the girl staggered to her feet, and as she stood swaying unsteadily, her arms half reached to him, Nathaniel saw only mortal dread in the whiteness of her face.

"Why didn't you go? Why didn't you go with Neil?" she moaned. Her breath was coming in sobbing excitement. "Your ship is—at—St. James!"

"Yes, my ship is at St. James, Marion!" His voice was tremulous with triumph, with gladness, with a tenderness which he could not control. He put an arm half round her waist to support her trembling form and to his joy she did not move away from him. His hand was buried in the richness of her loose hair. He bent until his lips touched her silken tresses. "Neil has told me everything—about you," he added softly. "My ship is bombarding St. James, and I am going to take you from the island!"

Not until then did Marion free herself from his arm and then so gently that when she stood facing him he felt no reproof. No longer did shame send a flush into his face. He had spoken his love, though not in words, and he knew that the girl understood him. It did not occur to him in these moments that he had known this girl for only a few hours, that until now a word had never passed between them. He was conscious only that he had loved her from the time he saw her through the king's window, that he had risked his life for her, and that she knew why he had leaped into the arena at the whipping-post.

The words she spoke now came like a dash of cold water in his face.

"Your ship is not bombarding St. James, Captain Plum!" she exclaimed. Darkness hid the terror in her face, but he could hear the tremble of it in her voice. "The Typhoon has been captured by the Mormons and those guns are—guns of triumph—and not—" She caught her breath in a convulsive sob. "I want you to go—I want you to go—with Neil!" she pleaded.

"So Casey is taken!"

He spoke slowly, as if he had not heard her last words. For a moment he stood silent, and as silently the girl stood and watched him. She guessed the despair that was raging in his heart, but when he spoke to her she could detect none of it in his voice.

"Casey is a fool," he said, unconsciously repeating Obadiah's words. "Marion, will you come with me? Will you leave the island—and join your brother?"

The hope that had risen in his heart was crushed as Marion drew farther away from him.

"You must go alone," she replied. With a powerful effort she steadied her voice. "Tell Neil that he has been condemned to death. Tell him that—if he loves me—he will not return to the island."

[illegible] distance she saw his [illegible] like shadows toward her.

"And you—"

Her voice was low, so low that he [illegible] hardly hear the words she [illegible] but its sweetness thrilled him.

"And you—if you love me—will do this thing for me. Go to Neil. Save his life for me!"

She had come to him through the gloom, and in the luster of the eyes that were turned up to him Nathaniel saw again the power that swayed his soul.

"You will go?"

"I will save your brother—if I can!"

"You can—you can—" she breathed. In an ecstasy of gratitude she seized one of his hands in both of her own. "You can save him!"

"For you—I will try."

"For me—"

She was so close that he could feel the throbbing of her bosom. Suddenly he lifted his free hand and brushed back the thick hair from her brow and turned her face until what dim light there still remained of the day glowed in the beauty of her eyes. "I will keep him from the island if I can," he said, looking deep into them, "and as there is a God in heaven I swear that you—"

"What?" she urged, as he hesitated.

"That you shall not marry Strang!" he finished.

A cry welled up in the girl's throat. Was it of gladness? Was it of hope? She sprang back a pace from Nathaniel and with clenched hands waited breathlessly, as if she expected him to say more.

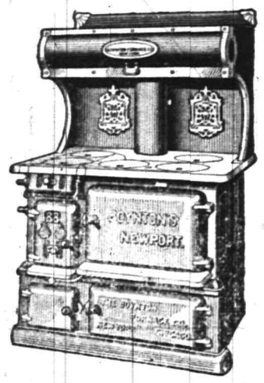
A Kitchen Necessity—



BOYNTON'S
Single Oven
Newport Range

Undoubtedly, Mrs. Housewife, you know the *dis*advantages of the ordinary kitchen range, but do you know the *ad*vantages of the famous Boynton Single Oven NEWPORT Range?

We haven't space for the whole story, but will tell you part; and first—as a cooker, the "NEWPORT" is the "best yet." Its design is classical (see cut) with smooth, perfect castings and highly finished nickel parts. This means a clean stove and less kitchen work.

Some cooks like the fire box on the right side of the oven, some on the left—"NEWPORTS" are fitted both ways. "NEWPORT" dampers are convenient—the "NEWPORT" water back is large and effective. Every good feature of other ranges is incorporated in the "NEWPORT" and some that are exclusive. Don't buy a range until you see the Boynton man in your town and learn about "NEWPORT" Ranges.

ELKS, HEADS HIGH, STRUT IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., July 14.—Before an immense crowd the Elks' parade marched from 10.30 to 12.40 yesterday, a brilliant climax to the biggest convention week in the city's history. About 300,000 persons witnessed the spectacle.

Heading the parade was the drill corps of Detroit Lodge, No. 34, then came a corps of marshals, and next a feature that brought great applause, New York Lodge, No. 1, the premier Elk organization. The oldest Elk banner in the world flapped above them. It bore the date "February 16, 1868."

Following the crack fife and drum corps of Brooklyn Lodge, No. 22, in natty gray, its big delegation marched behind.

Bedford City, Va., is not to lose the National Home of the Elks, after all. The proposal to abandon the home, remodel it or change its location was thrashed out in a special session of the grand lodge, with a result that a majority of the members voted to continue the home where it is, and voted $7,500 to make temporary improvements to it.

The first prize for women making the best appearance in the parade, an automobile, was awarded by the judges to the ladies of Cincinnati delegation, who appeared in two rose-covered floats, preceded by Mrs. "Garry" Herrmann, wife of the grand exalted ruler.

For the best appearance in line, Grand Rapids won $500 in cash prize.

The most novel uniforms were those worn by Boston Lodge, No. 10, they taking $500 along with the honor.

Daniel O'Connell, of Owosso, the oldest Elk, aged 105 years, insisted on leaving his carriage and walking past the reviewing stand amid tumultuous cheers.

The parade was most complete. There was the oldest Elk, the smallest and the largest Elk and the most ancient lodge of Elks—New York—and they made a kaleidoscope of color, faces and costumes.

PERSONAL.

Miss Nettie Rosch, of White Plains, N. Y., has been visiting relatives in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. William M. Stillman, of West Seventh street, are sojourning at Deerland, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, of Stelle avenue, are spending the summer at West Harwich, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Clifton, of Union street, are spending the summer at Patchogue, L. I.

Mrs. Philip B. Macintyre, of West Eighth street, will leave tomorrow on the Steamship New York for Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Cottrell and children, of Central avenue, are occupying their cottage at Tolland, Mass.

Archibald Davie, cashier at Timbo's restaurant, has returned from a sojourn at Ram's Horn Camp, Lake Hopatcong.

Mrs. Howard McWilliams and children, of Hillside avenue, left yesterday on the Steamship George Washington for Europe. They will be abroad all summer.

Joseph W. Gavett, Jr., a student at Cornell University, is learning the practical side of mechanical engineering by working at the Pond Tool Machine Works during the summer.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will leave on Wednesday, August 3 on the Steamship Teutonic for a trip abroad. He will return in September.

Among the automobile tourists making the Ideal tour are Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Booth, of Watchung avenue, who were registered on Tuesday at Poland Springs, Maine, and on Wednesday at the Hotel Wentworth, Newcastle, N. H.

FIREMEN UP IN ARMS.

Rahway, July 15.—A lively session is promised at the meeting of the fire and water committee of the Common Council tonight, at which the chief and assistant engineers and representatives of all the companies in the city will be present to consider the dividing of the city into fire districts which is protested against by a majority of the firemen.

They do not take at all kindly to being dictated to and told how to manage fires by the fire and water committee, not a member of which has ever had a day of actual experience or served a single day as a member of the department.

Huckleberries Scarce.

Atlantic City, July 15.—Atlantic County pickers say the huckleberry crop is the poorest in many years, the pickers getting barely enough to pay them for their work.

Rev. F. St. John Fitch, of Park avenue, will be one of the vacation supplies at the First Baptist church, during the absence of Pastor Chambliss, who goes abroad.

CRANFORD TO PLAY PLAINFIELD'S TEAM

The Cranford Baseball Club will come to Plainfield tomorrow as real contenders for the county championship honors now held by the Plainfield Baseball Club. For two years Cranford has been trying to get a game with Manager Dorflinger's colts, but the latter has not until the present time taken the nine seriously. Cranford has been winning practically all of its games this season and believes it is entitled to recognition.

Farrell, of Elizabeth, a twirler of much ability, will throw them over and Seery, also of Elizabeth, who was a member of the Plainfield aggregation, will be at the receiving end. Lyan, who will cover center field, formerly played on the Seton Hall College team and is said to be a crack-a-jack, and the other players are also well-known.

The contest will start promptly at 3:30 o'clock and John Payne will handle the indicator. The teams will lineup as follows:

Plainfield—MacLaughlin, p; Nelson, c; Barnes, 1b; B. Martin, 2b; Carlstrom, ss; Emery, 3b; Boyd, cf; Schott, lf; Mullin, rf.

Cranford—Seery, c; Farrell, p; Lyan, cf; Knowles, ss; McMahon, Schumbeck, rf; Steiner, 1b; Lawrence, lf; Harsell, 3b.

Y. M. C. A. Vs. Metuchen.

While the Plainfield team is trying conclusions with the Cranford nine on Crescent Oval, tomorrow afternoon, the Y. M. C. A. boys will be playing at Metuchen. The latter aggregation has an idea that it can defeat Plainfield, and Manager Listman is willing to give Metuchen a chance. The locals are going strong just now, every member of the team being in fine condition. A number of rooters will accompany the association boys.

Y. M. C. A. to Play Metuchen.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will go to Metuchen tomorrow to play the Metuchen nine. The game will be called at 3:45.

Miss Lucille Lederer is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Vreeland in Easton, Pa.

Mrs. C. R. Strong and family, of Belvidere avenue, have gone to Palmer, Mass., for the summer.

T. E. Currin, Jr., cashier of the First National Bank, will take his vacation the last two weeks in this month.

WILSON FOR GOVERNOR

Princeton University President Would Accept Democratic Nomination.

OTHERS WANT THE PLACE.

State Senator George Silzer and Mayor Otto Wittpenn Are Making an Aggressive Campaign for the Nomination.

Responding to the urgent appeals of a number of Democratic leaders of this State, Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, has consented to become a passive candidate for the party nomination for Governor this year. In consenting, it is understood, Dr. Wilson imposed certain conditions.

Principal among these conditions was that it must be made clear to the Princeton president that the sentiment of the voters of New Jersey is so strongly in favor of him that the situation shall not assume the aspect of a fight on his part to secure the nomination.

Since a conference last Tuesday in New York, at which Dr. Wilson gave his passive consent, events have taken place that cast doubt upon the ability of those men who assumed to know the party sentiment to prove to Princeton's president that what they said was true.

The lure of bringing to the coming political contest such a man as Dr. Wilson has not been attractive enough to at least some of the other men, who have publicly announced themselves candidates for the nomination, to induce them to smother their own ambition in that direction and come out and shout for the learned head of Princeton. State Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex, and Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City, both made positive knowledge of Dr. Wilson's tacit consent to become a candidate, that they are still active aspirants for the nomination and propose to remain in the race.

Dr. Wilson personally confirmed yesterday the truth of the unofficial announcement that he was in conference Tuesday with a number of Democrats and that the subject discussed was the opportunity to win success in the State this year with himself as the candidate for Governor. Dr. Wilson then announced that he would make a formal statement of his position in the present situation.

Dr. Wilson admitted that he had learned from Mayor Wittpenn that the latter did not propose to retire as a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination. He did not see that this fact made any difference to him in view of his passive attitude on the question of the nomination.

Mayor Wittpenn was the guest of Dr. Wilson Thursday at Lyrne. On his return yesterday Mr. Wittpenn declared that he spent a very pleasane day with the President of Princeton. They discussed the Gubernatorial situation in New Jersey. Mayor Wittpenn says he learned that Mr. Wilson is not a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He also learned other things, he said, about the way the political game is being played in New Jersey, things that he had suspected.

"I was nicely entertained by Mr. Wilson," Mayor Wittpenn said, "and I feel that I am accurately informed now as to the position that Mr. Wilson takes in the matter of the nomination. He had been misinformed as to my candidacy. He had been told that I was ready to withdraw."

"What truth was there in that story that you, Senator Silzer and Frank S. Katzenbach were all three to withdraw to leave the field open to Mr. Wilson?"

"So far as I am concerned, that story is entirely false. I entered the race at the request of many Democrats from all over the State, and I intend to stay in it until the Democratic State convention.

"There is no promise or price that will induce me to withdraw. From today I shall start to fight to elect delegates to the State convention who are pledged to me from every election district in Hudson county.

"I want this statement made as emphatic and as public as possible, so that my friends will know that I am in this fight to stay to a finish. I am more confident than ever that when the primaries are over that I will have a decisive majority of the delegates from Hudson county, as well as the delegates from other parts of the State.

"I am in earnest and I believe that I will be the next candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket."

Mayor Wittpenn refused to make any further statement as to his talk with Mr. Wilson, but it is understood from friends that he heard

CAN THIS BE TRUE? COP FOR FANWOOD TWP.

The Fanwood Township Committee, at its meeting, last night decided to engage a night policeman for the village, the action being the result of several escapades in that vicinity during the past few months. A delegation of citizens appeared before the committee favoring the proposition and when the vote was taken there was not a dissenting vote.

For many years the township has lacked proper protection and it is believed that the presence of an officer at night will have a good effect on the whole community; that as soon as the people learned that the authorities meant business, the community would become orderly and quiet.

The depredations at the Baptist parsonage several weeks ago, as well as the pranks in the village on the eve of the Fourth have had a tendency to bring the matter to a head. Numerous "growler" parties have also had a bad effect in the village, and whoever gets the appointment will have to subdue these things. A majority of the residents favor the appointment of a marshal and as soon as a suitable man can be found the committee will make the appointment.

DR. CHAMBLISS TO PREACH WHILE ON A TRIP ABROAD

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, will close his house the last week in July and on the Sunday, August 7, will preach in New England. On Wednesday, August 10, he will leave on the Steamship Oceanic for a trip abroad. While away he will preach in Glasgow, Northampton and Bristol, returning to this city between September 15 and 20. The supplies at his church during his absence will be as follows:

July 31, Rev. Dr. Pogson, of New York City; August 7, Rev. Dr. G. W. Nicholson, of Bridgeport, Conn.; 14, Rev. Dr. Bergen D. Stelle, of Clarksburg, W. Va.; 21, Rev. Dr. McBride, of New York City; 28, Rev. Dr. G. W. Nicholson, of Bridgeport, Conn.; September 4, Rev. Dr. S. J. Skevington, of Newark; 11, Rev. F. St. John Fitch, of this city. There will be no evening services during August.

WHY WATER PRESSURE BECOMES LOW AT TIMES

The Plainfield-Union Water Company, today revoked twenty permits for the use of lawn sprinklers throughout the city, and has started a crusade against residents who pay the fee of $5 a year for the privilege of using a hose during certain contract hours, and then let the water run any old hours. The hours fixed by the company for the use of a hose in the contracts are from 6 to 9 o'clock in the morning and from 5 to 8 o'clock in the evening.

An investigation has shown that people who have a permit to use a hose turn on the water during the afternoon and let the water run until almost midnight and then start the water a running the first thing in the morning. With so many sprinklers in use throughout the city and at all times of the day and night, it is not to be wondered at that the water pressure is low; besides it is a great waste of water.

Another thing that the company has turned its attention to is the person who uses a sprinkler and has no permit for doing so. The company has evidence aaginst a large number of such people and steps will be taken to stop the practice. With such a large territory to cover it has been a little difficult for the company to keep track of every one who uses city water, but it has a system now in force which simplifies matters and makes detection easy.

Funeral of Mrs. Secor.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Secor, wife of Micajah Secor, was held from the late home, 866 Clinton avenue, yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives. Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church, of which Mrs. Secor was a member, conducted the service. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Alice Rimmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Rimmer, of Essex street, is visiting friends in Rutherford. She will return here next Saturday.

BATTLEFIELD CAMP LIFE

Co. K Boys are Having a Good Time These Days at Gettysburg.

SOME ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Doings at Camp Instruction Gathered by "A Staff Correspondent" for The Daily Press Readers.

The members of Company K are enjoying their experiences at the "Camp of Instruction," Gettysburg, Pa., to the limit. Thursday was an ideal day. In the morning the second regiment was out for a long hike and returned to camp feeling fine. They used blank ammunition for the first time since arriving at camp, gradually preparing for the manouvers which take place today. What place the Second Regiment will take is not known as the plans were not completed yesterday.

The boys had a short drill Thursday afternoon, lasting about an hour, after which they were off until 7.15 o'clock in the evening, when their feet were inspected by the surgeon. None of Co. K's men was found to have had bad feet.

The 29th Infantry's band gave a concert in the evening in front of Brig. Gen. Collins' headquarters, which was greatly enjoyed by the officers and men. The guard detail for yesterday was as follows: Privates Sharp and Stephens. Yesterday the company had its longest hike.

The Dutch army of Co. K is sadly crippled. Captain Hahn has a lame back from raising a pick and shovel under command of Captain Browning of the sanitary squad. Private Harrison is also badly crippled as he is not accustomed to anything but "hot air" when at home. Private Keplar has a sore hoof.

Major General William Hartpence is now known at camp as "Solemn Bill." Anyone that can make Bill laugh is presented with a bag of tobacco. He seems to have a grouch and does not recover until after the work is completed at night.

Corporal Archie Niles had a change of heart and got shaved. It was pretty near time. Private Herbert Adams will leave camp today for home, being compelled to get back to work. We do not know what George Bowe will do without him, as the two were inseparable.

Yesterday the boys were out for a tactical problem, consisting of an attack of the regiment upon a battalion, which was represented by one Company K. This battalion was conveying a wagon train from Bonnersville to Gettysburg, and was forced to build trenches for fortification midway between the two towns.

During the seige, Private George Bowe was sent out as a spy dressed in a jumper and jeans with a pail for blackberries, representing a farmer. He did credit to the uniform he wore.

Sergeant Manning was sent out with a squad to capture some men, a detail from the 12th Regiment, Pa., guardsmen, non-combatants, but soldiers, after capture, and relieved of their ammunition, much to their discredit, they were sent back to camp.

Yesterday the camp was given a treat by Sergeant Apgar, the bill being chicken, peas, potatoes, rice pudding and coffee.

The sides for today's manoeuvers were changed last night: Brigadier General Collins, of New Jersey, will command Second U. S. Infantry, Twenty-ninth U. S. Infantry, Second N. J. Infantry; Third N. J. Infantry, First Battery, Third U. S. Field artillery, Battery B, of N. J., field artillery, Fifteenth U. S. cavalry, one company of U. S. engineers and a half company of U. S. Ambulance corps.

Brigadier General Dougherty, of Pennsylvania, will command Ninth Penna Infantry, Twelfth Penna. Infantry, First Troop, Philadelphia City cavalry, Second Troop, Philadelphia city cavalry, Troop A, of Penna., a company of U. S. engineers, half of an ambulance corps, and two batteries of field artillery.

The morning up to 11 o'clock will be taken up in manoeuvering for positions. At 11, one hour's rest will be allowed and the haversack rations will be cooked and eaten. The remainder of the day will be devoted to hard fighting. Captain William J. Walsh, of Company D., Second Regiment, N. G. N. J., is officer of the day.

The regiment will leave Gettysburg on the first section of the special train at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The other sections will leave at noon. The trip will take from four to eight hours.

WANTS CITY JUDGESHIP.

Harry C. Runyon, a local assessor, is another candidate for the Republican primary nomination for the city judgeship, to succeed William N. Runyon, who has announced that he will not accept a nomination inasmuch as he is a candidate for the Republican congressional nomination in the fifth district. H. C. Runyon was born in this city on April 16, 1869. He is a son of Calvin Runyon, who was connected with the "late" Plainfield Times and was a pioneer publisher here. He received his education in the local public schools and thereafter learned the printer's art. In 1888, he began the study of law with the firm of Morrow and Schenck, of Newark. Later he was a student in the office of E. W. and Nelson Runyon, in this city, and thereafter in Feed and Coddington's office here. He was admitted to the bar in February, 1892. In 1897, Mayor Fisk appointed him as assessor for the Fourth ward, which position he still holds. He is prominent in the Park Avenue Baptist church and in several fraternal orders.

BLAZE AT A GARAGE; FAULT OF EMPLOYE

The carelessness of Frank Miller, employed at the garage of the Barfuss Auto Company, on Somerset street, in failing to turn out the lamps on a machine while filling a gasolene tank, was directly responsible for a fire at the garage, last night, which threatened a loss of thousands of dollars, as there were over a dozen autos in the place at the time.

Miller was engaged in filling Geo. Voehl's Pope-Toledo car with gasolene, and in some way the liquid became ignited. In an instant the car was enveloped in flames. It was then that Miller displayed some heroism and banishing all thoughts of personal safety, rushed into the flames and screwed the cap on the gasolene tank, thereby preventing an explosion. His arms and hands were frightfully burned, but he did not stop until he had succeeded in running the car out of the building.

Simultaneously, alarms of fire were in from Front and Somerset street, and the borough, and both departments responded quickly. It required but a few minutes to put out the flames with a couple of extinfiuishers. Miller's burns were of such a character that he was obliged to seek the services of a physician, and it will be several days before he will be able to return to work.

The automobile garage is located in the same building with the L. M. French carriage factory, and Miller's heroic work doubtless saved the entire building and contents from destruction. The damage to Mr. Vohel's machine will aggregate several hundred dollars.

EX-PATROLMAN McNAMARA PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY.

Former Patrolman Patrick J. Mcnamara, of 124 Central avenue, who has been ill for the past two months died yesterday at his home. Mr. McNamara is survived by his wife, Mrs. May Huth McNamara, formerly of New York; his mother, a sister Catharine, and five brothers, William, Michael, Daniel, David and Thomas.

The funeral will be held from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Impudence Personified.

Herman A. Weber, of 538 West Front street, reported to the police department this morning that a man whom he does not know drove on to his field at Rock avenue and Front street, yesterday afternoon and stole a load of hay. Only a meagre description of the horses and wagon was given to the police.

Mrs. William Greene, of 257 Somerset street, is visiting in Brooklyn.

HEALTH LAWS ENFORCED

Campaign for Cleanliness Being Waged by City Officials.

MORE ARREST MADE TODAY.

Section of Law Relating to Exposure of Foodstuff Printed for Guidance of Dealers.

The section of the law under which the Board of Health may prosecute dealers in fruits, vegetables and meats is found in the laws of 1909, chapter 231, which reads as follows:

"The floors, sidewalks, ceilings, furniture, receptacles, implements and machinery of every establishment, or place where food intended for distribution or sale is produced, manufactured, prepared, packed, stored, sold or distributed, and all cars, trucks and vehicles used in the transportation of such food products shall at no time be kept in an unclean or unsanitary condition. All food intended for distribution or sale in the process of production, manufacture, preparation, packing, storing, sale, distribution or transportation shall be securely protected from flies, dust, dirt, and, so far as the same is possible, by the use of all reasonable means, from all other foreign or injurious contamination; the refuse, dirt and waste products subject to decomposition or fermentation incident to the production, manufacture, preparation, packing, storing, sale, distribution or transportation of food, shall be removed daily. The clothing worn by all operatives, employes, clerks and other persons while engaged in work in any of the places where food intended for sale or distribution is produced, manufactured, prepared, packed, stored, sold, distributed or transported shall be in a clean condition at all times. No person shall transport any such food in such a manner that the purity or wholesomeness thereof shall be in anywise impaired."

Health Officer O'Brien is prosecuting the work of helping Plainfielders to obtain pure food, as well as prevent the disseminating of disease germs through the means of garbage. Several arrests were made yesterday and this morning three more men were arraigned before Judge Runyon for offenses against the statutes.

Louis Kornfield, of Spruce street, who received a suspended sentence yesterday for violating the garbage ordinance had to pay his original fine of $10 and in additional $2 for a second offense committed yesterday. The second fine was made small owing to the fact that the garbage was dumped without the knowledge of Mr. Kornfield.

William Carter, colored, and Sumner Randolph each had fines suspended over their heads for $10 each. Carter violated the garbage ordinance while Sumner was carting garbage without a license.

SERVICES FOR MRS. MARY A. FLYNN'S FUNERAL.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Mary A. Flynn, whose death occurred Wednesday, were held this morning at 8.15 from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Jerome W. Leary, at the Hotel Iroquois, and at 8.45 from St. Mary's Church. Father Hogan officiated at the church services where a requiem mass was said for the repose of her soul. Interment will be in New Haven, Conn.

Funeral of Anna Gray.

The funeral service of Anna Gray, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gray, was held yesterday afternoon from the home of the parents on Willever street. Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, officiated, and the burial was in Scotch Plains. The young girl's death was due to tuberculosis. She was first taken ill with whooping-cough, followed by scarlet fever and then lung trouble developed. She died Wednesday afternoon after an illness of four months.

Killed by Railroad Cars.

Michael Polok, 38 years old, a Slav employed at the crusher of the C. R. R. of N. J., fell from a dirt car at Lincoln, Thursday afternoon, and was instantly killed, when the car wheels passed over his body, cutting it almost in two. As far as could be ascertained, he leaves no relatives.

No Meetings Until September.

The W. C. T. U. has given up its Sunday and Thursday meetings until after September 1, when they will be resumed for the fall and winter.

BODY FOUND ON TRACK THAT OF J. C. ERSKINE

It was learned late yesterday afternoon that the dead body, which was found on the Grant avenue bridge at 6.45 yesterday morning, was that of John Calman Erskine, of 216 Pond place, a carriage trimmer employed by L. M. French, of Somerset street. He was 54 years old, and leaves a wife and three small children to mourn his loss.

Erskine was a man of steady habits. He was on his way to work when he met his end. He has been accustomed to use the railroad tracks as a short cut to his place of employment and was probably doing so yesterday morning. The manner in which he met his death is still a mystery, but it is thought that in stepping out of the way of one train, he was struck by another.

A sad feature of the case was the manner in which Erskine's wife was informed of her loss. A messenger from the L. M. French Co., who asked her why her husband had not come to work in the morning gave her the first tidings that something was wrong. Further investigation of the story that a man had been killed in the morning brought to her the information that the victim was her husband. The body will be taken to Montreal, Canada, for burial.

PUBLIC HEARING HELD ON PROPOSED ST. WORK

Mayor Charles J. Fisk gave a public hearing at his office last night on the several ordinance passed at the last meeting regarding the macadamizing of numerous streets, for which $30,000 worth of bonds are to be issued. His object for doing this was to give all interested an opportunity to speak on the subject before the ordinances received the signature of Mr. Fisk. There were just ten citizens present who are interested in the improvement, but their objections were of a minor nature and not considered sufficient for the Mayor to withhold his signature.

The objections were not directed toward any one street, but referred to thoroughfares throughout the city. Many of those preesnt, after listening to the Mayor's statement, agreed that the improvements would be desirable, especially as the ordinances include many streets that have never received much attention.

SEND RUNAWAY BOY TO AN INDUSTRIAL HOME

Cecil Smith, the 13-year-old runaway, who was picked up by Borough Chief Marshal Weiss Thursday afternoon, will be returned to the Industrial Home in Green Point, Brooklyn, this afternoon by Miss Phillips, of the charities department. This is the home from which he was taken by his aunt over a year ago and with whom he remained until he ran away.

Miss Phillips when asked if she thought there would be any prosecution of the aunt declared that she was of the opinion that there would not. She said she visited the aunt yesterday and that the aunt, who was of a highly nervous temperament, admitted that she worked the boy hard. Concerning the cuts on the boy's hand the aunt declared that the youngster had inflicted them himself, while cutting bread. Otherwise, she denied the tale of alleged cruelties.

That there will be no local prosecution is almost certain. Whether or not those in charge of the home from which Smith was taken will prosecute will be determined only after they have made an investigation, which they are certain to do.

Funeral of William J. Staats.

The funeral of William James Staats, son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Staats, was held from the home of the parents, at 4 o'clock, yesterday afternoon, and it was largely attended by relatives and friends, including many young friends of the departed. Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, officiated, reading appropriate Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a few remarks. The burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Miss Millard.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Millard, of East Second street, are parents of a girl, born to them this morning; a sister to their son, Colin. The little Miss weighs seven pounds.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE BELIEF

H. Coulson Fairchild, Head of Cult's Press Department, Makes Statement.

REPLIES TO REV. MR. BROEK.

Answers Questions Put to Him by Pastor of Trinity Reformed Church Regarding Christian Science Belief.

As a rebuttal to the replication filed by Jev. John Yonkers Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, to the answer made by H. Coulson Fairchild, of Passaic, to the former's sermon denouncing Christian Science Mr. Fairchild asks this paper to publish the following, and as the columns of The Daily Press are always open to its readers, his request is cheerfully complied with:

Upon reading the remarks of the Rev. Broek as published in The Daily Press of June 27, I note that he has asked several questions and also note upon a careful reading of the questions that he evidently assumes that Christiain Science teaches a number of things which it does not teach.

Our critic says, "Jesus healed the poor and he did not cater to the rich as a class." I reply that Christian Science does not cater to the rich as a class. The membership of the Christian Science church is made up of all classes. If our critic does not believe this statement let him attend any Wednesday evening or Sunday morning service at the Christian Science church and he will observe for himself that this statement is correct. The healing power of Christian Science extends to all.

In answer to the questions asked by Rev. Broek, I will reply in order as follows:

Question—"Why does not a Christian Scientist believe in the Atonement?"

Answer—Christian Scientists do believe in the Atonement. In "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mrs. Eddy, she deems the subject of such importance that about forty pages, one entire chapter, are devoted to the subject. The title of this chapter is "Atonement and Eucharist."

Question—"Why does not the celebrations of the Lord's Supper take place in a Christian Science church?"

Answer—From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," page 34, lines 5-9. "If Christ Truth has come to us in demonstration, no other commemoration is requisite, for demonstration is Immanuel, or God with us; and if a friend be with us, why need we memorials of that friend?" We also believe if all who had commemorated Jesus by material symbols had been willing to heal the sick as Jesues commanded as well as to preach the gospel, they would have revolutionized the world. Hence the communion ceremony would not be needed.

Question—"Why does a Christian Scientist believe the many Christs may still come?"

Answer—Christian Science does not so teach. For reference see page 497 of our text book, lines 5-8.

Question—"Why does not a Christian Scientist believe in the Apostles' Creed which Christians from almost Apostolic times have believed as containing the fundamental truths of Christianity?"

Answer—The Apostles' Creed and all other creeds are man made. They are not even found in the Bible. Quoting from Judge Ewing of Illinois he says, "There are numbers of creeds. They are all good, (if lived up to). To believe in a creed will do you no harm, but a mere belief in a creed (while it will do you no harm) will never do you one iota of good, unless lived up to. A belief in a creed has never healed one case of disease from Christ's time to ours."

Our critic remarks the Jesus said, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel." He ignores however the equally imperative command of Jesus to heal the sick. Preaching is easier than healing. We believe that if Jesus did not say in so many words, "Go and preach Christian Science," he did give all his followers a command to heal the sick which is virtually saying demonstrate Christianity. Rev. Broek says, "Whenever Jesus healed a man his sins were immediately forgiven." He has put the cart before the horse. Whenever a man's sins were forgiven he was immediately healed. Christian Science does teach that there is no real healing unless it includes the healing of sin. Jesus said of the man whom he healed before the Pharisees, "Whether is it easier to say unto the sick of the palsy (merely tell it to him) thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say to him arise and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth

In Buying a Piano How Long Do You Plan It Will Last?

A good Piano used as a Piano should be, will last a life-time.

Noticing our advertisements in the papers, people write us about our instruments.

Hallet & Davis Piano Co.:

My piano was bought in 1889. I have used it from six to eight hours a day, practicing and teaching; also for orchestra rehearsals. It is difficult to make people believe it is so old.

Sincerely,
ARABELLA B. TAYLOR,
Boston, Mass.

Is This Piano Then Expensive?

Hallet & Davis Pianos are not "cheap," yet the price is very moderate, and within the means of the average music lover. Our selling plan enables one to own a Hallet & Davis and pay for it on easy terms. It is the most satisfactory piano in all ways, quality, durability and price.

RUSHING LINE TO LAKE HOPATCONG

Morristown, July 16.—The Morris County Traction is fast completing what will be termed the "scenic railway of New Jersey" in its trolley road in Morris and Union counties. For scenery there is no section of the State that can compare with Morris county in beauty and the trolley company's road from Morristown to Lake Hopatcong, winding in and out among the hills and through the country towns affords some of the finest views to be seen anywhere. The link between Morris Plains and Mt. Tabor is being pushed to completion and will be in operation within a month.

The line is graded through to the Powder Mill gulch, Mt. Tabor. Over this gulch will be thrown a steel viaduct. The concrete piers for this bridge are in place and the steel work is beginning to arrive from the mills. Tiers are strewn along the right-of-way, which is private property, owned by the company, while rails are delivered near by and the poles are up for nearly the whole distance. Several hundred men are at work doing the grading and a stone crusher has been set up in the rock cut at the Sire place, near Morris Plains, turning out the ballast for the tracks. The tracks for the whole route, except, where they are upon the public streets, are graded and are rock ballasted.

At Dover adjacent to the power plant the company is planning the erection of a mammoth car barn and shops, to take in the area between the Rockaway River and the street and to extend for several hundred feet in length. The rolling stock of the company is being increased. Owing to its long trips the company is not using the ordinary type of open cars, deeming them unsafe. In their place the company is buying the semi-convertible type, five of which cars will be received July 20.

Another innovation the company is about to install is a private telephone system along its lines. The main office in Morristown will be put in touch with every powerhouse and terminal of the company, as well as with every car, for each car is to be equipped with a telephone set which may be cut in on the line at a half-dozen points in each mile of track, as well as at each switch.

If a car is five minutes or more late at any point the crew will have to so report and the reason for the delay to the dispatcher in the main office at Morristown. This dispatcher will have control of all the cars of the line, directing their operation.

Though not yet completed, so far as the blasting goes, the line from Denville to Boonton is being operated, a car being run between these two points. When the blasting and the work of setting up the new generator is finished, which will take about two weeks more, cars will be run through from Boontown to the Bertrand Island dock, at Lake Hopatcong without change.

From Morristown to Bertrand Island the company will charge 40 cents each way, the railroad fare for the same distance being $1.40. But next summer special tickets will be put on sale at a reduced rate for the round trip.

The work of building the line from Morristown through to Summit is held up at present waiting for Morristown, Madison and Chatham to pass ordinances granting the necessary franchises. In each of these towns the ordinances have reached third reading and will come up for final action within two or three weeks. At Chatham the trolley company will begin work in the fall on a power plant of about the same capacity as the Dover plant, to supply current for its cars between Morristown and Elizabeth.

Through Morristown from the Morris Plains station to a point on Hill street just beyond the Lackawanna railroad station, the company's line uses the public street, the same course being followed through the towns along its lines, but between the towns the trolley forsakes the public highway and runs over a private right-of-way, permitting a speed of thirty to forty miles per hour being attained. This feature permits a running time of one hour between Morristown and Lake Hopatcong, and when completed Summit and Elizabeth will be able to trolley to the lake within two hours. The company also has a branch line from Morris Plains to the State Insane Hospital.

Has Barmaids; Is Fined.

Hoboken, July 16.—Herman Hutz, saloonkeeper, of 119 Hudson street, was fined $50 by Recorder McGovern for violating the "barmaid ordinance." The case against him was vigorously pressed by the city authorities, represented by Assistant Corporation Attorney Horace L. Allen.

Our July Clearance Sale Is Rich in Money Savings

Every day witnesses unusual value-giving. We are eager to clear the decks and willingly cut prices down to lowest point. Buying is brisk, big and enthusiastic—because there exists no equal opportunity of obtaining desired merchandise at such small cost.

A big manufacturer of muslin underwear in need of orders to keep his factory going during the dull period called on our syndicate of buyers in New York with a proposition that he would make up any garments at actual cost of manufacture to keep his work force together. The proposition was submitted to us and all got together, we bought and bought at a low figure as the following list of items that have just arrived will show. These are well made undermuslins, clean and fresh, cut full in every way. The lowered prices does not affect the quality.

Special Election Notice

TO THE LEGAL VOTERS OF THE FIRST ELECTION DISTRICT OF EACH OF FIRST, SECOND, THIRD, AND FOURTH WARDS OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD.

Public Notice is hereby given that in accordance with the resolutions adopted by the Common Council of the City of Plainfield on the 20th day of June, 1910, and approved by the Mayor on the same date, of which the following is a true copy:

Whereas, there have been presented to the Common Council four several petitions in writing, the first signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the legal voters of the first election district of the first ward, the second signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the legal voters of the first election district of the second ward, the third signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the legal voters of the first election district of the third ward, and the fourth signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the legal voters of the first election district of the fourth ward, as shown by the registry lists for the last preceding general election, all of said petitions protesting against the use of voting machines at elections to be thereafter held in said several election districts, the said petitions all conform to the requirements of Section 1 of Chapter 163 of the Laws of New Jersey for the year 1908;

Resolved, That the Common Council do hereby order that a Special Election be held in each of said election districts on Tuesday, the 26th day of July, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, being not less than thirty days nor more than sixty days from the date of this order, to determine upon the retention or rejection of said voting machines in said election districts respectively.

Resolved, That said Special Election be held in all respects as directed by the Act of the Legislature aforesaid, and be held at the usual places of holding elections in said election districts respectively, and that public notice thereof shall be given by the City Clerk by putting up advertisements signed by said Clerk, in at least ten of the most public places within each of said election districts at least eight days prior to and within thirty days next preceding the day of said Special Election, making known the time, place and purpose of holding the same, and also by publishing said advertisement in two newspapers published or circulating in said city, namely, The Daily Press and the Plainfield Courier-News, being the official newspapers in said City, for at least two insertions within the time aforesaid.

a special election will be held in each of the said election districts, that is to say in the first election district of each of the four wards in the City of Plainfield, on Tuesday, the 26th day of July, 1910, at the usual places of holding elections in the said election districts respectively, to determine upon the retention or rejection of the voting machines referred to in the said resolutions.

The said Special Election shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of "An Act to Regulate Elections, Revision of 1898," approved April fourth, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-eight, and the several acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, so far as the same may be applicable except as modified by Chapter 163 of the Laws of the State of New Jersey for the year 1908.

The vote shall be by ballot, which shall have thereon legibly printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, with black ink or pencil either the words "For the voting machine," or the words "Against the voting machine." The ballots shall be deposited in a ballot box, and need not be what is known as "official ballots." At such election no proposition shall be submitted except the foregoing. There shall be no registration for said election, but the board of election shall procure and use a certified copy of the register of voters used at the last preceding general election, and no person shall be entitled to vote whose name does not appear on said register, unless said voter shall appear in person before said board and satisfy said board by affidavit that said voter has acquired the right of suffrage in said election district since said registration was made.

The District Board of Elections shall perform the duties required of them by the said several acts of the Legislature.

The polls for such election shall be held at the usual place of holding elections in the said Election Districts, that is to say:

First Ward, First District, No. 138 North Avenue;

Second Ward, First District, No. 319 Watchung Avenue;

Third Ward, First District, Charles J. Fisk's barn on the southwesterly side of Arlington Avenue between West Seventh and West Eighth Streets; and shall open at six o'clock in the morning and close at seven o'clock in the evening and shall be kept open during the whole day of election between the hours aforesaid; provided the Board of Election may adjourn such election from one o'clock until two o'clock in the afternoon or for such shorter time between those hours as they shall see fit.

Fourth Ward, First District, No. 204 West Second Street;

By order of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., July 11, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

To Provide for the Construction of a Further Addition to the System of Sewerage Already Constructed in the City of Plainfield.

Whereas, There has been constructed in said city a system of sewarege, and such action in relation thereto has from time to time been taken as is set forth in the several ordinances of said city relating thereto, and particularly the ordinances respectively entitled, "An Ordinance to Provide for the Construction of an Addition to the System of Sewerage already constructed in the City of Plainfield," approved November 6, 1897, and "An Ordinance to provide for the Improvement of Sewage Disposal Works, Beds and Appurtenances, of the City of Plainfield," approved April 4, 1901, to which several ordinances reference is hereby made for greater certainty; and,

Whereas, In the opinion of the Common Council the public good requires that a further addition, as herein described, to the system of sewerage already constructed, should be now constructed in and for said city under the provisions of the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided, and the Common Council has so determined and does hereby so determine; therefore,

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that a further addition to the system of sewerage already constructed as aforesaid, be constructed in and for said city, under the provisions of the acts of the Legislature above referred to, including the necessary force mains, air mains, operating vaults, buildings, wells, motors, compressors, receivers and pumps, lifts or ejectors, with all the appurtenances required to complete the same, of the character, description, dimensions and material shown on plans adopted by the Common Council and filed in the office of the City Clerk May 2, 1910, which said plans are entitled "Sewerage System, City of Plainfield, N. J., Extensions and Pumping Stations, 1910," Sheets 1 and 2, and according to such further plans as the said Common Council may hereafter direct, in and through the following described streets, avenues, property, lands and rights-of-way described, mentioned and referred to in this ordinance, to wit:

Monroe Avenue, from West Third Street to Sherman Avenue;

Hobart Avenue, from West Seventh Street to West Eighth Street;

West Fourth and West Fifth Streets, from Prescott Place to Monroe Avenue;

West Sixth Street from the line of Prescott Place produced to Monroe Avenue;

West Seventh Street, from a point 575 feet east of Monroe Avenue to a point 1,100 feet west thereof;

West Eighth Street, from Grant Avenue to the southerly City line.

Sherman Avenue, from Plainfield Avenue to Monroe Avenue;

Plainfield Avenue, from Stelle Avenue to the southerly City Line;

Randolph Road, from Plainfield Avenue to a point 280 feet west of Central Avenue;

Raddiff Place.

Sec. 2. That house connections shall be constructed from the above named sewers to the curb lines as shown on the above-mentioned plans, also on East Front Street from Berckman Street to Leland Avenue and on Central Street, as shown on plan now on file in the City Clerk's office, entitled "Sewerage System, City of Plainfield, N. J., Extensions, 1910," dated April 15, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

Regulating the Storage and Handling of Volatile Liquids.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Any liquid that will emit an inflammable vapor at a temperature below 100 degrees Fahrenheit when tested in the open air or in a closed pyrometer of the Tagliabue type is to be considered a volatile liquid within the provisions of this ordinance. All naphthas, benzines and gasoline are included in this definition and are subject to the provisions of this ordinance.

Sec. 2. All tanks intended for the storage of volatile liquids must be set in Portland cement concrete and buried at least 3 feet under the ground. All tanks of a larger capacity than 150 gallons shall be made of boiler steel with not less than three-sixteenth (3-16) inch shells and one-fourth (¼) inch heads, tested to twenty-five (25) pounds cold water hydro-static pressure. All tanks are to be covered with twelve (12) inches of Portland Cement concrete. In all tanks situated within 25 feet of a building the bottom of the tank shall be at least one foot lower than the bottom of the cellar of such building.

Sec. 3. No tanks for the storage of volatile liquids shall be constructed or maintained under sidewalks or streets, except by special permission of the Common Council, and no tanks of a greater capacity than two hundred and fifty (250) gallons shall be constructed or maintained without such permission, and no person shall store or have upon his premises more than five (5) gallons of any volatile liquid unless the same is confined in a storage tank as provided by this ordinance, or unless kept in approved self closing cans, the total capacity of which shall not exceed ten (10) gallons, provided that portable filling cans of a construction approved by the Inspector of Buildings not to exceed fifty (50) gallons in capacity may be used for transporting volatile inflammable liquids to and from storage tanks for the immediate filling and charging of vehicles. The said portable tanks shall be supported or rubber tired wheels and shall be provided with a rubber hose attachment not to exceed eight (8) feet in length, equipped at the end with shut-off valve with ground key. This section does not apply to tanks in automobiles having a greater capacity than five (5) gallons.

Sec. 4. All tanks requiring the presence of air as a means of delivering the liquid shall be equipped with a galvanized wrought iron vent pipe not less than three-fourths (¾) inches in diameter extending to a point at least ten (10) feet above the roof of any building situated within twenty-five (25) feet of such pipe and terminating in a double goose neck, the opening of which shall be covered by a thirty (30) mesh brass wire screen. Such pipe shall not discharge within twenty (20) feet of a window in any building.

Sec. 5. All supply pipes must be buried at least three (3) feet under ground and the intake must be properly closed and protected.

Sec. 6. No volatile liquid shall be discharged into either the sanitary or storm sewer systems of the city or into a street.

Sec. 7. The delivery of volatile liquids to any storage tank shall be made in daylight only and shall be made directly from a tank car or a tank wagon provided with a metalic hose and an automatic shut-off valve connection, to be made outside of the buildings or by means of safety cans of an approved construction which shall be immediately emptied into the tank and removed from the premises forthwith.

Sec. 8. No tank shall be constructed unless specifications are first filed with the Inspector of Buildings, and approved by him.

Sec. 9. Upon satisfactory proof presented to the Inspector of Buildings or to the Common Council that the provisions of this ordinance are being violated, either said Inspector of Buildings or the Common Council shall have the authority to order all tanks which are situated upon the premises where this ordinance is being violated to be emptied, and shall have the power to enforce such an order by all proper means.

Sec. 10. That any person, persons or corporation, who shall violate any provisions of this ordinance, upon conviction, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100) or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days (60), or both.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that an ordinance entitled "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of a Portion of Leland Avenue with Durable Macadam Pavement," a copy of which is subjoined to this notice, has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time, and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Common Council to adopt such ordinance at the regular meeting of the Common Council to be held in the Council Chambers, No. 149 North Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, N. J., at eight o'clock P. M. on Monday, the first day of August, A. D., Nineteen Hundred and Ten, at which time and place, prior to the adoption of said ordinance, said ordinance will be considered by the Common Council, and all persons interested may be heard before the Common Council with reference to the proposed ordinance.

By order of the Common Council.

JAMES T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., June 20, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Permanent Improvement of a Portion of Leland Avenue with Durable Macadam Pavement.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Leland Avenue from South Avenue to Berkeley Avenue shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement for the full width of sixteen feet, that is to say, eight feet on each side of the center line thereof, the said durable macadam pavement to be laid and constructed in strict conformity with the specifications particularly set forth in the ordinance of said City entitled "An Ordinance to authorize the issuing of municipal bonds for the purpose of obtaining money from the sale thereof for the permanent improvement of streets and highways of the City of Plainfield, pursuant to Chapter 209 of the Laws of 1898, during the year 1910," approved June 7, 1910; and all work shall be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder, the necessary funds provided, commissioners to estimate and assess benefits appointed, assessments made, and all proceedings in the premises be had and taken in strict conformity with the provisions of said last mentioned ordinance (the provisions of which ordinance are hereby referred to and made a part hereof), and the acts of the Legislature therein referred to.

Electric Fans Cool the Air.

Don't try to work in sweltering heat when an electric fan will lower the temperature and keep you invigorated.

To run a sixteen-inch fan costs only four-fifths of a cent an hour.

To run a twelve-inch fan costs less than one-half cent an hour.

To run an eight-inch fan costs only two cents for all day.

Oscillating fans cost a trifle more.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these; not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

GOLF.

Golf associations of the world have again been invited to send teams of four players to compete for the Olympic team trophy, the competition for which will be held over the Minikahda links on Saturday, July 23. This affair will consist of thirty-six holes, medal play, the total medal scores of each team to count. The association whose team returns the lowest total will have the custody of the trophy until the next competition and have its name inscribed thereon. Each member of the winning team will be awarded a medal.

There is no entrance for the Olympic team trophy competition, as this is an association rather than a club event. All the members of a team may, however, be from one club, but the entry represents the association of which the club is a member; therefore all entries must be made through an officer of the associations.

much that enlightened him as to the tactics of those opposed to him in Hudson county.

Not less emphatic than Jersey City's Mayor was State Senator Silzer in declaring that he will not retire from the Gubernatorial field to make room for Woodrow Wilson or anybody else for that matter.

"I authorized nobody to speak for me in any conference at which the Gubernatorial situation was discussed with Dr. Wilson or any one else," said Mr. Silzer. "I was not consulted about the conference said to have been held in New York last Tuesday, nor am I in sympathy with the apparent purposes of such conference. In fact I knew nothing about it and nobody has any right to say I would withdraw in favor of Dr. Wilson or anybody else.

"My position is simply this," went on Mr. Silzer. "I was induced to announce myself a candidate for the nomination for Governor at the solicitation of many of my friends in all sections of the State. I shall remain in the field, an active aspirant, unless the friends who induced me to enter the race advise me to retire.

"I believe it is the sentiment of my friends and of Democrats generally that the standard bearer to represent the rank and file of the party in New Jersey this year should be one who in the last four or five years has by his activities in the people's cause, whether in or out of the Legislature, helped make victory possible this year, rather than one who has merely been a figurehead in the party."

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church, will exchange pulpits tomorrow morning with Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of Scotch Plains.

"First Baptist Sunday" is the title of the service to be held at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp tomorrow afternoon. Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss will be the principal speaker and the meeting will be in charge of George A. Chapman. Miss Ruth Harris, soprano, and Miss Hazel Hattfield, contralto, members of the first Baptist church choir, will sing solos. The meting will begin promptly at 3.30 o'clock instead of 4 and a large attendance is expected. Howard Case, organist of the First Baptist church will preside at the piano.

SUICIDE ASKS NO MOURNING.

New Jersey Man Writes His Wife Not to Wear Black for Him.

County Physician Armstrong granted a burial permit yesterday at Paterson in the case of Albert W. Serven, a silk weaver who committed suicide last night by shooting. He leaves a wife, but no children. No cause is assigned for the suicide. Before killing himself Serven, while in the Young Men's Christian Association building, wrote a letter to his wife, which was found on his body. It says:

"Dear Wife: I write these lines to let you know that you have nothing to do with the step I am about to take to end my life. I am very sorry to cause you so much trouble, but I believe it is all for the best. Don't wear black for me. I do not believe in wearing black, as it makes one feel worse. Do not be foolish and stay in the house, but go out and get all the enjoyment you can.

"You are not without money. I tell you money spent to lighten your burden is money well spent. There is nothing I can do to lighten mine, or I would do it. Everything that is mine do what you think is best with. Now I bid you all goodby."

FOWLER OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

Hits at Cannon and Aldrich in First Speech for Senate.

Congressman Fowler began his campaign in Hackensack last night as a candidate for the seat of Senator Kean. He said in part:

"If to protest against corrupt agreements by which one citizen gains an advantage over another citizen, or against unjust laws whereby one citizen gains an advantage over another citizen is to be an insurgent, then I glory in the fact that I am an insurgent. If to stand utterly opposed to Aldrichism and Cannonism and with Theodore Roosevelt is to be an insurgent, then I glory in the fact that I am an insurgent.

"If to be in favor of the conservation of our national resources, and if to be in favor of absolutely equal opportunities under the operation of just law, and if to be in favor of the control and regulation of corporations, which derive all their rights and powers from the people is to be a progressive Republican, then I glory in the fact that I am a progressive Republican."

R. N. Crane's Biography.

Editor, The Daily Press:

At a regular meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knights of Pythias held last evening, I was instructed to request your valuable paper correct the misleading statement appearing in last evening's issue under the head of "Two other candidates for city judgeship," and more particularly under story of Robert Newton Crane wherein the following appeared "He is a prominent member of Perseverance Lodge, Knights of Pythias——."

You will confer a great favor upon the lodge and its members by informing the public that Mr. Crane is not a member of our order. We attach no blame to The Daily Press for publishing the statement in question, having ascertained that it was furnished to the paper and was accepted in good faith.

Thanking you in the name of the lodge, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
J. B. HIGGINS,
Keeper Records and Seals.

101 RANCH WILD WEST SHOW HERE ON JULY 26

The general organization of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show that will be here on Tuesday, July 26, is such that it is a class peculiarly its own. Wild West exhibitions have always been popular, but they have always lacked just the essential western atmosphere that has made the 101 Ranch so extremely meritorious. Under the title of "Wild West" numerous exhibitions have toured the country, giving performances in which Indian yells and pistol shots were the main factors. The title of Major, or Colonel was given some long haired individual, who surrounded himself with a few cow boys to whom the plains were unknown and a few Indians from an eastern reservation and amid shouts and pistol shots, a portrayal of what was alleged to be an Indian battle was given. If the Miller Brothers who are the owners of 101 Ranch at Bliss, Oklahoma, were ever Indian fighters, they never tell of it, nor do they effect the long hair and empty titles. They pose for just what they are only, cattlemen and ranchmen. The early life on the plains as depicted by the 101 Ranch exhibition, is only what has occurred during the early struggle westward of progress. Many of the scenes reproduced are those in which they have figured and many of the true western incidents are such as take place daily on the vast ranch. There is nothing in the least artificial about the performance, nor about the characters. There is a complete absence of gilt and tinsel, and the life of a ranch man and cattleman is but lived over for the entertainment and instruction of those who have never had the opportunity to observe it on the plains. There are nearly a half thousand Indians with the show and not one of them have ever before been east of the Mississippi River.

Heptasophs Initiate Class.

Protective Conclave, No. 505, Improved Order of Heptasophs, initiated a class of twelve young men last night. This is the outcome of a movement started July 1 to build up the order in this community. There will be another class number in twenty-five to go in at the meeting to be held next month. O. Dodd Bryan, of Philadelphia, is in charge of the work and is meeting with splendid success. The Heptasophs is one of the solid fraternal orders and numbers among its membership some of the leading business and professional men in this city. Mr. Bryan is being assisted in his work by J. V. E. Vanderhoef, who has been actively identified with the order for over fifteen years and who is now a member of one of the supreme committees.

A Good Card of Bouts.

Fourteen clever young boxers are scheduled to meet in tonight's bouts at the Central Institute in Newark. This is one of the most extensive cards provided by the Institute in some time and will unquestionably produce some clever boxing. The three fastest bouts of the night will probably be the mix ups between Smiling Kelly, of Bayonne, and Ray Hatfield, of Newark; Young Fink, of Paterson, and Olli Harrison, of Elizabeth, and Tommy Andrech, of Newark, and Young McKenna, of Jersey City.

Freedom Castle to Install.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, will meet Tuesday night, when Grand District Deputy Powlison and staff, of Somerville, will install the officers-elect. The new noble chief is Nelson J. Wiley, and on Tuesday night he will announce the names of the appointive officers. Wednesday night the members will go to Orange by trolley to visit the Castle at that place. The start will be made at 6.30 o'clock from the Watchung avenue stand.

To Attend Missionary Meet.

Five local women will leave next Thursday to attend the Missionary conference to be held at Silver Bay, Lake George, under the auspices of the Missionary Movement. The women will be gone for about ten days. Those in the party will be: Mrs. Duncan Taylor, and the Misses Isabelle Ashwell, Edna Brown, Dorthy Fleming and Harriett Halloway. Miss Halloway while there will conduct a mission study class.

Showered by Their Friends.

Miss Lucetta Clark, of Grandview avenue, was tendered a variety shower by her friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dyckman Winkler, on Grandview avenue, Thursday night. At the same time, J. Russell Harden was tendered a hardware shower by his friends. Miss Clark and Mr. Harden have been engaged for some time and will in all probability be married early in the fall.

Mrs. Eliza M. Martin.

Mrs. Eliza M. Martin, aged 83 years, a resident of the borough for a great many years died last night at her home, 28 Linden avenue, after a long illness. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Ida Martin. The funeral will be held from the late home, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

DECISION SEVERE BLOW TO THE ROYAL ARCANUM

Judge Kelly in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, gave a decision yesterday that may cost the fraternal and beneficial order of Royal Arcanum thousands of dollars, and it is therefore naturally of unusual interest to the members of the orders in this city.

The decree was the outcome of a suit brought by Samuel Greene, of DeWitt Council, Brooklyn, to restrain the Supreme Council from suspending him as a member. Greene was threatened with suspension because he refused to pay $6.80 a month in assessments instead of $1.80, which was the sum fixed when he joined the order.

The Arcanum changed its method of assessment in 1898 and instead of issuing assessments whenever money was needed to pay death claims, made a flat rate assessment once a month, which made Greene's assessment $3.16 a month. Greene paid that amount, but in 1905 the Arcanum made another change in its methods of assessment and fixed the assessment age of each member as his age October 1, 1905, instead of his age when he joined the order. This added twenty-two years to Green's assessment age and made it $6.80 a month, besides increasing the assessment of each member 16.5$0 a month when he reaches the age of sixty-five. Greene will be that age in two years.

Judge Kelly holds that the order having contracted to assess Greene at his age when he entered the order had no legal right to change the contract without his consent.

to forgive sins (he saith to the sick of the palsy), I say unto thee, arise and take up they bed, and go thy way into thine house. And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all." Thus we see that the forgiving of sins and the healing of the sick are one and the same process according to the scriptures.

My critic asks me to give an exegesis and define the Greek word "Katallage" as used in the gospels. This word is commonly defined as reconcilliation in various Bible dictionaries. Taken in this sense as applied to the Atonement, Christian Science teaches that man should be reconciled to God, not God to man.

PERSONAL.

Harry Nash, of De Lacy avenue, has returned from a visit with relatives in Brooklyn.

Miss Mary E. French, of Boston, is a guest of Mrs. George H. Batchelor, of West Seventh street.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Coddington, of Fairview avenue, are entertaining Miss Ethel Calder, of Hackensack.

Miss Mary Byrne, of Chicago, Ill., will be the guest of Mrs. James E. Martine, of Kensington avenue, for a month.

Miss F. Blanche Heideloff, of 352 East Front street, is spending the week-end with Miss Rosa Waltmann, of Glen Ridge.

Mrs. Charles F. Bryan, of East Second street, will leave next week for Taunton, Mass., for an extended stay with relatives.

Recent arrivals at the Brighton Hotel, Asbury Park include Harry Watts, Roskin Watts, Allen McQosie and H. L. Delaton, of Westfield.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Herring, of The Bristol, are sojourning at Ocean Grove for a week. Later they will go to Lebanon, Hunterdon county.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of East Front street, left today on a vacation trip which will include several points of interest in New Jersey, both seashore and mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Edgar Pettit, of Chicago, Ill., who are visiting Mrs. Pettit's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. I. Nash, of 138 De Lacy avenue, will leave tomorrow for their home in the west.

Mr. and Mrs. William Newmiller, of Leland avenue, have returned from Augusta, Maine, where Mr. Newmiller went in the interest of the Walter Scott Printing Press Company.

BIG FIRE AT N. Y. PIERS RAGES THIS AFTERNOON.

One of the largest riverfront pier fires in New York in some time broke out about 12:30 this afternoon at the old American Line Pier, which is now being used by the Metropolitan Line and at 2:30 was still raging. The whole force of fire fighting tugs was gathered at the pier, and their energies were being used to extinguish the flames. At 2 o'clock the fire approached the Barclay street ferry house of the Lackwanna Railroad, after having started the flames on a pier to its north.

All of the Metropolitan Line boats were gotten out into midstream in safety before the flames had gained much headway. At press time, the damage was unable to be computed.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

During the transportation of the equipment of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, of Plainfield, to its new plant here, the two-ton hammer base, with its numerous weights, wrecked the truck just as it was passing over the Lehigh Valley tracks, delaying traffic until another truck could be secured in its place from Plainfield. The local plant expects to be in running order by July 28.

Wilson Day, who disappeared so mysteriously, was ticket agent at this place before being transferred to Oak Tree, and his friends here do not credit the suicide theory. No trace of the man has as yet been found.

The commuters along the Lehigh Valley, object strenuously to the increase in rates and a number of them contemplate removing to New York city.

Harry Clawson, who has been ill a long time, has not sufficiently recovered his strength to take a positon.

David Kellogg, accompanied by his wife and baby, of Glen Ridge, are spending the summer at Oak Tree.

Mr. Squires, who lived on the Endress place, and conducted a milk route, has removed to Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Leveridge called on acquaintances in the village last night.

Mrs. D. M. Kellogg, of Oak Tree, called on friends here yesterday.

OUR NEWEST RESIDENT SANG SONG OF LIBERTY

Martl Augustus Dessaux, an eleven-year-old French boy, who arrived in New York Thursday all alone on the White Star liner Majestic, his destination being Plainfield, where he expects to make his home with his aunt, Mrs. Joseph Cleary, aroused considerable interest among the passengers as the ship steamed past the Statue of Liberty.

It was a weak little voice and the enunciation was most imperfect, but it carried a world of patriotism to passengers as the lad sang "America." They all know about the Statue of Liberty in France, and they know what it stands for, and Martl greeted the country of his adoption with the national hymn.

The lad's English is not too good, but his heart is in the right place and the sight of the goddess brought forth a song. He then sang the "Marsellaise," with less effort. According to report, Martl was popular in his home in Cherbourg, for 200 schoolmates bade him farewell at the warf.

Because the lad has not reached the age of sixteen years, the officials refused to allow him to accompany his aunt to this city yesterday, even though she produced the deed for her property here. The boy was sent over in care of the steward of the Majestic, and with the full consent of his parents. Mrs. Cleary, who resides on Ann street, went to New York yesterday to make another attempt to get possession of the boy.

FRIENDS TO BUILD HOME.

Building to Cost $150,000 Is Planned for Asbury Park.

The Friends' Society, which has completed its conference at Ocean Grove, is negotiating with James A. Bradley for a site in Asbury Park for a permanent headquarters. The Friends, with Mayor Appleby and Publicity Director Denegar, inspected several ocean front blocks in North Asbury Park, where it is proposed to build a $150,000 auditorium to seat 10,000 persons. The Friends plan to centralize their various conferences in Asbury Park, and arrangements will also be made in the new building to conduct the great summer school of First Day methods. This school is probably the largest of its kind in the world, and has an average enrollment of four thousand students.

Wesley Lake was an interesting spot for hundreds Thursday, when the replicas of the Monitor and Merrimac, which are to engage in a fireworks battle tonight, were towed into position. Workmen were busy all day preparing the two mimic warships for action.

HONOR NEW JERSEY PRIEST.

Many Attend Testimonial for the Rev. J. A. Reynolds at Red Bank.

About $1,500 was realized by the jubilee testimonial benefit given for the Rev. James A. Reynolds, of St. James' Roman Catholic Church, at Keith's Lyceum, Red Bank Thursday. The Lyceum was filled with parishioners and friends of the priest, and in the boxes were wealthy residents of the Rumson section and many theatrical persons.

An entertainment was given by vaudeville performers at Red Bank for the summer, including Maggie Cline, Annie Hart, George Gaskin, Tony Pearl, the Four Masons, Ben Welch, Nelson and Milledge, Gracey and Burnett and Monahan and Giblin. The St. James' Dramatic Club presented a farce, entitled "The Two Lunatics."

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the ordination of Father Reynolds will be celebrated on August 24. Father Reynolds took charge of St. James' Parish in 1883. The present church in Broad street was built June 17, 1894.

TEN BILLION STAMPS.

Big Order for Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

More than ten billion postage stamps will be printed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington, D. C., in the coming year. This amount represents only a rough estimate of the number of stamps necessary to meet the requirements for one year of the American people, and will be divided approximately as follows: Two-cent stamps, 5,500,000,000; one-cent stamps, 4,000,000,000; one-dollar stamps, 100,000, and the rest in other denominations.

The estimated value of the stamps required for the year is $177,783,000, or $7,000,000 more than for those wanted last year.

Elizabeth Man Honored.

Elizabeth, July 16.—Fred B. Bassett, Jr., son of Fred B. Bassett, of 238 Edgar place, has been commissioned a commander in the United States Navy. He has been appointed inspector of equipment for the two new battleships, Utah and Arkansas, now in course of construction at the Camden shipyards. Mr. Bassett was graduated from the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and was commissioned a midshipman in 1884.

HOME NEWS.

Of Interest to Everyone in Plainfield.

In every newspaper in the country you will read statements made by people living in out-of-the-way places, who are supposed to have been cured or derived great benefit from some wonderful remedy or "cure-all." But here in Plainfield we only publish statements made by Plainfield people—the testimony of your friends, neighbors and fellow-townsmen.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches and occasional attacks of rheumatism. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from disordered kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of this preparation and I am soon feeling good. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

TRIES MURDER CASE WITHIN A FEW HOURS

New Brunswick, July 16.—A new record for murder trials was established here Thursday when two men were tried and acquitted in exactly four hours and five minutes. Here is the time schedule of the trial: 10 a. m. court opened, trial called; 10.20 jury in box, State opens case; 11.45, defense opens case; 1 to 2 p. m., recess; 2.15, summing up of lawyers begins; 2.30, court begins charge to jury; 2.55, jury retired; 3.05, verdict of not guilty rendered and court adjourned.

Ilko Hirtz and Charles Hlyva, of Perth Amboy, were on trial for the murder of Charles Holobingka, Jr. The men had been in jail just a week. While they had been arrested last January by the Perth Amboy police, they were not held, as the police investigation showed that the men were not guilty. The police yesterday were witnesses for the defendants. The indictment was found because Mrs. Catherine Kazmarsk and her son Steve, had told the grand jury that they had seen the defendants push the man from a second story porch, causing his death.

Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen tried the case, with Joseph E. Stricker appearing for the defendants and Prosecutor T. B. Booraem for the State.

REFUSE TO GRANT COMMUTERS DEMANDS

The interstate commerce commission Thursday at Washington announced its refusal to suspend the advanced New York city commutation rates, which were the subject of discussion at a hearing on Tuesday, but directed an investigation as to the reasonableness of these advances, as well as other New York commutation rates which have already become effective.

The rates in question accordingly will go into effect on July 20, the date to which they were postponed at the request of the commission.

Commissioners Clements and Prouty dissented from the refusal to suspend.

The commission yesterday announced its intention to suspend all tariffs making general and important freight rate advances, pending investigation as to the reasonableness of the proopsed advances.

No more definite statement in this regard can now be made, but the specific orders will be announced from time to time as they are entered and served. It is expected that the suspensions in each case will be for 120 days from the effective date named in the tariffs, but the commission intends by subsequent orders to provide for making effective on the same day such advances as may be allowed.

The decision affects the increased rates which were postponed after the famous White House conference between Taft and the railroad presidents, as well as rates in many other parts of the country.

Advances made by the Boston and Maine railroad and other carriers announcing increased rates on milk from various New England points to Boston have been suspended pending a determination of their reasonableness.

HOWLING DOG'S VISIT MAKES FAMILY FEAR.

A howling dog that has come under the window of James Shaw's bedroom, at Dunellen, for the past four nights and set up pitiful howls, which have aroused a strong superstition that impending ill is about to befall the Shaw family. So impressed has Mrs. Shaw become with the idea that some dreadful thing is going to happen that she suffered an attack of nervous prostration yesterday and is in a serious condition today.

Thinking that the mother's illness was forewarned by the howls of the dog, and expecting further misfortunes, Margaret, the fourteen year old daughter, is also in a highly nervous state, and Shaw himself cannot sleep at night. Nothing was thought of the howling dog until Wednesday night, when an old woman living in the neighborhood, who had heard the dog, visited the Shaws and told them it was a sure sign of ill luck when a dog howled at night beneath a window. She went on to say that she knew of an instance many years ago of a family of six having been murdered in their beds and that three nights before the crime a dog came under one of the windows and howled for an hour at a time.

The dog which has annoyed the Shaw family does not belong to them, nor are they able to find any one living within two blocks of their house who owns a dog. Shaw took a shot at the dog last night but did not hit it. He says he don't know what is in store for him or his family, but he is going to kill the dog if he has to sit out in the yard all night to get another shot at the beast.

STANDARD OIL AT BAY.

Maniac Drives Clerks from Office in Bayonne.

Bayonne, July 16.—William Dalton, 28 years old, of 33 East Twenty-first street, went insane Thursday as a result of worrying over his discharge from the employ of the Standard Oil Company. Escaping from the house, he went to the office of the Standard and drove the clerks and others to the street.

The man remained in full possession of the office until two policemen, by a ruse, handcuffed him. He will be detained at police headquarters until the county physician makes an examination.

TOOK PRIEST'S DOG.

Rahway, July 16.—Dog Warden Valentine Tindale created excitement in Cherry street, when he captured a dog belonging to Father Tyrrell, a retired priest living in Clark Township. Objections were raised because the dog did not belong in the city, but Tindale clung to the dog and took it to the pound.

Father Tyrrell went to the police station but obtained no redress. The incident drew a large crowd and blocked traffic in the street for several minutes. Father Tyrrell declared that he would not pay the price for the redemption of the animal.

Mrs. Lederer and daughter, of East Fifth street, who have been visiting with Postmaster Whittaker, of Westfield, returned home Thursday.

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS' GRAVES WILL BE MARKED

Gen. J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, who was given supervision of the burial of Civil War veterans in Union county, recently reported to the Board of Freeholders, the name, age and army record of every soldier buried in the county. He is now engaged by direction of the board, securing the names, army record and places of burial of all Revolutionary soldiers, together with those who served in the War of 1812. He will not be able to complete this task before the end of the year.

Gen. Drake visited Evergreen cemetery, this city, last week, and ascertained that the remains of seven soldiers of the American Revolution and six who served in the War of 1812 repose within that enclosure. Not one of these graves have been marked by the Sons of the Revolution, or by the county or Government, and the Board of Freeholders have directed Gen. Drake to make requisition upon the Government for white marble monuments to mark the resting places of the dead heroes.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Rev. E. H. Durell, eighty-one years old, of Woodbury, fell from a chair and broke an arm.

Five would-be sleuths Thursday took the civil service examination for the position of county detective in Camden.

Game Warden John H. Avis, of Woodbury, on Thursday put out fifty bushels of oats for wild birds to feed on next winter.

William Jamison was frightfully burned about the face by an explosion of gasoline as he entered his father's boat tied up at Paulsboro.

There is at work in the Salem Railroad yard an Italian with twelve fingers and twelve toes. He states that his father and grandfather each had the same number.

A stove exploded and wrecked the kitchen at the home of Sheppard McHenry, on South Fifth street, Millville, on Thursday. The family were not in the house at the time.

The body of John Hunter, who was drowned while bathing in Newton Creek, at Essex street bridge, Gloucester, Wednesday afternoon, was recovered yesterday. Coroner Wingender gave a certificate of accidental death.

Disputing the contention of the widow that she is entitled to all of the $25,000 insurance on the life of her husband, creditors of Benjamin D. Andrews on Thursday received permission from Referee in Bankruptcy Ott, of Camden, to sue the estate for a portion of the money realized on the policies. Andrews was a commission merchant and lived at Moorestown, and the bankruptcy proceeding were not instituted until after his death. His liabilities are $106,000.

Captain John F. Lovett, of Trenton, former sergeant-at-arms of the New Jersey Senate, pulled a long face when Charles Case failed to respond to his name in the Central Police Court on Thursday. Case was arrested Wednesday, charged with assault and battery upon his boarding mistress, and Captain Lovett went his bail to the amount of $300. Case is now among the missing and Captain Lovett will have to cash up the $300.

Stepping into a hole as he slid from the deck of the motorboat Molly, on which he and a number of companions had been playing, Lawrence Kelly, nine years old, of 624 Cedar street, lost his life in the Delaware River, off Pyn Poynt, Camden, on Thursday. The Molly was anchored close to shore, and except at the point where the boy stepped to his death the water was scarcely waist high.

Disappearing from home while suffering from nervous prostration, Mrs. William Chamberlain, of 440 North Eighth street, Camden, was found by her husband unconscious and with the gas flowing at the home of her mother, three doors away, on Thursday. Mrs. Chamberlain's mother is away and her house is closed. Prompt medical aid saved Mrs. Chamberlain's life. She is about twenty-two years old and has an infant child.

Holds Hands; Loses Ring.

New Brunswick, July 16.—Tessie Zuniino, 16 years old, was arrested Thursday, charged with stealing a $75 dollar diamond ring from John Grillo. He says that the ring slipped off of his finger into her hand while they were holding hands. She admits having the ring, but says she lost it in a basket of peaches at her father's fruit store.

Bicyclist Crashes Into Bridge.

Flemington, July 16.—Charles Ganter, of Barley Sheaf, was injured Thursday while descending a steep hill at Darts Mill, near Flemington Junction, on his bicycle. Ganter lost control of his machine and dashed into an iron bridge. His breast bone was fractured and his wrist dislocated.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

"No—no—you cannot save me from Strang! Now—you must go!"

She retreated slowly in the direction of the path. In an instant Nathaniel was at her side.

"I am going to see you safely back to St. James," he declared. "Then I will go to your brother."

She barred his way defiantly.

"You cannot go!"

"Why?"

"Because—" He caught the frightened flutter of her voice again. "Because—they will kill you!"

The low laugh that he breathed in her hair was more of joy than fear.

"I am glad you care—Marion." He spoke her name with faltering tenderness, and led her out into the path.

"You must go," she still persisted.

"With you—yes," he answered.

She surrendered to the determination in his voice and they moved slowly along the path, listening for any sound that might come from ahead of them. Nathaniel had already formed his plan of action. From Marion's words and the voice in which she had uttered them he knew that it would be useless for him as it had been for Neil to urge her to flee from the island. There remained but one thing for him to do, so he fell back upon the scheme which he had proposed to Marion's brother. He realized now that he might be compelled to play the game single-handed unless he could secure assistance from Obadiah. His ship and men were in the hands of the Mormons; Neil, in his search for the captured vessel, stood a large chance of missing him that night, and in that event Marion's fate would depend on him alone. If he could locate a small boat on the beach back of Obadiah's; if he could in some way lure Marion to it— He gave an involuntary shudder at the thought of using force upon the girl at his side, at the thought of her terror of those first few moments, her struggles, her broken confidence. She believed in him now. She believed that he loved her. She trusted him. The warm soft pressure of her hand as it clung to his arm in the blackening gloom of the forest was evidence of that trust. She looked into his face anxiously, inquiringly when they stopped to listen, like a child who was sure of a stronger spirit at her side. She held her breath when he held his, she listened when he listened, her feet fell with velvet stillness when he stepped with caution. Her confidence in him was like a beautiful dream to Nathaniel and he trembled when he pictured the destruction of it. After a little he reached over and as if by accident touched the hand that was lying on his arm; he dared more after a moment, and drew the warm little fingers into his great strong palm and held them there, his soul thrilled by their gentle submissiveness. And then in another breath there came to still his joy a thought of the terrible power that chained this girl to the Mormon king. He longed to speak words of encouragement to her, to instil hope in her bosom, to ask her to confide in him the secret of the shadow which hung over her, but the memory of what Neil had said to him held his lips closed.

They had walked in silence for many minutes when the girl stopped.

"It is not very far now," she whispered. "You must go!"

"Only a little farther," he begged.

She surrendered again, hesitatingly, and they went on, more slowly than before, until they came to where the path met the footway that led to Obadiah's.

"Now—now you must go," whispered Marion again.

In this last moment Nathaniel crushed her hand against his breast, his body throbbing with a wild tumult, and a half of what he had meant not to say fell passionately from his lips.

"Forgive me for—that—back—there—Marion," he whispered. "It was because I love you—love you—" He freed her hand and stood back, choking the words that would have revealed his secret. He lied now for the love of this girl. "Neil is out there waiting for me in a small boat," he continued, pointing beyond Obadiah's to the lake. "I will see him soon, and then I will return to Obadiah's to tell you if he has left for the mainland. Will you promise to meet me there—tonight?"

"I will promise."

"At midnight—"

"Yes, at 12 o'clock."

This time it was Marion who came to him. Her eyes shone like stars.

"And if you make Neil go to the mainland," she said softly, "when I meet you I will—will tell you—something."

The last word came in a breathless sob. As she slipped into the path that led to St. James she paused for a moment and called back, in a low voice: "Tell Neil that he must go for Winnsome's sake. Tell him that her fate is shortly to be as cruel as mine—tell him that Winnsome loves him, and that she will escape and come to him on the mainland. Tell him to go—go!"

She turned again, and Nathaniel stood like a statue, hardly breathing, until the sound of her feet had died away. Then he walked swiftly up the foot path that led to Obadiah's. He forgot his own danger in the excitement that pulsated with every fiber of his being, forgot his old caution and the fears that gave birth to it—forgot everything in those moments but Marion and his own great happiness. Neil's absence meant nothing to him now. He had held Marion in his arms, he had told her of his love, and though she had accepted it with gentle unresponsiveness he was thrilled by the memory of that last look in her eyes, which had spoken faith, confidence, and perhaps even more. What was that something she would tell him if he got Neil safely away? It was to be a reward for his own loyalty—he knew that, by the half fearing tremble of her voice, the sobbing catch of her breath, the strange glow in her eyes. With her brother away she would confide in him? Would she tell him the secret of her slavedom to Strang? Nathaniel was conscious of no madness in the wild hope that filled him; nothing seemed impossible to him now. Marion would meet him at midnight. She would go with him to the boat, and then—ah, he had solved the problem! He would use no force. He would tell her that Neil was in his canoe half a mile out from the shore and that he had promised to leave the island for good if she would go out to bid him good-by. And once there, a half a mile or a mile away, he would tell her that he had lied to her; and he would give her his heart to trample upon to prove the love that had made him do this thing, and then he would row her to the mainland.

It was the sight of Obadiah's cabin that brought his caution back. He came upon it so suddenly that an exclamation of surprise fell unguarded from his lips. There was no light to betray life within. He tried the door and found it locked. He peered in at the windows, listened, and knocked, and at last concealed himself near the path, confident that the little old councilor was still at St. James. For an hour he waited. From the rear of Obadiah's home a narrow footway led toward the lake and Nathaniel followed it, now as warily as an animal in search of prey. For half a mile it took him through the forest and ended at the white sands of the beach. In neither direction could Nathaniel see a light, and keeping close in the shadows of the trees he made his way slowly toward St. James. He had gone but a short distance when he saw a house directly ahead of him, a single gleam of light from a small window telling him that it was inhabited and that its tenants were at home. He circled down close to the water looking for a boat. His heart leaped with sudden exultation when he saw a small skiff drawn upon the beach and his joy was doubled at finding the oars still in the locks. It took him but a moment to shove the light craft into the sea and a minute later he was rowing swiftly away from the land.

Nathaniel was certain that by this time Neil had abandoned his search for the captured Typhoon and was probably paddling in the direction of St. James. With the hope of intercepting him he pulled an eighth of a mile from the shore and rowed slowly toward the head of the island. There was no moon, but countless stars glowed in a clear sky and upon the open lake Nathaniel could see for a considerable distance about him. For another hour he rowed back and forth and then beached his boat within a dozen rods of the path that came down from Obadiah's.

It was 10 o'clock. Two more hours! He had tried to suppress his excitement, his apprehension, his eagerness, but now as he went back into the darkness of the forest they burst out anew. What if Marion should not keep the tryst? He thought of the spies whom Neil had said guarded the girl's home—and of Obadiah. Could he trust the old councilor? Should he confide his plot to him and ask his assistance? As the minutes passed and these thoughts recurred again and again in his brain he could not keep the nervousness from growing within him. He was sure now that he would have to fight his battle without Neil. He saw the necessity of coolness, of judgment, and he [illegible] to demand these things of himself, struggling sternly against those symptoms of weakness which had replaced his confidence of a short time before. Gradually he fought himself back into his old faith. He would save Marion—without Neil, without Obadiah. If Marion did not come to him by midnight it would be because of the guards against whom Neil had warned him, and he would go to her. In some way he would get her to the boat, even if he had to fight his way through Arbor Croche's men.

With this return of confidence Nathaniel's thoughts reverted to his present greatest need, which was food. Since early morning he had eaten nothing and he began to feel the physical want in a craving that was becoming acutely uncomfortable. If Obadiah had not returned to his home he made up his mind that he would find entrance to the cabin and help himself. A sudden turn in the path which he was following, however, revealed one of the councilor's windows aglow with light, and as he pressed quietly around the end of the building the sound of a low voice came to him through the open door. Cautiously he approached and peered in. A large oil lamp, the light of which he had seen in the window, was burning on a table in the big room but the voice came from the little closet into which Obadiah had taken him the preceding night. For several minutes he crouched and listened. He heard the chuckling laugh of the old councilor—and then an incoherent raving that set his blood tingling. There is a horror in the sound of madness, a horror that creeps to the very pit of one's soul, that sends shivering dread from every nerve center, that causes one who is alone with it to sweat with a nameless fear. It was the voice of madness that came from that little room. Before it Nathaniel quailed as if a clammy hand had reached out from the darkness and gripped him by the throat. He drew back shivering in every limb, and the voice followed him, shrieking now in a sudden burst of insane mirth and dying away a moment later in a hollow cackling laugh that seemed to curdle the blood in his veins. Mad! Obadiah Price was mad! Step by step Nathaniel fell back from the door. He felt himself trembling from head to foot. His heart thumped within his breast like the beating of a hammer. For an instant there was silence—a silence in which strange dread held him breathless while he watched the glow in the door and listened. And after that quiet there came suddenly a cry that ended in the exultant chattering of a name.

At the sound of that name Nathaniel sprang forward again. It was Marion's name and he strained his ears to catch the words that might follow it. As he listened, his head thrust half in at the door, Obadiah's voice became lower and lower, until at last it ceased entirely. Not a step, not a deep breath, not the movement of a hand disturbed the stillness of the little room. By inches Nathaniel drew himself inside the door. His heavy boot caught in a sliver on the step but the rending of wood brought no response. It was the quiet of death that pervaded the cabin, it was a strange, growing fear of death that entered Nathaniel as he now hurried across the room and peered through the narrow aperture. The old councilor was half stretched upon the table, his arms reaching out, his long, thin fingers gripping its edges, his face buried under his shoulders. It looked as if death had come suddenly to him during some terrible convulsion, but after a moment Nathaniel saw that he was breathing. He went over and placed a hand on the old man's twisted back.

"Hello, Obadiah! Hello—hello!" he caled cheerfully.

A shudder ran through the councilor's frame, as if the voice had startled him, his arms and body stiffened and slowly he lifted his head. Nathaniel tried to stifle the cry on his lips, tried to smile—to speak, but the terrible face that stared up into his own held him silent, motionless. He had heard the voice of madness, now he looked upon madness in the eyes that glared at him. In them was no sign of recognition, no passing flash of sanity. The white face was lined with purplish veins, the mouth was distorted and the lips bleeding. Involuntarily he stepped back to the end of the table.

At his movement the councilor stretched out his arms with a sobbing moan.

"Nat—Nat—don't go—"

He fell again upon his face, clutching the table in a sudden convulsion. In the next room Nathaniel had noticed a pail of water and he brought this and wet the old man's head. For a long time Obadiah did not move, and when he did it was to reach out with a groping hand to find Nathaniel. A change had come into his face when he lifted it again, the mad fire had partly burned itself out of his eyes, the old chuckling laugh came from between his lips.

"A little weakness, Nat—a little weakness," he gasped faintly. "I have it now and then. Excitement—great excitement—" He straightened himself for a moment and stood, swaying free from the table, then collapsed into a chair, his head dropping upon his breast.

Without arousing him from the stupor into which he had fallen, Nathaniel again concealed himself in the shadows outside the cabin where he could better guard himself against the possible approach of Mormon visitors. But he did not remain long. He struck a match and saw that it was nearly 11 and a sudden resolution turned him back to the cabin door. He believed that Obadiah would not easily arouse himself from the strange stupor into which he had fallen. Meanwhile he would find food and then conceal himself near the path to intercept Marion.

As he mounted the step he heard for the second time since landing upon the island the solemn tolling of the great bell at St. James, and as he paused for an instant to listen, peal upon peal followed the first until its brazen thunder rolled in one long booming echo through the forests of the Mormon kingdom. There came a shrill cry at his back and he whirled about to see the councilor standing in the center of the big room, his arms outstretched, his face lifted as it had been raised in prayer at the tolling of the same bell the night before—but this time it was not prayer that fell from his lips.

"Nat, ye have returned in the hour of vengeance! The hand of God is descending upon the Mormon kingdom!"

His words came in a gasping, but triumphant cry.

"And tomorrow—tomorrow—" He stepped forward, his voice crooning a wild joy. "Tomorrow—I—shall—be—king!"

As he spoke the cabin trembled, a tremor passed under them, and the tolling of the bell was lost in a sudden tumult that came like the bursting crash of low thunder.

"What is it?" cried Nathaniel. He leaped into the room and caught Obadiah by the arm. "What is it?"

"The hand of God!" whispered the old man again. "Nat—Nat—" It was his old self that stood grimacing and twisting his hands before Nathaniel now. "Nat—a thousand armed men are off the coast! The Lamanites of the mainland are descending upon the Mormon kingdom as the hosts of Israel upon Canaan! Strang is doomed—doomed—doomed—and tomorrow I shall be king!" His voice rose in a wailing shriek. He darted to the door and his cackling laugh rang with the old madness as he pointed into the north where a lurid glow had mounted high into the sky.

"The signal fire—the bell!" he gurgled chokingly. "They are calling the Mormons to arms—but it is too late—too late! Ho, ho, it is too late, Nat—too late!" He staggered back, gripping his throat, and fell upon the floor. "Too late—too late," he moaned, groveling weakly, as if struggling for breath. "Too late—Nat—Marion—"

A shiver passed through his body and he lay quite still.

SILVER BAY DELEGATES HAVE RETURNED HOME

The eleven young women from the local Y. W. C. A., who have been attending the large eastern city conference of the Y. W. C. A., at Silver Bay, Lake George, returned home yesterday afternoon, after having spent an enjoyable ten days there. They report having discussed a large amount of association work as well as having had a good time.

Those who took in the trip were Miss Amy Tapping, general secretary; Miss Maud Van Blarcom and Miss Margaret Mosher, assistant secretaries; and the Misses Florence Prior, Helen George, Clara Runyon, Mary Gray, Laura Hangliter, Lizzie Joos, Myrtie Fedderman and Nettie Steiner.

Each morning of their sojourn there, was spent in technical councils, in which the different phases of the association's work was thoroughly discussed. At the same time there were four Bible classes being conducted in different parts of the convention hall.

The afternoons were given over entirely to recreation, and it was then that the young women had their enjoyment. There is a beautiful bathing beach on the lake and the whole local delegation took advantage of the opportunities offered. Several of the local delegates were so successful in their enjoyment of the water that they even learned to swim. Boating also was enjoyed by the party, a launch trip to Paradise Bay on the lake being one of the features of the week's fun.

One day of the ten was known as "stunt day" or "Association day" in which the various delegations were dressed in costume peculiarly adapted to their section of the country. The local delegates essayed the role of Jersey mosquitoes, and many comments of praise were heard from their efforts.

Several of the nights were devoted to vesper services, which were held either on the dock or in the orchard. The principal speakers at these services were Rev. Harry Fosdick, of Mount Pleasant, and Dr. John M. Dowell, of Newark. Two of the nights were turned over to the reviewing of streopticon views, which showed the advances which the work of the association has made the world over.

Plainfield's delegation at the conference was an average one, the usual number in a representation ranging between twelve and fifteen. Newark with forty-five delegates led the list.

Miss Tapping, general secretary of the local branch, announced today that the rooms would be kept open as usual during the summer and that until August 1 she would remain in charge. During August, Miss Van Blarcom will assume her duties.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shotwell and daughter, Marguerite, of Grant avenue, left yesterday for Atlantic City, where they will sojourn for a time.

Mrs. Lansdale, wife of Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale, of Oak Tree, accompanied by their two children, has gone to Baltimore, her former home, for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conover and son, Ernest Conover and Mrs. Conover's mother, Mrs. Van Nest, of Elmwood place, left today for Lake Hopatcong, where they will spend two weeks.

Among automobile tourists registered at the Griswold House, New London, Conn., are Mrs. S. A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue, accompanied by Mrs. Erickson Perkins, Miss Parnell and Erickson Ginna Perkins, of Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. George Alberts.

Mrs. George Alberts, aged sixty-three years, widow of the late George Alberts, died at her home on Montague avenue, Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock from the effects of a tumor, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Alberts had been a resident of Scotch Plains for many years. She is survived by five sons, Anthony, John, Joseph, Nicholas and Henry, of Scotch Plains and one daughter, Mrs. William Stewart, of Plainfield. Her funeral will be held Monday morning.

Attractive Window Display.

The show window at Ritz's candy store is attracting considerable attnetion today. A pyramid of ice, weighing nearly 1,000 pounds, has a blast of air directed against it from an electric fan and massed at the back of this artificial ice berg is a mound of delicious fruit and at the left a miniature table with little figures eating ice cream. The whole forms one of the most novel and striking displays seen here. Stephen Haff designed and executed the display.

LAST OF THE CENSUS RECORDS ARE SENT IN

The last of the 155 portfolios containing the official census of the Fifth Congressional district of New Jersey have been sent to Washington by Census Supervisor Louis V. Hoagland and everyone of them have ben receipted as being "O. K." Mr. Hoagland feels elated over the fact that none have been sent back for retabulation.

The fact that all were correct is due to the untiring efforts of the Supervisor, who refused to ship any of the records until all were exactly as desired by the Census Bureau. With the shipment of the last portfolio, the official census of the Fifth Congressional District became known, but only to the Supervisor. His lips are sealed, however, and no one will know the population of Plainfield, Union County or the district until it is given out from Washington.

Mr. Hoagland is unstinted in his comment upon the work done by his enumerators. They were a bright, intelligent force and it is to their credit that he ascribes the success of the taking of the census in this district.

The Supervisor has written a letter to Washington, telling of the courtesy extended to him by the newspapers throughout the district. The school children also come in for their share of credit.

There has been a lot of speculation as to the population of this city and wagers have been made in many quarters. It will be some time before the result will be announced by the United States Census Bureau.

ALMOST BITTEN TO DEATH BY SKEETERS

After an all-night battle with mosquitoes in the Watchung mountains near Morristown, two Montclair men and a Newarker, returned to their homes yesterday with little more than their lives. Their faces, arms, hands and ankles were livid from hundreds of punctures made by the pests. They declared that they had spent a night of torture which no sum of money would tempt them to endure again.

The three men—Assistant Fire Chief Patrick J. Farrell and Robert Jones, of Montclair, and William Loughlin, of Newark—became stranded on a steep hill in a sand road after nightfall. They had left Montclair Thursday afternoon in Mr. Farrell's automobile for Okanico Lake on a fishing expedition, intending to return in the evening.

They had good luck, Mr. Loughlin catching a bass weighing six and a quarter pounds with a bullfrog bait. It was after dark when the three men started for Montclair, and believing that they could return by a nearer way than they had traveled to the lake, Mr. Farrell set out in a different route.

When about seven miles from the lake Farrell saw a long steep hill ahead of him and he put on full power. He soon discovered that he was going through sand about six inches deep, and although he kept on all power, the machine came to a stop long before the top of the hill was reached. The men looked for a light in some friendly farmhouse in which to get assistance, but none could be seen.

It was not long, however, before the men discovered that the place was alive with mosquitoes, and they were beset with the pests. They tried to turn the heavy car in order to go back, but this they found impossible, neither could they drive the machine backwards.

Seeing that there was no other plan of escape the men set to work clearing a way through the sand for the wheels of the automobile to travel on. It was slow work, their hands and feet being the only implements, and there was no let up on the part of the mosquitoes, which kept up a constant attack on the men, almost driving them mad.

It was nearly daylight before they got a clearance through the sand that enabled them to drive over the hill and finally reach Montclair. Their faces, neck and hands present a pitiable sight, being covered with bites of the venomous insects, and are greatly swollen.

Farrell says that he cannot imagine more severe punishment than they went through during the time they were on that hill.

Stephen Haff, the manager of the Ritz store, is under the treatment of an eye specialist. His right optic contained a number of fine particles of dust, causing inflammation. The doctor has removed the cause, but Mr. Haff will have to wear smoked glasses for a time.

The Rev. Hugh Birckhead, rector of St. George's church, New York, and Mrs. Birckhead are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter at Newport, where they are spending the summer. Mrs. Birckhead was Miss Carrie Hall, daughter of Mrs. David Prescott Hall, former residents of this city, with many friends in the community.

CHALMERS WINS

Piston Displacement Event With Flat Front in The Johnston's Drive Hill Climb Saturday

Beating the Time Made by 2 60 H.P. Stearns, 2 Model 17 Buick, 1 Berkshire, 1 S. P. 0, Etc.

The same CHALMERS "FORTY" stock chassis also won the second Prize in the free for all event, time 1 minute 22 2-5 seconds, being defeated only by the 200 H. P. Fiat by only 2 2-5 seconds. The Houpt Rockwell ran third.

We only entered this Chalmers stock chassis in these two events, and we won one first and one second prize. It took a 200 H. P. FIAT racing car driven by DePalma to beat us 2 2-5 seconds.. Wherever a Chalmers is entered it generally wins. This again demonstrates that the Chalmers is the equal of any stock car made regardless of price. A Chalmers "Thirty" also won the second prize in the Glidden tour defeating a score of high priced cars.

"THIRD DEGREE" INQUIRY.

In the near future the special Senate committee oppointed by the Vice President under the Heyburn resolution will begin an investigation of the so-called "third degree" methods of police officers. The committee consists of Senators Brandegee, Borah, Brown, Stone and Overman.

It is probable that Senators Brandegee and Overman will take charge of the investigation of police methods in the East and that Senators Borah, Brown and Stone will investigate the methods of the police in the West. In this way it is purposed not only to save time, but also to save the expense of bringing witnesses from the Far West to Washington. The Western Senators as a sub-committee will take the evidence in the Western cities. It is expected that a report will be made to Congress at its next session.

VINCENT BOVAY WAS OVERCOME BY THE HEAT.

Vincent Bovay, who was arrested at Watchung, yesterday as a suspicious character, it was learned today, is a respectable New York business merchant broken down in health. He went to Watchung for the purpose of stopping at an Italian boarding-house for a time. He was overcome with the heat and stopped at the Watchung postoffice.

Mr. Bovay's strange actions aroused suspicion. He talked about the "Black Hand" society being after him, and Postmaster Geo. Schmidt's curosity was aroused. Today Mr. Bovay was examined and it was finally decided to send him to Dr. Cooley's sanitarium until he recovers from his temporary illness.

NEW JERSEY RETALIATES

State Resents Discrimination Shown Against Its Automobilists.

MOTOR VEHICLE CHIEF ACTS.

J. B. R. Smith Sends a Sharp Letter to the Penna. State Highway Commissioner—Auto War Is Now Begun.

Feeling that New Jersey automobilists are being persecuted in New York, Pennsylvania and other adjacent States in an effort to break down all automobile restrictions here and throw New Jersey's good roads open to unrestricted automobile traffic, J. B. R. Smith, State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, is considering a method of retaliation that is likely to result seriously for non-resident automobile owners and drivers.

Beginning with Pennsylvania, Mr. Smith Saturday wrote a letter to the Highways Commissioner of that State, calling his attention to the fact that the police authorities of his Commonwealth refuse to recognize New Jersey licenses. He adds that unless there is a modification of that attitude he will feel constrained to refuse to Pennsylvania automobilists in the future the privileges of the "tourist" amendment to the New Jersey law.

By this amendment, which was passed last winter, non-resident automobilists may be given tourists' licenses without cost. These permit the use of New Jersey roads for four periods of two days each, or one period of eight days, in each year. They may be refused at the discretion of the Commissioner.

These tourists' licenses have already become popular with non-residents who desire to tour this State and their abolition would doubtless have a far reaching effect. Commissioner Smith's letter to Joseph W. Hunter, the tSate Highways Commissioner of Pennsylvania, in part follows:

"New Jersey motorists desiring to operate their cars in Pennsylvania have on several occasions called the attention of the department to the construction placed on the provisions of the Pennsylvania reciprocal law relating to motor vehicles, which provides that privileges granted to non-residents 'shall not apply to residents of those States that do not extend similar privileges to residents' of Pennsylvania. The privileges referred to are that non-residents shall be exempt from the provisions of the act for a period of ten days if they have complied with the registration laws of the State in which they reside.

"To New Jersey motorists reciprocity is denied, notwithstanding that the New Jersey law provides non-resident privileges of eight days upon registration and the payment of a nominal fee, and yet in dealing with residents of other States, many of whose registration laws are in many respects wholly dissimilar to those of Pennsylvania, a liberal construction of the reciprocal provision is made, and residents of other States are accordingly extended courtesies which are denied residents of New Jersey. In addition to this the police departments of many Pennsylvania municipalities have issued orders specially directing that the automobile law shall be strictly enforced against residents of New Jersey.

"For this reason two of the largest clubs of New Jersey have by resolution, and many motorist have personally, urged me to exercise my prerogative of the department and refrain from issuing taurists' licenses to residents of Pennsylvania.

"I dislike very much to pursue such a course, and will not do so except as a last resort. Retaliatory measures seem to me to be methods of warfare coming to us from a less enlightened civilization, to be used only when individual rights can be obtained in no other way. I am confident that some way may be found whereby citizens of New Jersey will not be discriminated against while touring in your State. If your law is to be strictly construed, I am sure that your authorities will upon reflection, so construe it to affect all alike. If a liberal construction is to be employed, I trust all will receive the benefits. * * *

"I am not unaware of the popular demand among motorists of your own and of other States for the action of your authorities have taken. These motorists have felt aggrieved at the attitude of the New Jersey Legislature in not providing non-resident privileges without cost, and they have not hesitated to advise persons in authority in your state to retaliate on the innocent motorists of New

MISS FLORENCE MARTIN BRIDE OF E. L. PIERSON

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Martin, of Grove street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Bertha Martin, to Ernest Lyman Pierson, of Chester, N. J. The ceremony took place on Saturday at Santa Anna, California, where Mr. Pierson is engaged in the cement and lumber business.

The bride is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and until this June was a teacher in the Franklin School. She is a graduate of the Trenton State Normal School. Mr. Pierson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Pierson, of Chester, and like his bride has many friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Pierson will reside at Santa Anna.

CAPACITY OF THE SOUL, REV. MR. MATHIEWS TOPIC

An exhortation to the members of his flock not to follow the light that shines in another man's life, but to follow the light that shines in their own souls, was a point brought out by the Rev. Franklin Mathiews, of Scotch Plains, in his sermon to the congregation of the First Baptist church yesterday morning. Mr. Mathiews who is the pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, occupied the local pulpit in place of the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, and choose for his topic, "The Capacity and Capabilities of the Soul."

Mr. Mathiews' sermon was more in the nature of an analysis of the soul, and more especially of its ability to and capacity of moulding the Christian. The soul's capacity, declared Mr. Mathiews, was that of partaking of the divine nature, while its capabilities consisted of faith, morality, knowledge, self control, godliness, love of the brethren and love itself. In speaking of the capacity of the soul he said that the ability to partake of divine nature was one of those exceeding great and precious God-given grants and was inherent in the man when born.

That it was not the man's manifest nature, but his own personality, which made him a Christian and gave him an intimate knowledge of the Lord was another truth emphasized by the visiting preacher. This fact was distinctly brought out by Mr. Mathiews in speaking of the capabilities of the soul. He further declared that it was not sham faith which gave the Christian a knowledge of the Lord, but a true faith which made the acquaintance sincere. Mr. Mathiews also dwelt for some time in his sermon on what a Christian conception of true morality should be.

Rev. Dr. Chambliss preached at the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

FINAL DIVORCE DECREE GIVEN MRS. RALEIGH.

In the Court of Chancery, Mrs. Beulah Raleigh, of this city, on Saturday was given a final decree in divorce from her husband, John Raleigh. She was awarded the custody of their only child, Mary, and the right to resume her maiden name, Beulah Waters.

Robert Newton Crane, Mrs. Raleigh's lawyer, applied for the divorce for her on the ground of cruelty. Raleigh deserted his wife less than two years after their marriage which took place July 12, 1903. He is now residing at Westerly, Rhode Island. Mrs. Raleigh did not ask for alimony.

Rain Ends a Picnic.

Twenty-five members of the Y. P. S. C. E. of Hope chapel enjoyed a picnic Saturday afternoon at the "Notch," Scotch Plains. A thoroughly informal social hour was enjoyed, followed by a picnic supper. The shower which came down at 6:30 ended up the affair, sending the picnickers scampering for shelter. W. Morris Hunter and Miss Eunice Eckert were in charge of the arrangements for the picnic.

Alice Ferris.

Alice Ferris, colored, of 217 Plainfield avenue, died yesterday afternoon after a lingering illness from heart trouble. She was fifty years of age. Funeral services will be held from Calvary Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside Cemetery.

The Next Excursion.

The next church excursion from this city to Asbury Park will be on Thursday, when the members and friends of the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park Avenue Baptist churches will take their annual journey to the seashore.

COURT WARNS HUSBAND AND WIFE TO KEEP APART

The martial troubles of Mr. and Mrs. Caesar Taylor, of Westervelt avenue, were aired in the borough court this morning with the result that although Caesar received a suspended sentence on an assault charge, he and Mrs. Taylor have come to a tacit understanding that that they will both avoid each other's company for some time in the future. Caesar objected to the manner in which his wife was accustomed, he alleged, to be in the company of other men. Mrs. Taylor said that she felt that as she was earning her own living, it was all right for her to do as she pleased.

The climax to the affair came yesterday, when Caesar strenuously objected to her conduct. Mrs. Taylor claimed that her husband assaulted her while Caesar declared that he was acting only in self defence. As there were no witnesses to the encounter, Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence in Caesar's case, with a warning to both that they must keep the peace in the future.

PRECIOUSNESS OF CHRIST, REV DR. ANDERSON'S TOPIC

At the union service of the First Presbyterian, First Baptist, Trinity Reformed and First M. E. Churches in the First Presbyterian church last night, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, preached a helpful sermon to a large audience, taking for his text, "Unto you which believe, He is precious." Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, made the prayers and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, read the Scriptures.

Dr. Anderson said in part, 'Christ is precious to the believer because of His dual nature. He, who was the son of God, and unlike you and me, in another sense, possessed a human nature. The preciousness of Christ is seen then, in this that God comes very near to us in His son."

The preciousness of Christ to the believer is found in this fact, that Christ is man's redeemer and example when a man is converted, he can then lok to Christ as the great example—the great ideal.

There is preciousness in the wonderful love of Christ. Napoleon said while he was a prisoner in St. Helena: 'Alexander, Caesar and I have founded empires on force and they have fallen to pieces; Jesus Christ founded His Kingdom on love and it is a kingdom that remains." More than that it is a great and growing empire.

Christ is precious to the believer, because He is an ever abiding comparison. Dou you wonder why the great martyr, Ignatius, was able to suffer for Christ as he did? The answer is to be favored in this that Christ stod by him and strengthened him. He said "I am God's wheat, the lions can but qual me into the flower for God's bread."

It was the wonderful presence of Christ that enabled Ignatius to endure. It is the presence of Christ in our lives that will help us to endure.

FIVE HUNDRED NOTICES FOR SIDEWALKS' REPAIRS.

Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett has begun a campaign to compel property owners to repair their sidewalks. A great many complaints have been made at the commissioner's office by pedestrians regarding the lack of sidewalks and in a large number of cases where sidewalks are laid unevenly or carelessly.

Mr. Gavett has sent out 500 notices to property owners who have failed to live up to the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance concerning the Construction, Maintenance and Repair of Sidewalks," approved April 10, 1899.

Prompt response has been met with by Mr. Gavett in a number of cases. He is pleased with the readiness some property owners have exhibited towards the movement for better sidewalks.

To those property owners who ignore the notices sent by the commissioner, this extract from the ordinance may be of interest: "In default of compliance herewith, the Common Council may cause the required work to be done and paid for, and make the expense and costs, with interest, a lien on the land, or may enforce payment in any court of competent jurisdiction."

Dr. Fred C. Sutphen, of Bernardsville, and Dr. Smalley, of Gladstone, were in Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, visiting their cousin, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of 225 East Fifth street.

FRESH AIR HOME NEEDS

An Appeal for Funds is Made at Sunday Afternoon Service.

ONLY $1,000 FOR THE SEASON.

And the Expenses of the Camp Will Be at Least $2,500—250 are Being Accommodated There Now.

A goodly sized crowd was in attendance at the services held at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the First Baptist church and entitled "First Baptist Sunday." The meeting was lead by George A. Chapman and Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss was the afternoon's speaker. During the services, solos were rendered by Miss Ruth Harris and Miss Hazel Hattfield, contralto member of the First Baptist choir, while Howard Case, organist at that church, presided at the piano.

The afternoon's gathering was encouraging to Miss Sarah Cprry, who has charge of the camp, as well as to those who are actively engaged in the promotion of the home, because it showed to them that there is still much interest among Plainfielders in the good work that is being carried on there. However as was brought out during the afternoon by both Miss Curry and Mr. Chapman, there is need of interest in the work, especially in the financial end this year.

The camp has a yearly income of $3,000, which was made possible by the Hewitt fund. This money is devoted to the maintenance of the institution. This year the sum available from this fund will be cut down to but little over $1,000 with which the summer's work can't be carried out. This condition of affairs arises from the fact that it has been necessary to spend nearly $2,000 of that income in the repair and rejuvination of the buildings and furniture.

Consequently Miss Curry through the columns of The Daily Press, sends out an appeal to her faithful Plainfield friends to come to her aid. She has need of both finances and food, of the latter especially milk, and any contributions to the good work will be gratefully received by her. She is also in need of baby carriages, and be they large or small, she will be pleased to receive them. The camp is as popular as ever this year and there are at present nearly 250 guests enrolled there, including mothers and children.

JOSEPH H. WRIGHT DIES, AGED SEVENTY-FOUR YEARS

Joseph H. Wright, widower, aged seventy-four years, of 539 West Front street, died Saturday, following an attack of kidney trouble of which he was a sufferer for years. He was taken ill on Friday night. Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan was summoned, but Mr. Wright did not respond and on Saturday morning he passed away. He had been a resident of this city for six years, removing here from New York, the year following his wife's death.

No immediate relatives survive him. Herman Tietgan, his executor, is a cousin.

Mr. Wright was born in New York City. He received his education in a private school in Hackensack. He entered the employ of a manufacturing jeweller and learned the trade. During the Civil war, he was a shipping clerk for the Federal Government. Later he became a manufacturing jeweller. He was successful and remained in active business until he was fifty-nine years old. He was a thirty-second degree mason. He was also a member of Ancient Lodge, Triune chapter, Trinity Commandery, Mystic Shrine, Scottish Rite, and Rose Croix of New York city and of the Asbestos Club of this city.

The funeral services take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Miss Lucy Wooley, 539 West Front street. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church will conduct the services. The body will then be taken to New York city, where the Masonic funeral service will be conducted at the Masonic Temple, Twenty-third street, and the interment will take place at Woodlawn cemetery along side the body of his wife.

Clarence A. Lamont, one of Assistant Health Officer O'Brien's aides, left on his vacation today. Mr. Lamont will visit his parents at Farmingdale for several days and from there he will leave for an extended tour through Canada.

MAN AND WIFE DRUNK; THEY TAKE THE PLEDGE

On their taking the pledge, Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence in the cases against Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ward, of 356 Somerset street, this morning in the borough court. A year old baby belonging to the two was turned over to Miss Holly, of the Charities, until the couple are adjudged competent of taking care of their young one.

The two were found on Somerset street Saturday night in a stupidly intoxicated condition. To the mother's arms was clinging the baby. Chief Marshal Weiss, who made the arrest, was forced to call in a nurse and a doctor to attend to the little one, whose condition was pitiful.

When the facts of the case were brought out this morning Recorder Dolliver decided that it would be for the best interests of all concerned to turn the baby over to Miss Holly. The latter will probably find a place for the child in the Day Nursery. The recorder then suspended sentence in the case of the parents.

The name of the place where the couple got drunk was obtained and a complaint against the proprietor will be made to the license committee of the North Plainfield Common Council.

THE "IMPORTANT DAILYS" AS PASTOR SEES THEM

Laying emphasis on the fact that the Christian religion is one in which every day devotion plays an important part, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, made a strong address to his flock yesterday. He choose for his text, "The Three Important Dailys."

Mr. Goodrich selected three verses of Scripture in which the word "daily" occurred from which he choose his text. He selected first the Lord's prayer, in which the Christian asks for his "daily bread." This, declared Mr. Goodrich, showed that the Lord wished his followers to ask for one thing at a time. Following up this thought, he brought out the fact that the Lord helps the man to bear his burden daily, and that the future burdens will be taken care of as they come along. For a third example of his "great daily," Mr. Goodrich pointed to the passage in the scripture, which says that a daily sacrifice must be made by the true Christian. Mr. Goodrich used numerous examples with which to illustrate his sermon and with which he impressed his thoughts upon his flock.

MISS LINDSAY A BRIDE

She Becomes the Wife of Joseph Bennett.

Miss Bertha May Lindsay, of Mountain avenue, and Joseph Bennett, of Leland avenue, were married on Saturday night at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsay, at The Netherwood Farms. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Burden M. Galloway, of Garwood, were the attendants. The couple will reside on Leland avenue, on their return from a honeymoon trip.

Funeral of Mrs. Alberts.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Alberts, who died in Scotch Plains, Friday was held this morning at 8 o'clock from her late residence on Montague avenue, and at 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's R. C. church, where a requiem mass was said for the repose of her soul by Father Schwartz. The pall bearers were William Lee, August Frentz, George Wall, Charles Yeoig, John Grollotte and Frank Klemmer. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Martin's Funeral.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Eliza M. Martin, widow of Luther Martin, were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from her home, 28 Linden avenue. The services were conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and were largely attended. Interment was in the Methodist cemetery. The pall bearers were Andrew Lutkins, Charles M. Hummer Frank DeCamp, William Burrows.

Tailor Shop Looted.

Twelve suits of clothes and forty pairs of trousers were stolen from the tailoring shop of Nathan Freeman, 202 Watchung avenue, sometime after midnight Sunday morning. Entrance was gained by a rear window. The garments were mostly those of patrons who had left them with Freeman to be cleaned and pressed. The police say they have no clue to work on.

EBEL GETS HEARING; DECISION IS RESERVED

Recorder Charles M. Dolliver in the borough court this morning reserved his decision until next Monday in the case against Carl Ebel, of 223 Grove street, who is charged with disorderly conduct. Ebel was arrested early in the morning of July 4, on complaint of Alonzo Terry, the latter alleging that Ebel had called him abusive names. Ebel denied the specific charge this morning and Recorder Dolliver after hearing the evidence in the case reserved his decision for one week. William G. De Meza represented the complainant, while S. S. Swackhamer was counsel for Ebel.

TRINITY ENDEAVORERS' LAWN FESTIVAL TONIGHT

The threatening weather on Saturday afternoon and the rain in the evening interfered materially with the Japanese lawn festival at East Front and Church streets, by the Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church. The members in charge decided to continue the festival tonight when they hope to dispose of all their fancy articles, etc.

The large lawn was attractively decorated with emblems of the flowery Kingdom, presenting a real Japanese picture. Even those who presided at the various tables and booths wore costumes typical of Japan. Throughout the afternoon there was a fair attendance. In the evening the rain put a damper on the attendance, but not until the young people had sold much of the cakes and a large quantity of ice cream, in addition to other things it was then decided to continue the affair tonight.

The affair was in charge of a general committee comprising Miss May Randolph, chairman; Miss Edna Dilts, Miss Edna Cole, Miss Minnie Hahn, Miss Marie Hahn, Miss Myra Dunavan, Miss Elsie Dunavan, Alfred W. Dunavan, Elmer Gayle and Russell Doeringer. Those in charge of the various tables and boths were as follows:

Cake, Miss Myra Dunavan, Miss Edna Dilts; lemonade, Miss Elsie Dunavan; candy, Miss Lucie Coriell, Miss Harriet Randall; Japanese novelties, the Misses Minnie and Marie Hahn; ice cream, Elmer Gayle. Of course, other members of the Endeavor society assisted to make the festival a success. During the afternoon phonograph music helped to attract patrons and add enjoyment to the occasion. Tonight the grounds will be brilliantly illuminated and there will be many attractions.

Funeral of P. J. McNamara.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Patrick J. McNamara were held from his late residence, 124 Central avenue, at 8 o'clock this morning and from St. Mary's church at 9, where a solemn requiem mass was celebrated. Father Bogan officiated at the mass and was assisted by Fathers Sciola and Hogan. The pall bearers were Edward T. Lynch, John S. Payne, Richard Birmingham, Dennis O'Keefe, Patrick J. Reville and John A. Connelly. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Services For Edward C. Thomas.

The funeral of Edward C. Thomas, who died last Friday at South Stirling, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from DeMott's undertaking parlors. Mr. Thomas, who was thirty years of age, came to South Stirling from Weehawken, and died of a lingering illness, which had completely undermined his health. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Shamrocks Victors.

The Shamrocks defeated the East End colored giants on the Fillmore avenue lot this morning by a score of 7 to 5. The feature of the game was an unassisted double play by Ed Jonas. Kyle and Mullen were the battery for the victors, while Stepor and Sapino worked for the Giants.

A Farewell Service.

The Plainfield Rescue Mission will hold a farewell service tonight at 8 o'clock in the W. C. T. U. hall for Thomas Leach. Mr. Leach starts west on Wednesday as a missionary among the miners. There will be special music. All are welcome.

Col. Rheinherdsen to Speak.

Colonel Rheinherdsen, of New York, will speak at the Salvation Army tent, Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

John P. Daly, of West Front street, is sojourning at Seabright.

RUNYON THRILLS CROWD

Congressional Candidate's First Speech Has the True Ring to It.

WILL REPRESENT THE PEOPLE.

Popular Judge Says He Will Have no Masters—Promises to Issue Statement Telling Where He Stands on Issues.

Declaring that if nominated and elected he would be a true representative of the people and would neither be a master nor serve any master, Judge William N. Runyon thrilled a big crowd at the Elizabeth Sixth Ward Republican outing on Saturday afternoon. As he frankly and eloquently spoke to the Republicans gathered at Matthews' grove, near Roselle, he was interrupted time and again by spontaneous outbursts of applause as he made telling hits. A rousing "three cheers for our next Congressman!" was given at the conclusion of his remarks in a fashion that made it plain that he had won the hearts and support of the Republicans within the sound of his voice.

"I believe in coming face to face with the men whose support I ask," said the judge, "and during the next few weeks I shall devote my time in talking and conferring with them. It is better for them to know me and for me to know them; for me to understand where I stand. I don't want the vote of any man who does not believe in me and no man should give his support to me who does not believe that I am the man to represent him at Washington.

"The Republican party makes promises to the people. I believe that those promises should be kept. If nominated and elected, I pledge you to the utmost of my ability, I will strive for the fulfillment of the party pledges. I do not believe in gaudy, rain-bow promises. If nominated, I shall stand upon the partly platform. If not nominated, I shall support the man who is nominated.

"My good friends in Plainfield asked me to become a candidate. They did this, I believe, because they believe in me. They acted in all sincerity. I shall act with all sincerety to them and to all the people. All shades of political ideas within the Republican party were represented in the signed petitions presented to me asking that I become a candidate.

"In a few days, I shall issue a statement setting forth frankly, honestly and unequivocally where I stand on the issues of the day and the party problems. I want you to know where I stand and I don't want your vote if you don't agree with me. I want to say right now that there will be no personalities, no mud-slinging in this campaign so far as I am concerned. The people are not interested in mud-slinging—they want to know the facts and want to know where their candidates stand. I want to be a representative of the people and will be a representative of the people if they see fit to nominate and elect me."

Surrogate George Parrott made a speech in which he lauded the Taft administration. Other speakers included James MacMasters, president of the Union County League of Republican Clubs, and Charles Wagner, president of the Downtown Republican Club, of Elizabeth. President Wagner told the Sixth Ward Club that the Downtown club had endorsed Runyon, and suggested that the Sixth Warders do likewise. They did.

In the crowd were County Clerk James C. Calvert, Sheriff Robert Kirkland, Edward Bauer, George Smith, John J. Stamler and others prominent in Union county politics.

MISS BEEKMAN'S FUNERAL WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral of Miss Caroline V. D. Beekman was held Saturday afternoon from the late home on Clinton avenue, and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including several societies of the church.

The burial was in Somerville and the pall bearers were Samuel and Edwin Beekman, Charles C. Randolph, Blanchard Randolph, Samuel Saums and Louis V. Tallamy.

Young People's Conference.

Miss Josephine Petrie, of East Sixth street, will have charge of one of six mission study classes at the Presbyterian Young People's Conference to be held at Pocono Pines, Pa., August 3 to 10. Miss Petrie will be one of the representatives of the Crescent avenue church at the conference.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

WHIPPANY MAY BE WITHOUT A SCHOOL.

Whippany, July 18.—As the result of an intense local fight Whippany may be without a suitable school building for the accommodation of its hundred or more children when the fall term begins. At a meeting held at the Troy Hills School building Thursday afternoon, a proposition to buy a site and erect a modern schol building was rejected. The public meeting had been called by the Board of Education of Hanover Township after the present school building here had been condemned for school purposes by C. J. Baxter, State superintendent of public instruction.

While all are willing to concede the need of a new building to take the place of the antiquated structure now used, yet it is claimed by members of the board that the local trustees are holding up the proposition because of a disagreement as to the sites.

The vote Friday was for a building on a tract known as the Hanson lot, in the rear of the present schoolhouse. The land is low, and it is said it would be impossible to have a cellar under a building because of its proximity of the Whippany River. It is said a proposal involving a new site would stand a good chance of being accepted.

As a result of Thursday's meeting it is expected that the State Board of Education will now take a hand in the matter especially as State Superintendent Baxter has already condemned the present school building, which has been in use for over twenty-five years.

At present pupils graduating from any school in the township are compelled to go to Caldwell, Madison or Morristown to attend a high school. In preparing the plans for the structure upon which the vote was taken Thursday, attention had been given to details of rooms and halls, so that with a minimum expense the building could be used as a high school.

REFORMATORY BOY KEEPS HIS PLEDGE.

Rahway, July 18.—Superintendent Frank Moore, of the New Jersey Reformatory, Thursday placed one of the inmates who had lost by death a near relative on his honor and allowed the young man to go to his home in New Brunswick unattended for the funeral.

The young man was called into the office and after a talk, during which some good advice was given, Superintendent Dr. Moore told him that he was going to allow him to go and would place him on his honor, giving him money to pay his expenses to and from New Brunswick. He told him that he expected him to report back to him as soon as possible after the services. The young man promising left the institution at 8 a. m., and before 2 o'clock p. m. was back again.

This is the second time within a year that Superintendent Moore has placed inmates on their honor to attend the funeral of relatives, and in both cases found the young men true to the trust placed in them.

TWO COMING CROP REPORTS.

Cotton on August 2 and General on August 8.

Washington, July 18.—Two important crop reports will be issued by the crop reporting board of the Department of Agriculture next month. The first will be that showing the condition of the cotton crop on July 25. This report will be issued on Tuesday, August 2, at noon, Eastern time. The other, to be issued Monday, August 8, at noon, Eastern time, will be a summary of the conditions of the principal crops on August 1, which will give the following information:

Preliminary estimate of yield and quality of winter wheat; condition on August 1 (or at time of harvest) of spring wheat, corn, oats, barley, potatoes, tobacco and flax; acreage and condition of buckwheat; acreage and production of rye and hay, and stocks of oats in farmers' hands on August 1. A supplemental report on minor crops will be issued on August 9.

RACE TROUBLE IN SCHOOL.

The appointment of Mary Malson a girl of negro and Indian blood, as teacher in Primary School No. 7 has agitated the white residents, and protests are being made to the mem-members of the Elizabeth Board of Education.

She will teach a class of white pupils in Room 1. The school is located in an aristocratic neighborhood.

"Miss Malson was in great demand as a substitute teacher during her last year in the normal school," said Richard E. Clement, Superintendent of Schools. "Principals of several of the schools made a special request that she be sent to them. She is an excellent teacher and unusually bright."

Miss Malson is almost white, and is very prepossessing.

LOVABLE WOMAN.

Very lovable is the woman who has cultivated the disposition to see the good and not the evil side of human nature, who can be severe with her own failings and excuse the faults of others.

We are told that she is a dull, uninteresting creature; and if we take the trouble to look into the matter, we find that she does not laugh at her neighbor's pet weakness; she does not enjoy hitting out right and left at the world at large and is always ready with a plea for unseen reasons, which, if they could be revealed, would go a long way toward modifying harsh judgment.

Our lovable woman may not be witty, she may be a little prosy, but she it is to whom we go when in trouble for sympathy, and confide with a feeling that our secret will not be torn to shreds as soon as our back is turned.

said a worried administrator, "would keep a detailed statement of his assets and liabilities, (especially liabilities) and leave such statement in a as he should do, every estate could be settled much more promptly and economically."

This is good advice. Your affairs are then in proper shape to be administered—thanks to your foresight and the Safe Deposit Box.

Pianos & Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually,

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

The Newark Y. M. C. A. is scedduled to play the local association nine on Crescent Oval, Saturday, and the following Saturday, the Orange Y. M. C. A. will play in this city.

"Jack" Martin, who is playing an infield position for the New Brunswick team, is now leading the club in batting. It is a rare thing for him not to get at least two hits in a game.

Peacock, who played an outfield position for Y. M. C. A. Saturday, displayed great form, both in fielding and hitting.

Manager Listman has evidently made a ten strike in signing Frederickson, the twirler. The young man is showing the way for all the pitchers in this vicinity. His work on Saturday was gilt edge. He is a son of Captain Frederickson of the police department.

Jersey touring in your State, in the hope that they might thereby force New Jersey motorists to insist that our Legislature give free privilege to non-residents. This is a spirit of oppressive coercion which, if forced to its logical conclusion, would stop all motor travel between the States, of which I am confident that in their cooler moments they will greatly regret as unbecoming fairminded men."

PREACHER ACQUITTED.

Paterson, July 18.—Rev. Henry L. Blair, formerly of Paterson, now occupying a pulpit in Livermore, Ia., was tried Friday before Judge Scott, in the Court of Special Sessions, on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The charge was preferred by William R. Forfar, of 86 Clinton street, this city. Judge Scott decided that there was no false pretense in the case and Mr. Blair was acquitted.

The preacher was arrested on July 1, when he arrived at Paterson at the end of a 1,300-mile trip to a wedding. Mr. Blair was well known in Paterson, on account of his connections with religious work here. He was incarcerated in the county jail at Paterson on July 1 at 3 p. m., and was confined there until 9 o'clock in the morning of July 2.

Mr. Blair feels and did feel very keenly the disgrace of being arrested on such a charge and being confined in the common jail, and that he has been considerably injured by the publication given to his arrest.

TAKEN TO HOSPITALS THREE TIMES IN DAY.

Camden, July 18.—Within three hours, Patrick Draham, twenty-five years old, was taken to hospitals here three different times Friday afternoon. Falling in a fit at Seventh and Market streets, he was hurried to the Homeopathic Hospital. He left the institution in a short time, and an hour later he was taken to Cooper Hospital in the city ambulance with a lacerated chin, having fallen in another fit at Second and Federal streets.

Draham refused to remain in either of the hospitals, and, fearing more fits in the street, he was taken to the city hall, where he was again taken ill and was removed to Cooper Hospital, where he remained. The man declined to give his address, and it is believed his condition was brought about by the heat.

LITERARY

The National Magazine for August will be found crowded with interesting and timely reading. In "Affairs at Washington," Joe Mitchell Chapple reflects the general weariness and feeling of relief with which members of both houses closed up the last gaps in imperatively needed legislation, and turned from the struggle of contending interests for recognition, to the homeward journey or the summer outing. Cloak-room anecdotes, senatorial persiflage and references to the principal events of an increasingly strenuous national progress present many tidbits to the appreciative reader.

Mr. Roosevelt's article, which leads the July Scribner, contains one of the most interesting episodes of his trip, the journey which he took alone, cutting loose from the rest of the party, and making a trek to the head-waters of an equatorial river, "The Guaso Nyero," in pursuit particularly of the oryx, "a bold and hard fighter, which when cornered, will charge a man." During this excursion Mr. Roosevelt took his own photographs, a number of which are reproduced in the article. "These days alone in the wilderness went by very pleasantly," he says, "and, as it was for not too long, I thoroughly enjoyed being entirely to myself so far as white men were concerned." Later he joined the main safari and heard an account from Kermit of an exciting lion hunt. One incident of this journey was that, when at Neri, he recived from Peary the following cable: "Your farewell was a royal mascot. The Pole is ours."

The July Metropolitan is a "Roosevelt number," with a striking cover cartoon of the ex-President and a leading article, "Lo! The Conquering Hero," in which Walter Wellman offers an interesting explanation of how and why Roosevelt captured Europe. An article that will cause a sensation is "The Capitalization of Amateur Athletics," by James B. Connolly, bare-handed attack on the methods of the Amateur Athletic Union and its business connection with the Spauldings.

Two articles in the Strand Magazine for July are of exceptional interest. These are "The Assassination of Plehve" by one of the Assassins and "What is the Practical Use of Polar Research." In the former article the secrets of the Russian Revolutionary Party are revealed to the public (for the first time) by a member of the terrible "Fighting Organization." There is a tragic note running through the entire narrative which renders it highly interesting.

The July Everybody's celebrates the glorious Fourth on the cover in most amusing fashion, and within it contains a generous supply of varied material of uncommon interest and value. "A City's Dream of a City," by Ernest Poole, is an inspiring article, well-chosen to lead the number, for it voices ideals and aspirations as worthy as those we honor in the national holiday. "Fake Mining Schemes," by Emerson Hough, is a revelation of the manifold frauds that feed on green investors and cast odium on a legitimate industry. Also it suggests a remedy in certain legislation that is badly needed.

The latest periodical war scare has an English source this time. Mr. Gerard Fiennes, a writer of some prominence, predicts a conflict between this country and Japan before 1915. "Japan," he says, "will fight the United States very much for the same reason that prompted Bismark to fight France." Europe, he believes, would not interfere to save the Philippines. Here, however, his logic fails; for if Europe considers that Spain was harshly dealt with, how would the matter be mended by the islands going to Japan? War-making on paper is the refuge of sensational writers, when other topics fail to interest. If all the paper predictions of war came true, the world would be a miserable place to live in.—The Christian Herald.

Howe Wins Mascot Cup.

Franklin Howe who married Miss Lillian Fancher, of Fanwood, in October, 1907, is the father of the mascot of the class of 1907 of Williams College. At the recent reunion of the class, Franklin Howe, Jr., was found to be the first boy baby born to a member of the class. As a result, a large silver loving cup was given him. Last year Erwin Leland, of Westervelt avenue, won the cup for being the father of the first boy born to a member of the class of 1906 of Williams College.

Mrs. Eliza H. Williams.

Mrs. Eliza H. Williams, widow of George Williams, died this morning at the home of Nicholas Mauger, 705 West Seventh street. She was ninety years of age. The funeral services will be held at Mr. Mauger's home on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Interment will be made at Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Dr. Yerkes Daughter to Wed.

The wedding of Miss Hannah Y. Flanders, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, and George E. Webb, a banker at San Angelo, Tex., will take place tomorrow afternoon. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will officiate.

Nicholas Myers' Father Ill.

Peter D. Myers, father of Patrolman Nicholas Myers, of this city, is seriously ill at his home at No. 11 Stubing place, Sea Side, Rockaway Beach, L. I. He is a former commander of Dupont post, G. A. R., of Brooklyn.

LININGS.

Since the double skirt has come into fashion once again the question of the underskirt or lining must be most carefully considered or the gown will be a failure.

Soft silk or satin or silk finished linings are choosen preferably, and then a deep facing or flounce of the material is put on, over which falls the gown, and if the lining is not perfectly cut and fitted, then the task of making the gown is most difficult, if not impossible.

With the transparent materials often two and sometimes three are used in order to gain the desired shade or color, but this again is so difficult a task that the amateur dressmaker will secure much better results if she uses a more expensive lining of silk or satin and a more closely woven fabric, not so close but that the color and sheen of the satin will show through.

For the moment the exaggeratedly tight skirts are the style, and even when the upper skirts are full the linings are still extremely scant, so that the same effect is given, especially when the fullness is gathered with the bias fold or band around the ankles.

This fashion requires to be most carefully dealt with, or the gown will look vulgar and ugly, in fact, two much care cannot be given in copying the original models, as the fashions of the moment are so exaggerated as to be unbecoming to the majority of women.

REMEDIES EASILY USED.

To cure hangnails, which are due to excessive dryness of the skin surrounding the nails, try rubbing the base of the nail every night with vaseline or mutton tallow.

If your eyes are weak and are easily tired when reading and sewing it probably means that your general health is below par.

A nourishing diet and plenty of sleep, combined with exercise in the open air, are important.

When you must wink rest your eyes occasionally for a few minutes at a time, and always work in a good light— in daylight if possible.

To relieve a soft corn, try the old-fashioned remedy of binding it nightly in common baking soda moistened with a little water. The most stubborn and painful corns will disappear after three weeks of this treatment.

Cold water, unless taken with meals, will not increase the flesh, but has a tendency to harden and make it firmer.

Mrs. Brooks Carson and children, of Norwood avenue, sailed Saturday on the White Star Liner Celtic for a two months' visit with relatives abroad.

Business Women.

Business women have to admit one handicap in an independent business life and that is business wears only a temporary aspect to most girls. For if she is normally constituted, every girl hopes that some day she will be happily married.

This idea being firmly established in everyone's head, it is harder for a woman to get capital to start in business and more difficult for her to throw herself with the necessary intensity into what she undertakes.

She has the brains, but she lacks the daring, the willingness to risk the chances necessary to a successful business career, partly because in so doing she is fighting all the sex traditions that have taught her that it was for her to reserve to hold back, to keep the level of security upon which the family life best flourishes, and partly because there is little inspiration to build up only to give up.

Time is modifying one of these conditions, and the fact that more and more women are going into independent business is bringing the other to the point where the women may sell out a well-run establishment with dignity and profit—not simply shut up shop.

Evidence.

"What are you men quarreling about?" asked the stranger.

"Why, this man borrowed $5 from me over a year ago, and he won't pay it," replied the tall one.

"I don't remember borrowing $5 from him," said the short one.

"Oh, well, if you don't remember it, I guess you did all right!" was the peacemaker's final words.—Yonkers Statesman.

LOOKS BRIGHT FOR ASBURY AIR CARNIVAL

With one-half of the $15,000 necessary for the aviation meet at Asbury Park subscribed, the promoters feel so enthusiastic that plans are already under way for closing a contract with E. M. Johnson, manager of the Wright Brothers. The meet will be held during the week beginning August 10.

The largest individual subscription obtained was $1,000 given to Mayor Appleby by Scott F. Hazelrigg, president of the Atlantic Coast Electric Railroad. Steinbach Company gave $500. Other subscriptions and guarantees to the executive committee brings the grand total up to nearly $8,000, leaving but about 700 more shares of stock to be subscribed. Each share of stock has a value of $10. The aviation meet will be managed by the stockholders, or subscribers, and all profit will be returned to them.

Incorporation papers, prepared by Asbury Park City Attorney Carton, will be signed and forwarded to the secretary of State today. The corporation will be known as the "Asbury Park Aero Club," capital stock $25,000, divided into shares of $10 each. The object of the club is known to be the promotion of aviation carnivals and the development of the aviation art.

A. H. Neville, of the Stormfelz, Lovely, Neville Company, representing the Interlaken Land Company, Friday night filed an agreement for the free use of the Brower farm, west of their property. It had been proposed to hold the air carnival on Mr. Bradley's land, along the beach, but it was found that the conditions were not satisfactory there.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Miss Merle Randolph, of New Market, starts tomorrow for a prolonged visit with her grandparents and other relatives in West Virginia. Before returning north she will attend the general conference of the Seventh Day Baptist denomination at Salem, W. Va.

Mrs. William Shaw, of New York, and Miss Rena Shaw, of Brooklyn, are the guests of Mrs. Edward J. Herlich, their cousin, on Dunellen avenue. They will remain for about a week.

The local Board of Trade will hold a regular meeting tonight. Proposed amendments to the constitution will be brought up for consideration as will much other important business.

Today is "building and loan" day in the borough, and all dues in the Dunellen Building and Loan Association should be paid to the secretary to avoid the fine.

Miss Nellie G. Henry and Miss Dora Britton, of New York, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Henry.

Dr. William J. Nelson is laying the foundation for a new house on the lots, popularly known as the Midway.

George Mitze, of New Market, is spending a week with his uncle in Cranford.

Alfred Day has accepted a position with the Harrington Leather Co.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Funeral services of the late Mrs. George Alberts, who died at her home on Montague avenue, Friday afternoon were held this morning at 8 o'clock from the house and 9 o'clock from St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield. The services were attended by many friends and relatives. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

The local team lost the game with Flemington, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 3 to 1. The home team was weakened by the loss of Manager Alberts, whose mother died Friday afternoon. This is the first defeat Flemington has handed the locals in the several years the two teams have been meeting on the diamond.

The Italian residents from here and Berkeley Heights held an all-day celebration yesterday at Berkeley Heights, in honor of the saint day of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel. The local Italian band was in attendance and a big day was enjoyed.

The first, last and only home excursion of the year will be held tomorrow when the Big 8 goes to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. The Big Eight includes the three local Sunday schools together with five schools from Westfield and Willow Grove.

The town was quiet enough Saturday night. The Township Committee put Albert MacCauley on duty for the night and there was nothing doing. All that it needs to hold the thing in check is an officer on duty.

Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, of the Baptist church, exchanged pulpits yesterday morning with Rev. Dr. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church of Plainfield.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held last night in the parlors of the Baptist church. This was the only evening session of the day.

George Harper, of Southold, L. I., spent Sunday with his son and wife, Mr. and Mrs. George Harper, of Front street.

FIELD DAY FOR THE FARMERS OF STATE

The fourth field meeting of the State Board of Agriculture will be held at the Agricultural College farm at New Brunswick Saturday, August 9. In the invitation issued for the vent it is stated in part:

This, the fourth summer meeting and field day of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, of the granges and the farmers of the State, is arranged for in pursuance of the action of the executive committeed of the board. The previous meetings of this character held at the State Agricultural College farm were interesting and profitable. Such gatherings promote acquaintance and social intercourse among the farmers and their families throughout the State and thev afford opportunity to note what is being done by the teachers and those engaged at the college farm in a scientific and experimental way for the advancement of the agricultural industry in New Jersey. For this later reason, if for no other, these meetings afford an opportunity that should not be ignored.

To observe what others are doing in similar lines of work by comparing their methods and results with our own, we may be able to improve our methods and increase our profits. Seasonable crops have done very well at the farm this year; especially is this true of the alfalfa and forage crops. The first cutting of alfalfa yielded over three tons per acre of cured hay and the viewing of this crop alone will be well worth while. If these results follow this annual pilgrimage to the State College farm the time will have ben wisely used. That this may be so is the hope of your executive committee.

The college farm became a part of the equipment of the experiment station on April 1, 1896, and since that time it has been used for experiment in four main lines, viz.: (1) Annual husbandry and dairying, (2) horticulture, (3) plant breeding, (4) plant nutrition.

New buildings have been added since our first summer meeting, and the experimental work has been extended. After lunch visitors will be given an opportunity to inspect the short course buildings and the work being done on the farm in the various experimental lines. All farmers and their families throughout the State of New Jersey are invited to attend this meeting, and members of the press and any others intersted in the great and important work of agriculture will be welcome.

Promptly at 10.30 a. m. the visitors and delegates will meet in the judging pavilion at the college farm, where the formal exercise will begin and continue until 12 o'clock m. The meeting will be called to order by the vice president, John T. Cox, with a short address, who will be followed by George W. F. Gaunt and Professors Lipman, Blake, Minkler and others in charge of the several lines of work under their personal supervision.

At 12 m. the meeting will adjourn for luncheon. Visitors are at liberty to bring their luncheon with them and serve on the lawn if they so desire. Provision will also be made whereby those who wish to do so may purchase a luncheon on the grounds. After luncheon the visitors will inspect the farm with its various products.

Saws Bar; Breaks Parole.

Today Judge Lyon gives a hearing to William Hefferson on a charge of breaking the terms of his parole by sawing a bar at the county jail at New Brunswick. The defense is that Hefferson cannot be tried for breaking his probation because the bar was sawed previous to his being placed on probation.

Cool Weather for a Few Days.

Temperature below normal and generally fair weather are indicated for the first half of the week in the Middle Atlantic and New England States, according to the Washington, D. C. Weather Bureau forecast. Beginning Wednesday rising temperature may be looked for in the eastern part of the country.

SURPRISE AT SEA

It was evening in the West Indies. On a pier overlooking the ocean nearly the whole population of the town of D. were lounging, the men smoking, the women gossiping and watching the children who were romping on the heavy planks. One young fellow, a fine specimen of a man, was walking back and forth.

"Ned Chamberlin seems uneasy this evening."

"He's expecting Rose Bickford from Havana—they're engaged, you know—and that villainous picaroon the Marguerita has been reported scurrying about beyond the point there."

At the moment a sloop rounded the point mentioned and bore steadily up to the wharf. When within hearing distance her master shouted:

"The Marguerita is chasing the Inez. We left them ten miles out, both becalmed. We caught a breeze three miles this side of them and got away."

All looked at Chamberlin, for all knew that the girl he loved either had fallen or would doubtless soon fall into the hands of the pirate. He sat down on the top of one of the projecting spiles of the pier and covered his face with his hands. His neighbors thought that he was giving way to his feelings. This was not true—at least not for long. He was forming a plan to save the Inez.

In another hour the Alice, the sloop that had brought the news, sailed away under command of Ned Chamberlin. The moon, slightly past the full, came up out of the water, illuminating all within the circle of the horizon. The breeze began to die away and bade fair to cease altogether. This gave the hope that the picaroon had not been able to move against the Inez. The Alice within another two hours was becalmed, but not before Ned Chamberlin saw on the horizon two ships in the doldrums which he strongly suspected were the ones he sought. Ordering half a dozen men to man a boat, he sent them ahead to tow the sloop and while it was still night placed her between the becalmed ships.

At the first gray light in the east the young captain brought his glass to bear first on one, then the other, of his neighbors, and soon made up his mind that the one on his port was the Inez, the other the Marguerita. Breathing a sigh of relief, he leaned against the taffrail, folded his arms and waited.

What was he waiting for? There was not a gun on his deck nor protruding from portholes below. But half a dozen men were visible, and they were lounging about apparently waiting for a breeze. When the sun came up there was a stirring aboard the picaroon, while the crew of the Inez raised every sail to be ready to take advantage of the first morning breeze. Vain hope!

Presently the picaroon assumed the appearance of a daddy longlegs, sweeps being thrust from her sides, and she began to move. Ned Chamberlin's only hope was that she would stop by the way in her journey toward the Inez to take the sloop. In this he was not disappointed. The Marguerita was obliged to make a slight angle to reach the sloop, and when Ned saw that she was heading directly toward him he seized a basket standing on the deck and climbed the ratlines. On came the pirate, her captain doubtless laughing in his sleeves at the fool who had pulled directly in his way during the night.

Ned Chamberlin kept his eye fixed on the picaroon, and when he saw the grappling irons fixed to the port side he concluded that they were making ready to board on his starboard. Calling to the men on the deck below, he ordered them to swing the gaff on which he stood to the starboard and lash it. When the pirate came to within fifty feet and was slowly rounding toward the sloop Ned ran out to the peak and, holding on to a line with his left hand, began to swing with his right a ball on the end of a rope in circles about his head. Presently letting go the rope, it slipped through his fingers, and the globe landed on the pirate's deck. There was an explosion, the deck was ripped to pieces, and three-quarters of the men on it were blown to atoms. The shock dislodged Chamberlin, who fell, fortunately escaping the side, into the water, whence he was dragged back on to his vessel. The hatches of the sloop were opened, and out rushed fifty men armed with rifles and cutlasses, with the former of which they shot every living man on the picaroon.

On the Inez the captain, the crew and the passengers watched the Marguerita approach the sloop, not doubting that the latter would fall an easy prey and that they would soon see her crew walking the plank, after which the pirates would turn their attention to the Inez. There was scarcely a weapon aboard, and the ship rolled helplessly in the long swells. Suddenly there was a boom, and a cloud of smoke shot up from among the two vessels. They could not at first tell from which, but presently saw that the sloop was unharmed, while the waist of the pirate showed a great gap. Puffs of smoke appeared on the sloop's deck, growing less frequent till at last all was quiet. Then, and not till then, they began to realize that they had been saved, and a wild cheer went up, which was answered by the men on the sloop.

A few minutes later a boat left the side of the victor and headed for the Inez. When it reached the vessel Ned Chamberlin, followed by his first officer, climbed her side and in another moment was locked in the arms of Rose Bickford.

Rustic & Other Furniture

That Will Contribute Much to the Joys of Summertime

No Reduction Less than 10 Per Cent. Some as Much as 33⅓ Per Cent.

There Will Not Be Another Opportunity Like This in Many a Day.

Long lanes flanked on both sides with indoor and outdoor furniture to take the place of other furniture during the warm season—furniture that adds immensely to the cheerfulness of the living or sitting room, the veranda or the lawn—furniture that lends itself to the landscape and becomes a part of it—cool looking, comfortable, delightful—and it is all here at prices lower by 10 Per Cent. than it ought to be—much of it reduced more than 10 Per Cent.

We sell Summer Furniture on the Club Plan.

Comfort Swing Chairs

Chairs are the most popular type for Summer use. They are strongly built with black japanned metal frame; the chair seat is of blue and white heavy duck; they can be adjusted to any position, so that you can sit up straight, recline or lie flat; the chair answering to your every desire, shaping itself to the slight pressure of the body; offered here at $4.25; July Sale Price... $3.75

COMFORT CHAIRS.

All the woodwork is smoothly machined and all corners are rounded; entire frame is finished with two coats of good varnish; cloth seat of heavy canvas, attached at top and bottom by means of a slot and spline instead of being simply tacked, making it much stronger and less liable to tear clothing; regular price $1.25; July Sale Price $1

BAR HARBOR CHAIRS.

Here is a chair that will appeal to lovers of comfort; as nice for indoors as out. Made of willow in the natural finish, known to be the best and most comfortable chair of its kind; a popular design; strongly built in every way.

There are cushions for it made of green, red and brown twilled denim, also fancy figured cloth, filled with cotton felt. The cushions are well worth $1.50 each.

We will offer the chair complete with cushions during our July Sale at only..... $5

SWINGING SEATS.

What could be nicer for your porch for you and your children? 42 inches long; made of round and flat reeds; pockets on each end for papers or magazines; may be had in natural color, fumed oak or green. Fitted with chains for a 9-foot ceiling; regular price $13.50; July Sale $11.50

ROCKERS.

Built of solid oak and finished in Early English and Golden. The design is on straight lines, has flat comfortable arms, set in panel on the back, upright slats in the back; box frame seat strongly constructed; the seat is upholstered in dark green genuine leather and is removable; regular price $5.50; July Sale Price..... $4.25

FOLDING CAMP STOOLS.

These stools are made of carefully selected wood, machined perfectly smooth, in the natural white state; legs have rounded edges; seat is 12x13½ inches; slatted in order to prevent accumulation of rain or dew; folds flat; these stools possess great advantages over the canvas stool; suitable for ball games, exhibitions, camping parties, picnics, porch, lawn and many other uses. These stools have been used at such events as the inauguration of President Roosevelt, Coronation of King Edward and Queen Victoria's Jubilee; Regular price 30c; July Sale Price ..... .25

ROCKERS.

Frame is of smooth maple, finished natural color in shellac; also green; has comfortable back and shaped arms; seat and back carefully woven of reed, and is a strong and durable article. Regular price $2.25; July Sale Price..... $2

Folding Chairs

Made of oak, natural finish; carpet seats; folds up flat and is comfortable; requires but little space.

Regular price $2.25; July Sale Price..... $2.00

SPECIAL ROCKERS.

When we say "special rocker" we mean that this is an exclusive design for us, which we purchase in quantities of 100 or more at a time; made of reeds, strongly interwoven; has a continuous roll arm extending to the top; fancy woven design in the back and woven cane seat; around the base is a woven reed apron; the finish is in the natural color shellac. A rocker that is well worth $3.25; July Sale price..... $2.25

ARM CHAIRS.

Maple frame; natural finish shellac, closely woven seat; all joint work is strongly put together; a mighty comfortable chair and a good one at our low price, which is $2.00. July Sale Price $1.75

OLD COLONY CHAIRS.

Which is substantially built and appropriate to use as an office or reception chair either in office, factory or any other use.

Warm Weather Sleeves.

Undoubtedly the short sleeves are here, and it is delightful to be able to couple comfort with the new style.

In blouses the sleeves come just below the elbow and are edged with a turned-back cuff or a pleated frill of net or sheer linen.

A latitude that should appeal to every woman is allowed in the matter of fulness. The kimono sleeve, gathered into a straight band, with no fulness at the shoulder, vies with the slightly full pattern with its gathers at the armhole. Then, again, there is a closely fitting French monarchy model that many are using.

"It is so much easier to wash one's forearms than to discard a blouse after a single wearing," said a woman the other day. The question of cleanliness is decidedly a point in favor of the short sleeves.

The Decline of the Classics.

"What did you think of the pianist?"

"Worst I ever heard."

"Nonsense. She's a remarkably clever performer. Because she plays classical music you don't appreciate her."

"What's that! I don't appreciate her, don't I. Well, then, I don't. But that's no proof that I ain't on when good music is played. Did you ever hear that red-headed little Mame Doherty play 'Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Young Pirate.

The career of the disreputable young cuckoo is one of worldly success from his first chipping the shell to his late departure from our shores. He is born with a special contrivance in the structure of his back to enable him to hoist his foster brothers out of the nest and never rests till he has done so and made things quiet and comfortable.

The foster parents then pamper the young cuckoo with a silly infatuation, due apparently to its size and appetite. "See what a fine child we have got!" is the obvious feeling of wagtails or hedge sparrows fussing round a young cuckoo, which, though fully fledged, is too lazy to feed itself.

Even other young birds if placed in the same cage with a cuckoo soon begin to feed it. Yet after all the spoiling which it receives the cuckoo is a thoroughly ill conditioned, surly and spiteful bird. A young one which was daily fed by a thrush no older than itself, which was confined in the same cage, pecked the poor bird's eye out because it ventured to eat a worm itself.

Writing Tricks.

Can you write your name with your left hand? It is a good thing to know how in case you ever hurt your right hand.

Can you write a looking glass letter? That always amuses children, so if you have a friend who is ill send her a looking glass letter to cheer her up. Practice by writing on a piece of paper held in front of a mirror, and soon you will find it is quite easy to do looking glass writing. Looking glass writing is done backward, so that it looks all right when it is held to the mirror. Also see if you can write your name backward—that is, begin at the last stroke and go back to the first—and as a last trick try to write your name upside down. That is not at all easy, but copy your signature upside down and you will be able to do it quite well after a little practice.

After you can do all these things learn to write a good clear hand in the proper way, like a sensible person.—Chicago News.

Soap Bubbles.

If your father happens to be smoking when you are blowing soap bubbles, get him to blow some bubbles for you. He just fills his mouth with smoke and then blows an ordinary bubble with the clay pipe. The bubble will generally grow very large and will, of course, be filled with smoke. Floating in the sunshine, some of these present a very beautiful appearance.

If you want to make a very large bubble, first cover your hands well with soapsuds and then place them together in the shape of a cup, leaving a small opening at the bottom. Then hold your hands about a foot from your mouth and blow into them. The bubbles obtained in this way are so large that they immediately burst on touching the floor.—Chicago News.

Conundrums.

Why is a steam engine at a fire an anomaly? Because it works and plays at the same time.

Whose best works are most trampled on? The shoemaker's, because good shoes last longer than bad ones.

When is a boy in a pantry like a poacher? When he walks into the preserves.

Why are clergymen like brakemen? Because they do a lot of coupling.

When are two persons said to be half witted? When they have an understanding between them.

Why is a jailor like a musician? Because he fingers the keys.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Bits of Advice.

Each person is given a slip of paper and pencil. The leader then tells the players to write a bit of advice, original if possible, on the paper, fold it and drop it into a basket as it passes by.

The papers are all mixed together and the basket passed around again, each player taking one, but not opening it until called on to do so.

Before opening the papers each one must say whether the advice is good or bad, necessary or unnecessary and whether he intends to follow it or not. When the paper is unfolded and read aloud it may prove the very opposite of what he has said.

Vacation.

Hurrah! Hurrah! Vacation comes,
When lessons are all done,
And, oh, how glad I am to say
I know mine every one!
I've ciphered hard and learned to add,
Subtract and multiply,
But now the season has come round
To put my ciphering by.

I've drawn the maps of every state
In our republic grand.
I've learned where rivers rise and run
And where the mountains stand.
The towns which are called capitals,
The cities large and small,
And great seaports along the coast—
I know the names of all.

I've learned about the foreign lands
And foreign people, too,
Their customs, different from ours,
And curious things they do.
And grammar's rules that vex me so
I've studied night and day
Till I am tired of book and slate
And long for rest and play.

I want to sail my little boats,
I want to catch some fish,
I want to wander in the woods
And do just what I wish.
Lessons are fine for winter days,
But now the summer sun
Is calling me on every side
To three good months of fun!

CHAPTER VIII.

The Six Castle Chambers.

In an instant Nathaniel was upon his knees beside the prostrate form of the old councilor.

Obadiah's eyes were open but unseeing; his face was blanched to the whiteness of paper; an almost imperceptible movement of his chest showed that he still breathed. Nathaniel lifted one of the limp hands and its clammy chill struck horror to his heart. Tenderly he lifted the old man and carried him to the cot at the end of the room. He loosened his clothes, tore off the low collar about his throat, and felt with his hand to measure the faint beating of life in the councilor's breast. For a few moments it seemed to grow fainter and fainter, and a choking lump rose in his throat as he watched the pallor of death fixing itself on the councilor's shriveled face. What strange chord of sympathy was it that bound him to this old man? Was it the same mysterious influence that had attracted Marion to him? He dropped upon his knees and called the girl's name softly but it awakened no response in the sightless eyes, no tremor in the parted, unquivering lips. Very slowly as the minutes passed there came a reaction. The pulsations of the weakened heart became a little stronger, he could catch faintly the sound of breath coming from between the old man's lips.

With a gasp of relief Nathaniel rose to his feet. Through the door he saw the red glare in the northern sky and heard the great bell at St. James ring a wilder and more excited alarm. For a few moments he stood in silent, listening inaction, his nerves tingling with a strange sensation of impending peril. Obadiah's madness, the mysterious trembling of the earth beneath his feet, the volcano of fire, the clanging of the bell and the councilor's insane rejoicing had all come so suddenly that he was dazed. What great calamity, what fearful vengeance, was about to come upon the Mormon kingdom? Was it possible that the fishermen and settlers of the mainland had risen, as Obadiah had said, and were already at hand to destroy Strang and his people? The thought spurred him to the door. The blood rushed like fire through his veins. What would it mean to Marion—to Neil?

In his excitement he started down the path that led to the lilac hidden home beyond the forest. Then he thought again of Obadiah and his last choking utterance of Marion's name. He had tried to speak of her, even with that death-like rattling of the breath in his throat; and the memory of the old councilor's frantic struggle for words brought Nathaniel quickly back to the cabin. He bent over Obadiah's shriveled form and spoke the girl's name again and again in his ears. There came no response, no quiver of life to show that the old man was conscious of his presence. As he worked over him, bathing his face and chest in cool water, the feeling became strong in him that he was fighting death in this gloomy room for Marion's sake. It was like the whispering of an invisible spirit in his ears—something more than presentiment, something that made his own heart grown faint when death seemed winning in the struggle. His watchfulness was acute, intense, desperate. When, after a time, he straightened himself again, rewarded by Obadiah's more regular breathing, the sweat stood in beads upon his face. He knew that he had triumphed. Obadiah would live, and Marion—

He placed his mouth close to the councilor's ear.

"Tell me about Marion," he said again. "Marion—Marion—Marion—"

He waited, stilling his own breath to catch the sound of a whisper. None came. As he bent over him he saw through the open door that the red glare of fire had faded to a burnt out glow in the sky. In the deep silence the sullen beating of the bell seemed nearer, and he could hear the excited barking of dogs in St. James. Slowly the hope that Obadiah might speak to him died away and he returned to the door. It still lacked an hour of midnight, when Marion had promised to come to him. He was wildly impatient and to his impatience was added the fear that had filled him as he hovered over Obadiah, a nameless, intangible fear—something which he could not have analyzed and which clutched at his heart and urged him to follow the path that led to Marion's. For a time he resisted the impulse. What if she should come by another path while he was gone? He waited nervously in the edge of the forest, watching, and listening for footsteps. Each minute seemed like an hour marked into seconds by the solemn, steady tolling of the bell, and after a little he found himself unconsciously measuring time by counting the strokes. Then he went out into the path. He followed it, step by step, until he could no longer see the light in the cabin; his pulse beat a little faster; he stared ahead into the deep gloom between the walls of forest—and quickened his pace. If Marion was coming to him he would meet her. If she was not coming—

In his old fearless way he promptly made up his mind. He would go boldly to the cabin and tell that Neil was waiting. He felt sure that the alarm sounding from St. James had drawn away the guards and that there would be nothing to interfere with his plan. If she had already left the cabin he would return quickly to Obadiah's. In his eagerness he began to run. Once a sound stopped him—the distant beating of galloping hoofs. He heard the shout of a man, a reply farther away, the quick, excited yelping of a dog. His blood danced as he thought of the gathering of the Mormon fighters, the men and boys racing down the black trails from the inland forests, the excitement in St. James. As he ran on again he thought of Arbor Croche mustering the panting, vengeful defenders; of Strang, his great voice booming encouragement and promise, above the brazen thunder of the bell; he saw in fancy the frightened huddling groups of women and children and beyond and above all the coming of the "vengeance of God"—a hundred beats, a thousand men—and there went out from his soul if not from his lips a great cry of joy. At the edge of the forest he stopped for a moment. Over beyond the clearing a light burned dimly through the lilacs. The sweet odor of the flowers came to him gently, persuasively, and nerved him into the open. He passed across the open space swiftly and plunged into a tangle of bushes close to the lighted window.

He heard a man's voice within, and then a woman's. Was it Marion? Cautiously Nathaniel crept close to the log wall of the cabin. He reached out, and hesitated. Should he look—as he had done at the king's window? The man's voice came to him again, harsh and angry, and this time it was not a woman's words that he heard but a woman's sobbing cry. He parted the bushes and a glare of light fell on his face. The lamp was on a table and beside the table there sat a woman, her white head turned from him, her face buried in her hands. She was an old woman and he knew that it was Marion's mother. He could not see the man.

Where was Marion? He wormed himself back out of the bushes and walked quickly around the house. There was no other light, no other sign of life except in that one room. With sudden resolution he stepped to the door and knocked loudly.

For a full half minute there was silence, and he knocked again. He heard the approach of a shuffling step, the thump, thump, thump of a cane, and the door swung back. It was the man who opened it, a tall giant of an old man, doubled as if with rheumatism, and close behind him was the frightened face of the woman. An involuntary shudder passed through Nathaniel as he looked at them. They were old—so old that the man's shriveled hands were like those of a skeleton; his giant frame seemed about to totter into ruin, his eyes were sunken until his face gave the horror of a death mask. Was it possible that these people were the father and mother of Marion—and of Neil? As he stepped to the threshold they timidly drew back from him. In a single glance Nathaniel swept the room and what he saw thrilled him, for everywhere were signs of Marion; in the pictures on the walls, the snowy curtains, the cushions in the window seat—and the huge vase of lilacs on the mantle.

"I Want to Speak with Marion."

"I am a messenger of the king," he said, advancing and closing the door behind him. "I want to speak with Marion."

"Strang—the king!" cried the old man, clutching the knob of his cane with both hands. "She has gone!"

"Gone!" exclaimed Nathaniel. For an instant his heart bounded with delight. Marion was on her way to the tryst! He sprang back to the door. "When? When did she go?"

The woman had come forward, her hands trembling, her lips quivering. Something in the terror of her face sent the hot blood from Nathaniel's cheeks.

"They sent for her an hour ago," she said. "The king sent Obadiah Price for her! O, my God!" she shrieked suddenly, clutching at her breast, "Tell me—what are they doing with Marion—"

"Shut up!" snarled the old man. "That's is Strang's business. She has gone to Strang." With an effort he straightened himself until his towering form rose half a head above Nathaniel. "She has gone to the king," he repeated. "Tell Strang that she will wive him tonight, as she has promised!"

In spite of his effort to control himself a terrible cry burst from Nathaniel's lips. He flung open the door and stood for an instant with his white face turned back.

"She went to the castle—an hour ago?" he cried.

"Yes, to the castle—with Obadiah Price—"

The last words followed him as he sped out into the night. As swiftly as a wolf he raced across the clearing to the trail that led down to St. James. Something seemed to have burst in his brain; something that was not blood, but fire, seemed to burn in his veins—a mad desire to reach Strang, to grip him by the throat, to mete out to him the vengeance of a fiend instead of that of a man. He was too late to save Marion! His brain reeled with the thought. Too late—too late—too late. He panted the words. They came with every gasp for breath. Too late! Too late! His heart pumped like an engine as he strained to keep up his speed. He passed a man and a boy hurrying with their rifles to St. James and made no answer to their shout; a galloping horse forged ahead of him and he tried to keep up with it; and then, at the top of the long hill that sloped down to the stronghold of the Mormon kingdom something seemed to sweep his legs from under him, and he fell panting on the ground. For a few moments he lay there looking down upon the city. The great bell at the temple was now silent. He saw huge fires burning for a mile along the coast, hundreds of lights were twinkling in the harbor, there came up to him softly, subdued by distance, the sound of commotion and excitement far below.

His eyes rested on the beacon above the prophet's home, burning like a ball of fire over the black canopy of tree tops. Marion was there! He rose to his feet again and went on, reason and judgment returning to him—telling him that he was about to play against odds; that his work was to be one of strength and generalship and not of madness. As he picked his way more slowly and cautiously down the slope a new hope flashed upon him. Was it possible that the discovery of the approach of the mainlanders had served to save Marion? In the excitement that followed the calling of the Mormons to arms and the preparations for the defense would Strang the master of the kingdom, the bulwark of his people, waste priceless time in carrying out the purpose for which he had sent for Marion? Hardly did hope burn anew in his breast when there came another thought to quench it. Why had the king sent for Marion on this particular night and at this late hour? Why, unless at the approach of his enemies he had feared that he might lose his beautiful victim, and in his overmastering passion had called her to him even as his people assembled in defense of his kingdom.

There was desperate coolness in Nathaniel's approach now. Whatever had happened he would do what Neil had threatened to do—kill Strang. And whatever had happened he would take Marion away with him if it was only her dead body that he carried in his arms. To do these things he needed strength. He advanced more slowly and drew deeper and deeper drafts of air into his exhausted lungs. At the edge of the grove surrounding the castle he paused to listen. For the first time it occurred to Nathaniel that the prophet might have assembled some of his fighters to the defense of his harem, which he knew would be one of the first places to feel the vengeance of the outraged men of the mainland. But he heard no voices ahead of him. There were no fires to betray the approach of the enemy. Not even the barking of a dog gave warning of his stealthy advance. Soon he could make out a light in the king's house. A few steps more and he saw that the door was open, as it had been on his first visit to the castle. He dodged swiftly from bush to bush, darted under the window through which he had seen Marion, leaped lightly up the broad steps and sprang into the great room, his pistol cocked in his hand.

The room was empty. He listened, but not a sound came to his ears except the rustling of a curtain in the breeze. The huge lamp over the table was burning dimly. The five doors leading from the room were tightly closed. Nathaniel held his breath, tried to still the tumultuous pounding of his heart as he waited for a sound of life—a step beyond those doors, a woman's voice, a child's cry. But none came. The stillness of desertion hovered about him. He went to one of the five doors. It was not locked. He opened it silently, with the caution of a thief, and there loomed before him a chaos of gloom.

"Hello!" he called gently. "Hello—Hello—"

There was no answer. He struck a match and advanced step by step, holding the yellow bit of flame above his head. It disclosed the narrow walls of a hall and an open door leading into another room. The match sputtered and went out and he lighted another. On a little table just outside the door was a half burned candle and he replaced his match with this. Then he went in.

At a glance he knew that he had entered a woman's room, redolent with the perfume of flowers. On one side was a bed and close beside it a cradle with a child's toys scattered about it. The tumbled coverlets showed that both had been recently used. About the room were thrown articles of wearing apparel; a trunk had been dragged from a closet and was half packed; everywhere was the disorder of hurried flight. For a few moments the depth of his despair held Nathaniel motionless. The castle was deserted—Marion was gone! He ran back into the great room, no longer trying to still the sound of his footsteps, and opened a second door. The same silence greeted him, the same disorder, the same evidence that the wives and children of the Mormon king had fled. He went into a third room—and then a fourth.

For an instant he paused at the threshold of this fourth chamber. A light was burning in the room at the end of the hall. The door was closed with the exception of an inch or two.

"Marion!" he called softly, and listened intently.

He went on when there was no reply, and pushed open the door.

A candle was burning on a stand in front of a mirror. The room was as empty as the others. But there was no disorder here. The bed was unused, the garments in the open closet had not been disarranged. On the floor beside the bed was a pair of shoes and as Nathaniel saw them his heart seemed to leap to his throat and stifled the cry that was on his lips. He took one of them in his hand, his whole being throbbing with excitment. It was Marion's shoe—incrusted with mud and torn as he had seen it in the forest. With her name falling from his lips in a pleading cry he now searched the room and on the stand in front of the mirror he found a lilac colored ribbon, soiled and crumpled. It was Marion's ribbon—the one he had seen last in her hair, and he crushed it to his lips as he ran back into the great room, calling out her name again and again in the torture of helplessness that now possessed him.

Mechanically, rather than with reason, he went to the fifth and last door. His candle had become extinguished in his haste and after he had opened the door he stopped at the threshold of the black hall to light it again. There was a moment's pause as he searched his pockets for a match, a silence in which he listened as he searched, and suddenly as he was about to strike the sulphur tipped splint there came to his ears a sound that held him chained to the spot. It was the sobbing of a woman; or was it a child? In a moment he knew that it was a woman; and then the sobbing ceased.

There was nothing but darkness ahead of him; no ray of light shone under the door; the chamber itself was in utter gloom. As quietly as possible he relighted his candle. A glance assured him that this hall was different from the others. It was deeper, and there were two doors at the end instead of one. Through which of these doors had come the sound of sobbing he had heard?

He approached and listened. Each moment added to his excitement, his fears, his hopes, but at last he opened the door on the left. The room was empty; there was the same disorder as before; the same signs of hurried flight. It was the room on the right! His heart almost stopped its beating as he placed his hand on the latch, lifted it, and pulled the door in. Kneeling beside the bed he saw a woman. She had turned toward the light and in the dim illumination of the room Nathaniel recognized the beautiful face he had seen at the king's castle the preceding day—the face of the woman who had sent him to find the prophet, who had placed her gentle hand on Marion's head as he had looked through the window. There was no fear in her eyes as she saw Nathaniel. Something more terrible than that shone in their glorious depths as she rose to her feet and stood before him, her face lined with grief, her mouth twitching in agony. She stood with clenched hands, her bosom rising and falling in the passion of the storm within her; and she sobbed even as Nathaniel paused there, unmanned in this sudden presence of a distress greater than his own; sobbed in a choking, tearless way, waiting for him to speak.

"Forgive me," he spoke gently. "I have come—for—Marion." He felt that he had no reason to lie to this woman. His face betrayed his own anguish as he came nearer to her. "I want Marion," he repeated. "My God, won't you tell me—?"

She struggled to calm herself as he spoke the girl's name.

"Marion is not here," she said. She crushed his hands against her bosom and a softer look came into her eyes; her voice was low and sweet, as it had been the morning he asked for Strang. As she saw the despair deepening in the man's face a great pity swept over her and she stretched out her arms to him with an aching cry, "Marion is gone—gone—gone," she moaned, "and you must go, too! O, I know you love her—she told me that you loved her, as I love Strang, my king! We have both lost—lost—and you must go—as—I—shall—go!" She turned away from him with a cry so heart-breaking in its pain that Nathaniel felt himself trembling to the soul. In another instant she had faced him again, fighting back a strange calm into her face.

CRANFORD NO MATCH FOR PLAINFIELD NINE

In a one-sided game, which virtually carried with it the championship of the county, Plainfield had little difficulty in taking Cranford into camp by the score of 9 to 0 on Crescent oval Saturday afternoon. The visitors were completely outclassed from the start of the game and not once during the nine innings were they considered as dangerous.

McLaughlin, the local twirler, who was backed up by stellar support was not forced to exert himself during the game. He had his opponents at his mercy throughout and only allowed them but one real safe hit. The other hit credited to the visitors was a scratch bunt, which Senator barely managed to beat out to the initial bag. Another evidence of McLaughlin's control is evidenced by the fact that but two of the Cranford players got beyond the midway station.

On the other hand, Farrell, who was twirling for Cranford, was wild and ineffective, and had no control whatsoever. He was hit by the Plainfield battery at will, and unquestionably was completely outclassed.

A feature of the game was the fielding of Schott, the local left fielder. He is credited with six put outs and every one of them were difficult chances. In pulling one of his catches, he was forced to leap through the air and only managed to get the sphere after doing a semi-somersault in the air. His work was excellent and spoiled more than one of the Cranford players' wallops which would have been good for a safe hit.

PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A., 2, AND METUCHEN TEAM 1

In a fast and interesting game, the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. took the Metuchen team into camp at Metuchen Saturday by the score of 2-1. The contest was a nip and tuck affair and the victory was won only after the last man had been called out in the ninth.

The features of the game were the all round playing of Peacock, and the fielding of Taylor and Wilcox of the local boys, and the batting of Rupert of the Metuchen team. Frederickson, the Y. M. C. A. pitcher, was always strong, and was backed up by gilt-edged support. The score and summary follow:—

DUNELLEN WHITEWASHED BY JERSEY CENTRAL NINE

Owing to the fact that Nonamaker, Dunellen's third sacker, and Piddington, its outfielder, were away, which necessitated the bringing in of Miller center to third and the placing of C. Montross, a new man, in left field, Jimmy Montross lost a game which he deserved to win as Miller played poorly out of his position and C. Montross was apparently too anxious to make a good showing. Montross not only held the Centrals to two scattering hits but he also struck out seven of them, three of them falling before his fast breaking curves in the ninth inning on eleven pitched balls. Jimmy did still more getting three of Dunellen's five hits and participating in a fast double play.

The only chance that Dunellen had to score was in the seventh innings. Ramsberger the first man up flied out to left; J. Montross singled; Clark, the next man up flied out to third; C. Montross took first on a dead ball, J. Montross going to second; Dodwell singled, passed third but the ball was fielded too quickly for Jimmy to score; with the bases filled Garretson hit a sharp grounder to Monihan, who relayed it to Meehan for the third out. Pender's outfielders gave him good support. Ellis robbed Miller of what looked to be a sure home run in the first. Altogether Bender, the manager of the Centrals, should be congratulated in at last getting together such a nine of ball players, who by the way have not been scored on in the last three games.

Jessie Neilson.

Jessie, the six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nielson, of 815 Second place, died in the Adirondacks on Saturday. The child had been ill for some time, but it was not thought that her condition was serious. She was with her parents, at Fourth Lake, Inlet-in-the-woods. Interment will probably be in Brooklyn.

GOOD RACING EVENTS AT FAIR ACRES MATINEE

Colon, owned by J. H. Keenan, of Elizabeth, won the 2.35 trot and 2.38 pace at Fair Acres track, Westfield, on aSturday. Foxy Todd, owned by W. H. Hutchings, of Westfield, won the 2.21 trot and 2.25 pace, and Helen Wilson, owned by J. B. Osborn, of Plainfield, won the 2.26 trot and 2.29 pace.

It was the second matinee of the season under the auspices of the Westfield Riding and Driving Club. Several Newark horses were expected, including Red Flower, owned by H. A. Jacques, and Black Watch, owned by J. Goldstein. These horses failed to enter. The only Newark horse to start was Red, owned by C. H. McKee.

Foxy Todd, owned by W. H. Hutchings, won his first race at Fair Acres. This horse was in fine shape. Cups were awarded the winners in each class and also the regulation ribbons. The results:

The officers of the matinee were Dr. Egel, J. S. Irving and J. W. Arkell, judges; Hugh Talbot, R. I. Richardson and E. D. Floyd, timers, and Ray Edwards, starter.

PLAINFIELD'S TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNEY

Both the first and second rounds were completed and two of the four in the third round were played in the Plainfield open championship lawn tennis tournament which began Saturday afternoon on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club with twenty-four entries. Only one fault was recorded that of H. L. DeFourt, of the Plainfield Country Club. The players to get through to the semi-finals were S. W. Merrihew in the upper and D. W. Mulford in the lower half. The tournament will be finished next Saturday. The summary of the matches played follows:

Preliminary round—P. C. Langdon defeated H. H. Foster, 6-3, 6-4; A. D. Beers defeated M. H. Long, 6-1, 7-5; C. M. Baker, defeated R. W. K. Anderson, 6-4, 6-3; E. M. Daniel 2nd, defeated R. Schoonmaker, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4; A. M. Collins defeated T. O. Gavett, 6-3, 6-4; H. J. Cochran defeated R. S. Gough, 6-2, 6-4; W. Schoonmaker defeated F. Frost, 6-3, 6-1; W. Barlow, Jr., defeated U. B. Miner, 6-0, 6-1.

First round—P. S. Brown defeated H. L. De Forest by default; S. W. Merrihew defeated by J. M. Uhler, Jr., 7-5, 4-6, 6-4; A. D. Third round—S. W. Merrihew defeated P. B. Brown, 8-6, 6-4; Mulford defeated D. Anderson, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3.

NORTH PLAINFIELD, 2; GARWOOD WELFARE, 1

In a close and exciting game the North Plainfield Baseball Club defeated the Young Men's Welfare Club, of Garwood, on Saturday by the score of 2 to 1. It was the first game that the Garwoods lost this season. The winning run was made in the sixth inning on successive hits by Allen, Jacot and G. Perry, Allen crossing the plate. Perry pitched a fine game keeping the hits scattered while Dushencke was not so fortunate, they being bunched in the first and sixth innings.

HANDICAP MEDAL EVENT AT THE COUNTRY CLUB

The eighteen hole, medal play, handicap event at the Plainfield Country Club, on Saturday, attracted a large number of golfers to the course. The event was for both Classes A and B and some good scores were posted. In Class A, E. T. Willson was the winner with a net score of 67, while A. W. Kleinecke won the Class B event with a score of 72. The leading scores:

Class A—E. T. Willson, 79, 12-67; L. G. Carman, 83, 12-71; C. B. Morgan, 80, 7-73; H. D. Hibbard, 83, 9-74; R. G. Morse, 91, 13-78; William T. Glenney, 84, 6-78; H. S. Rogers, 97, 15-82.

Class B—A. W. Kleinecke, 98, 26-72; E. A. Lyon, 101, 26-75; H. E. Moore, 103, 28-75; James P. Murray, 99, 18-81.

FEW SCORES RETURNED AT THE PARK GOLF CLUB

The events at the Park Golf Club, Saturday, were the weekly competitions for the President's and golf club cups, and the Ladies' Summer cup, nine holes. There was a good field out, although not many scores were returned in either event. R. B. Titsworth, Miss Lydie Loizeaux and W. E. Lough won the points for the President's cup, and the same trio won the points for the golf club cup. These scores were posted:

R. B. Titsworth, 93, 22-71; Miss Lydie Loizeaux, 97, 23-74; W. E. Lough, 101, 24-77; Charles P Morse, 103, 19-84.

These scores were returned for the Ladies' Summer cup:

Miss Lulu Fuller, 61, 23-38; Miss Harriet R. Shreve, 61, 15-46.

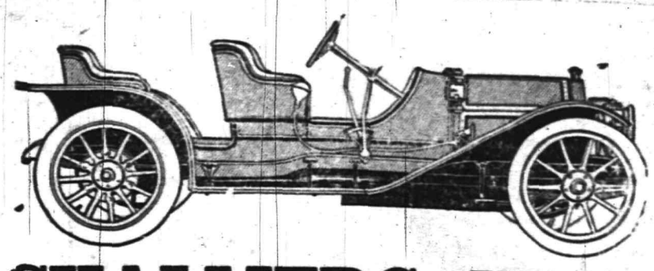
CO. K BOYS HOME.

Had a Fine Time in Camp at Gettysburg.

The members of Company K, Second Regiment, slightly fatigued but enthusiastic, reached home last night at 9:30 after spending a week in camp iat Gettysburg, Pa. The men had nothing but praise for the manner in which the doings of the camp were concerned. The "grub" was excellent and the sanitation perfect.

The benefits from the week's instruction were manifold, and one member of the local company said that there was more good received in one week's instruction at this camp, than in five at a State affair. This was made possible by the efficiency of the officers in charge as well as by the fact that there were no visitors permitted there.

While in camp Private William J. Harpence was struck on the back of the hand by an exploded bullet from an incinerator fire. The wound was but an abrasion of the hand.



CHALMERS WINS

Piston Displacement Event With Flat Front in The Johnston's Drive Hill Climb Saturday Beating the Time Made by 2 60 H.P. Stearns, 2 Model 17 Buick, 1 Berkshire, 1 S. P. 0, Etc.

The same CHALMERS "FORTY" stock chassis also won the second Prize in the free for all event, time 1 minute 22 2-5 seconds, being defeated only by the 200 H. P. Fiat by only 2 2-5 seconds. The Houpt Rockwell ran third.

We only entered this Chalmers stock chassis in these two events, and we won one first and one second prize. It took a 200 H. P. FIAT racing car driven by DePalma to beat us 2 2-5 seconds.. Wherever a Chalmers is entered it generally wins. This again demonstrates that the Chalmers is the equal of any stock car made regardless of price. A Chalmers "Thirty" also won the second prize in the Glidden tour defeating a score of high priced cars.

TOLLES WILL NOT RUN

Common Council President Declines to Be Candidate for Mayoralty.

SOME OTHERS ARE MENTIONED.

Leslie M. Daniel, George P. Mellick and George S. Clay Are Spoken of Prominently for the Position.

It was stated positively by Ralph I. Tolles, president of the Common Council, today, that he would not be a candidate for the Republican organization mayoralty nomination. He says that his decision is final but his friends still believe that he can be induced to make the run. His reason for declining is that his time is fully occupied by his business and that already he has given twelve years to the city's interests as a member of the Common Council.

"I cannot see my way clear to become a candidate," said Mr. Tolles today. "You may state positively and make it as strong as possible that I will not be a candidate for the mayoralty. I have given the matter serious consideration and have made up my mind not to aspire for the mayoralty. My business demands all my time and I know it will exact just as much from me in the future. No, I will not be a candidate. As to who should be named that is not for me to say—there are plenty of good men."

Former Presidents of the Common Council Leslie M. Daniel and George P. Mellick as well as Councilman George S. Clay are now being prominently spoken of in connection with the mayoralty nomination. It is not considered that the choice will be made some time yet. All three appear to have many boomers. George W. V. Moy, the "progressive" candidate for the nomination will file his papers within a few days.

Mr. Tolles was non-committal when asked today whether he would accept a re-nomination to the Common Council.

ANNUAL EXCURSION TO THE OCEAN SHORE.

A big union excursion, which will include the First Presbyterian, Congregational and Park avenue Baptist Spnday schools will take place on Thursday. The committee in charge of the excursion has made ample arrangements to accommodate a large crowd.

The train will start from Dunellen at 8 o'clock, stopping at Clinton and Grant avenues, the regular railroad tickets being used from those stations to Plainfield.

Miss Hunter to Teach Out West.

Miss Gertrude Hunter, of West Fourth street, who was valedictorian of the City High School in 1906 and valedictorian at Barnard College, this year will teach out west next year. Miss Hunter had a tempting offer to teach in Morristown but declined it. She recently returned from the conference of the Y. W. C. A. college women. She was the alumni representative of Barnard.

Will Give a Carpet.

The women of Trinity Reformed church have decided to give their church a new carpet, each contributing one dollar to the fund. The one dollar is to be earned by them and will be turned into the general fund at a meeting to be held in August. The manner of their earning the money will also be recited, and a number of humorous incidents are looked for.

Watchung Avenue Opening.

The work of opening up Watchung avenue to Johnston's Drive is progressing rapidly. Thus far the greater part of the way has been cut and the road will be graded and ballasted as soon as this is done. Street Commissioner Barrett, of the borough, is in charge of the work.

ENDEAVORERS' LAWN FESTIVAL A SUCCESS

The Japanese lawn festival of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, held last night at the corner of East Front and Church streets while not so great a success financially, was beyond criticism from an artistic viewpoint. Nothing prettier in out door decorations has ever before been seen in this city. The electrical effects under the supervision of Elmer E. Gayle were brilliantly effective and elicited much favorabe comment.

Cold weather was the cause of a limited attendance, but even so the young people gathered in enough to leave a balance on the right side of the ledger of about thirty dollars which will be added to Trinity's church building fund.

One of the pretty features of the festival were the costumes worn by the young women of the society. Unless one were personally acquainted with the young women it would not take much of a stretch of the imagination to think one was far away in Japan, where the maidens dress so quaintly and so attractively. Really the cold evening was responsible for the poor attendance, but it did not discourage the members of the society who acted as enthusiastic as though the little garden were full of visitors and buyers.

DAVIS AND D'ARCY NOT SUPPORTING DR. WILSON

Dr. Woodrow Wilson's Gubernatorial boom received yesterday setbacks when several statements were issued concerning it. Robert Davis, Democratic leader of Hudson county, authorized a denial that he had indorsed the candidacy of Dr. Wilson. He said:

"There is a quantity of available Gubernatorial timber. And, as yet, I have indorsed no one."

John J. D'Arcy, a State labor leader also issued an appeal to union men, quoting Dr. Wilson as having deprecated the influence of trades unions in his baccalaureate speech last year. He quotes Dr. Wilson as saying:

"You know what the usual standard of the employe is today. It is to give as little as he may for his wages. Labor is standardized by the trades unions. And this is the standard to which it is made to conform. No one is suffered to do more than the average workman can do. In some trades and handicrafts no one is suffered to do more than the least skillful of his fellows can do within the hours allotted to a day's labor, and no one may work out of hours at all, or volunteer anything beyond the minimum.

"I need not point out how economically disastrous such a regulation of labor is. It is so unprofitable to the employer that in some trades it will presently not be worth his while to attempt anything at all. He had better stop altogether than operate at an inevitable loss.

"The labor of America is rapidly becoming unprofitable under its present regulation by those who have determined to reduce it to a minimum. Our economic supremacy may be lost because the country grows more and more full of unfrofitable servants."

Dr. Wilson's chief political sponsor is said to be Col. George B. M. Harvey, but the politicians here seem to think that as a political backer, although he has several wealthy and influential friends in New York, Col. Harvey does not amount to much.

The Montclair Democratic Club has appealed to the voters of the Seventh New Jersey Congressional District in support of Edward W. Townsend, author of "Chimmie Fadden" and other stories, for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

"Our party representation in Washington will be measurably improved in character if we send a man of his type," is the wording of the appeal.

PERCY A. COOK IS HOME

Returns from Bermuda with Record for Fishing and a Relic of Ancient War.

GUEST OF GOV. KITCHENER.

To Act as Judge at Hamilton, Bermuda, Poultry Show in December—Has Many Other Accomplishments.

Percy A. Cook, of Mountain avenue, near Scotch Plains, has returned home after a three weeks' fishing trip in the Bermuda Islands. With John Sheppard, of Brooklyn, N. Y., he was living for three weeks on Castle Island, Bermuda, one of the most picturesque in the West Indian group.

All sorts of rare and game fish were caught by the two anglers by rod and line. Among the fifteen species captured were angel fish, red and white tuangs, grasbys, murrays, groupers and mackerel. Three castles are located on the island, hence the name. They were erected in 1619. Mr. Cook found a cannon imbedded in a coral reef and dug it out and he now has it at his home nar Scotch Plains.

General Kitchener, the Governor General of the Islands, entertained Mr. Cook during his recent visit there. He will return there in December as the Governor General's guest and will act as a judge at the Hamilton Poultry show to be held that month.

Mr. Cook and Mr. Sheppard stopped off at Atlanta, Ga., on their trip down to Bermuda, to visit friends. Word came to him there that a lion was ferocious because its trainer was ill and unable to manage it. Mr. Cook volunteered to subdue it and with the aid of a policeman's club enterd the lion's cage and tamed the animal single handd. He was lionized during the remainder of his stay there.

Referring to him, the Atlanta Georgian contained this account:

"Chicken raiser, lion tamer, big game hunter, auto rocer, aviator and Boer fighter, running the gamut from the most peaceful occupation to the most dangerous—

"That is Percy A. Cook, of Scotch Plains, N. J., who is attendeing the Atlanta poultry show, where his fowls are represented by a large number of entries. He is the head of the American branch of William Cook & Sons, of England, originators and world breeders of the famous Orpington chickens.

"In none of his spectacular accomplishments, however, does he take more genuine pride than in producing fine specimens of his remarkable fowls.

"To meet the demand for a heavy table chicken, which would also be a prolific layer, the Orpington was originated by the late William Cook, of Kent, England. Since his death the business has been conducted by his two sons, Percy A. Cook and A. L. Cook, and his daughter, Mrs. E. J. Clark.

In addition to the farms in England and the United States the firm has two farms in Africa, one at Johannesburg, Transvaal, and the other at Durban, Natal, and also a farm at Sidney, Australia.

"Of all the farms Mr. Cook states that the American one is the best and most profitable one, the sum of $28,000 being realized as clear profit on this branch alone last year.

"He was at one time sub-lieutenant in the British navy, and as a member of the naval brigade saw shore service in the Boer war, his command participating in 27 engagements and forming a part of the relief of Ladysmith.

"He is an enthusiastic hunter and naturalist and has spent several months in Central Africa shooting lions and other big game. As a naturalist and lover of animals he has at his home in Scotch Plains, two African lions, two leopards, and two bears, which he has himself tamed and trained, and so well has he done this, that in one of his cages a lion, a dog and a monkey are all living together in peaceful relations.

"He owns a number of autos, touring cars to conduct visitors to his farm and racers for his own use. He has raced on all the New Jersey tracks and as an amateur has more than a local reputation. He states that he intends to race in the next meet on the Atlanta track.

"Recently his fancy has turned to flying machines. He invented one of his own design, but in a trial flight it received a smash-up and was destroyed. There is now building for him in France an "Antoinette" monoplane of the Latham design. "When I get my machine," said Mr. Cook, "I am going to be right up with all the rest of the flyers."

BROOKLYN COUPLE HELD

Suspicious Actions of Pair Cause Their Arrest by Local Police.

INTRODUCED WOMAN AS WIFE.

Actions of Motley at Trenton Show Something is Wrong—Both Are Taken into Custody on Mans Return from Trenton.

John Motley, who it is alleged has traveled under the alias of Francis Wayne, and a young woman who gives her name as Fannie O'Brien, of Union street, Brooklyn, are being held at Police headquarters pending an investigation by Chief Kiely. Both were arrested last night on suspicion.

According to what has already been learned from the couple they arrived here on Sunday night and went to the home of Joseph Ennis, at 126 Central avenue where Motley introduced the O'Brien woman as his wife. Mr. Ennis's suspicions were aroused as the young woman did not seem to be acting right and when Motley suggested a trip to Trenton Ennis promptly acquiesced hoping that on the way he might glean some more information about the couple and their intended actions here.

On their arrival at the Capital they hunted up a brother-in-law of Motley and while there, it is alleged, certain suggestions were made which practically confirmed Mr. Ennis' suspicions. Sure of his facts the latter returned to this city and presented the story to Chief Kiely. In the meantime Motley was expecting that Ennis would send his "wife" to him at Trenton.

Of course, Mr. Ennis had no such intention after learning what would become of the young woman if she ever went to Trenton, and Motley telegraphed several times to discover why she was not sent. Finally Motley telephoned to Chief Kiely and the later advised the young man to come over and get his wife himself. This Motley did and both were promptly arrested.

It is believed by the police that Motley intended to take the young woman to Trenton for immoral purposes, and as his latest escapade concludes a career which it is alleged is full of misdeeds it is quite likely that when the Brooklyn police get through with him he will never come this way again. Allegations of theft are made against Motley and it is said that he has spent one term in prison. The young woman, it is said, stole five dollars from her parents to make the trip Jerseyward. The whole matter will be cleared up by the police in a day or two.

MRS. FLANDERS WEDS GEO. E. WEBB, OF TEXAS

Mrs. Hannah Y. Flanders, of Grove street, daughter of Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, and George E. Webb, of San Angelo, Texas, were married at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the home of her sister, Mrs. Walter McGee, of Rockview avenue. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. There were no attendants. Only the relatives and the immediate friends witnessed the ceremony. Following the wedding, a reception was held.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb will reside at San Angelo, where Mr. Webb is a prominent business man, He is president of the First National Bank, in that city, and is vice president of the American Banking Association of Southern Texas. His bride is a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, who at the time of his death had been pastor of the First Baptist church for thirty-nine years and was one of the most prominent clergymen in the state.

East Fourth Street Repairs Done.

The Public Service Corporation has completed repairs to its track on East Fourth street and now the street is again entirely open to traffic. New ties were put in and the roadbed was reballasted. During the improvements much inconvenience was caused commuters who had to drive around Park avenue to approach the depot.

—Fruits and vegetables in great variety, at Neuman Bros., grocers.

Dr. H. H. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who was one of the delegates to the World Missionary conference, held at Edinburgh, Scotland, returned last night, arriving by way of Montreal.

FLAMES CAUSE BIG LOSS

Three Thousand Dollars Damages in the Schepflin Building.

CAUSE OF FIRE UNKNOWN.

Schiller Bros. Skirt Factory, R. B. Van Arsdale, H. E. Hansen, Clothiers' Supply Co. and Co. K Losers.

A serious fire, which threatened destruction to the whole building broke out shortly before 7 o'clock last night in the Schiller Brothers' skirt factory, which is located on the third floor of the Schepflin building and before it was extinguished, estimated damage to the amount of $3,000 had accrued to the building and effects from fire, smoke and water. The cause of the fire is unknown, utb it is possible that rats and matches were at the bottom of it.

The skirt factory occupies the third floor in the Schepflin building, as well as in the adjoining building. Above it, is a dance hall, while on the floor below Company K has its headquarters. The ground floor is occupied by R. B. Van Arsdale's mantel store, H. E. Hansen's paint shop and the Clothiers' Supply Co. All places with the exception of the dance hall suffered heavily.

A large amount of stock as well as a portion of the building shffered in the skirt factory. In order that the firemen could get at the flames, sections of this floor had to be torn down, and when they did locate the fire, large volumes of water were played on it. This damaged the stock of the skirt company and much of the water leaked through to the floors below.

What the damage to the equipment of Company K will be has as yet not been ascertained. Many blankets and much paraphernalia of the soldiers was damaged by water, but it is thought that considerable property can be reclaimed. An elegant piano was saved from any damage whatsoever, by being carefully protected and covered by blankets.

On the ground floor, Hanson's paint shop and Van Arsdale's mantel store, which are located in the same shop and the Clothiers' Surprise Co., suffered heavy damage from water soaking. Much of their stock is a complete loss as considerable water leaked from the upper floors down into their stock. A computation of the actual loss will take several days.

The fire had gained much headway before the alarm was rung in and a delay of five minutes would have meant that the building would have been a total loss. When the apparatus from companies 1 and 2 arrived on the scene, the flames which were eating up the third floor were attacked from above and below. Picks, axes and water were all used in extinguishing the fire, but it was not until a full hour of hard work had been consumed that the blaze was finally quenched. The firemen in order to get at the seat of the trouble were forced to tear down many partitions. This involved both a delay in getting the srteams onto the flames and also an expenditure of much hard work. When the water was finally played on the flames, the blaze was soon gotten under control.

HIS BODY TOUGHER THAN THE ROADWAY.

A near-serious accident which in the end developed a humorous side occurred yesterday afternoon at the corner of East Fifth street and Washington avnue. A motor cyclist, who was rounding that corner at a fast rate of speed, cut the curb too closely, with the result that he was thrown heavily to the street. Occupants of nearby porches, who saw the accident, thinking he might be seriously hurt, dan to his assistance.

By the time they had reached him he had arisen from the ground and was brushing himself off. When questioned as to whether he was hurt or not, he answered in the negative and with a grin, that caused his rescuers to smile, he mounted his wheel and was off. He refused to give his name.

Improvement to Playground.

An awning of canvass stretched over a permanent wooden framework was put up at the Bryant school playground yesterday afternoon. The drinking fountain recently installed has been put in operation too. During the past week the attendance was unusually encouraging at both city playgrounds despite several extremely hot days.

Miss Althea Vail, of East Second street, has left for Somerville, where she will spend her vacation.

FLAG POLE REPAIRED; PLAYGROUND OPENED

Fearing that children playing in the Bryant school playground might be hurt by a falling flag pole, the playground was closed yesterday for the first time since the opening after Independence Day.

The 150 foot flag staff in the yard of the school was struck by lightning Saturday afternoon and the iron band about the upper pole was completely loosened from its bolts, witn the result that the upper pole which is about 40 feet long was suspended on one pivot-like iron band joined to the second pole which is fixed in the ground. A heavy wind would have furnished sufficient force to upset the balance and blow the pole over.

The discovery of the condition of the pole was made yesterday morning by Jesse Scull, janitor of the Bryant school, who went to the playground to raise the flag. He immediately notified Miss Harriet Moe, of the dangerous condition of the pole, and it was decided to dismiss the children until repairs had been made.

This morning the pole was lowered carefully and new spiked were driven in to clutch the old iron band. The job was well done and it is believed that for the present this will afford sufficient temporary safety. The playground has been reopened.

NEW BARACA CLASS AT AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

A Baraca class has been formed by the men of the aptist church of South Plainfield with a membership of twenty-five. Over forty men gathered in the church parlors at the invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. J. Allen.

A supper was served at 8 o'clock and following this interesting session Rev. E. R. Allen, of Philadelphia, gave an inspiring address on the "Elements of Success In a Complete Life,' from which lessons were learned by the young men which will be remembered throughout their lives. Pastor J. J. Allen then addressed the men on the Baraca work and invited all those present who were interested in such work to give their names. There was an immediate response and in a short time more than a score of the men announced their intentions of joining. Sunday, July 17, was announced as the day set for organization of the new class and the following officers were elected:

President, Edward TenEyck; vice-president, Oscar Thorne; secretary, Howard Mellick; treasurer, Milton Rose; assistant secretary, Monroe Pyatt; hustlers, Emil Bittner and Mr. Pyatt; chairman social committee, Joseph Horne; chairman athletic committee, Elwood Johnson.

Aggressive work will be commenced at once, the men showing an enthusiasm which presages success. The class meets for Bible study Sundays at 12 o'clock noon.

MERCHANTS TO PLAY BALL ON HALF HOLIDAYS.

At the meeting of the Merchants' Association last night arrangements for a series of baseball games were made to take place on the Thursday afternoons during August when the half holidays are in vogue. It is proposed to play four games between the merchants on East Front and those on West Front. If there is a tie at the conclusion of these games the deciding game will be played on Labor Day. The trophy for which they will play is a silver cup which may be retained by the winning merchants for one year. The cup is donated by the entire association.

The committee having the matter in charge is composed of A. C. Lohrman, chairman; Charles H. Greer, J. Weinberger and A. E. Force.

Letter Carriers' Vacations.

On next Saturday, July 23, the following letter carriers will start on their vacations. The men are allowed fifteen days exclusive of Sundays and holidays. F. W. Bailey, route 13; J. C. Bailey, route 8; Charles Glaentzer, route 22; F. W. Ligge, route 18; Charles Schleiff, route 1. The following men will be the substitutes: Aug. VanArsdale, route 8; Bert Harold, route 18; Mark Keller, route 22; Alvah Dunham, route 13, and Charles Weaver, route 1.

Fire In Chimney.

A chimney blaze at the home of J. M. Carthy, 1129 South Second street, was put out by a single extinguisher from Company 3 last night at 7:20. The damage was slight.

PIERCE STATES POSITION

Says It's Up to the People Whether He Shall Be a Candidate.

FOR ASSEMBLY NOMINATION.

Considers it Would Be Selfish to Push Himself for a Fourth Term in the Lower House.

Bearing the earmarks of an inspired story, a Newark morning Democratic paper today tells its readers that Carlton B. Pierce, of Cranford, will not be a candidate for renomination and re-election to the Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce.

Assembly, though there was absolutely no foundation for the yarn. As a matter of fact, the efficient and popular lawmaker has not until today had a word to say regarding his position politically and this paper is authorized t odeny the tale that he has refused a renomination.

Mr. Pierce, who has made an excellent representative of his Union county constituents in the lower house at Trenton, told a representative of this paper this afternoon that he could not understand where the Newark paper got such a story. At first he said he would rather not discuss the subject as it was altogether too early and too hot to talk politics. Finally, however, he consented to make a brief statement. This is what he said:

"I have already been honored by the people of Union county three times as one of their three chosen assemblymen and I consider that it would be selfish on my part to ask them to send me back again. As to how I have discharged the trust they reposed in me, that is not for me but for them to say. That I like the work, I cannot deny. No, I will not say that I won't be a candidate; that is up to the people to say and I shall abide by their wishes as a good Republican. If the party wants me to run I shall consider it my duty to do so."

From what can be learned from the "Progressive" camp, there appears to be no opposition to Mr. Pierce. Neither does there seem to be any as regards Lloyd Thompson, of Westfield, who has just finished his first term. It is expected generally that the regular Republican organization will support these two men provided they are the choice of the respective districts in which they reside. As to Augustus W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth, who has finished his second term, there appears to be some doubt. Mr. Schwartz is making a fight for a third nomination. The "Progressives," it is understood, do not favor his candidacy.

A pleasant word was spoken by an afternoon paper of Newark yesterday for Mayor Charles J. Fisk as a proper candidate for the honor. As party custom does not bring a nomination to this section this fall, inasmuch as Plainfield has a candidate for Congress, who will undoubtedly be named, Mr. Fisk would be out of the question. Aside from party custom, the nomination would be impossible as Mr. Fisk has stated repeatedly during the last few days since he declined to run for the mayoralty that he is "out of politics." George W. V. Moy, the "Progressive" candidate for the mayoralty, has been urged by his friends in that wing of the party to become a candidate for the Assembly nomination. He has positively declined to do so. His papers as a candidate for the mayoralty will be filed within a few days. Signers have been obtained for him in the First ward and the petition is now being circulated in the Fourth ward.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The condition of Joseph Hill, of Grove street, the lineman for the C. R. R. of N. J., who was injured by falling from one of the company's bridges last Friday, is much improved. Mr. Hill was testing a cable at the time, and lost his hold falling twenty-six feet. He was internally injured but his condition is now so improved that he is expected out shortly.

Extensive improvements are being made to the former B. K. Burke property by the new owners. A feature of the work is the enlarging and remodelling of the chimney, which when completed will allow for a large open fire place in the interior.

The Board of Education of Piscataway township will hold a meeting in the New Market school house tonight, when the bids for transporting pupils to the several schools will be opened.

In a letter to his father, Edward Pennock, Richard says that he arrived safely at the Y. M. C. A. camp in Sussex county and is enjoying life immensely. He will be gone until July 29.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Webber, of Ellsworth, Maine, are spending the summer with their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Webber.

The condition of Miss Pearl Dodwell, who was confined to her home a portion of last week through illness, is somewhat improved.

A valuable horse belonging to John C. Dilts, the local liveryman of Front street, died yesterday morning of the colic.

Miss Kate Sigel, of Somerville, has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Jacob Schneider, of New Market.

SOMERVILLE.

Charles Matthews and Lyle Kershone entertained a number of visitors Sunday at their camp along the Raritan River.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lane and family, of Jersey City, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Munday.

Cornelius Flynn and Wilbur Garretson are at Lake Hopatcong for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garretson and children are at Asbury Park.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A complaint has been made to the Township Committee by a number of residents who live in the east end of town regarding the condition of Stout avenue. Mercury vines extend out over the sidewalks and the high weeds in wet weather are a nuisance. The property owners are to be notified regarding the mercury and the township will have the weeds cut.

The action of two strangers, with the ear marks of looking for something easy, excited the residents of Front street Sunday night. No robbery was reported although from the action of the dogs at Judge Clark's home it was thought that an attempt was made to get away with the horse in the barn.

William Hollingsworth, who has been visiting his father Loftus Hollingsworth, of Johnson's Drive, has returned to his home in New York.

The town has a deserted look today on account of a majority of the residents being at Asbury Park on the Big 8 excursion.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, of Westfield avenue, have been entertaining relatives from out of town.

Henry Dean, of Park avenue, has returned from a stay of several weeks at the Delaware Water Gap.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover Sterns, of Front street, have been entertaining relatives from out of town.

George Keuhn returned yesterday from a week's outing at Asbury Park and Ocean Grove.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Oak Tree is planning for an outdoor carnival on the church grounds, for the benefit of the Marconnier Chapel. Moving pictures will be the principle attraction and from indications it bids fair to surpass the Chinese fete given for the benefit of the church last year. Don't forget the date twenty-third and twenty-fourth of August. Tickets twenty-five cents including refreshments and admission to moving pictures.

The disappearance of Wilson Day still continues to be a mystery. It is thought he has gone to some far off clime and will not return to this section again.

A number of men who are employed in the Spicer Manufacturing plant recently erected here, will shortly move to this village.

A two cylinder, six horsepower gasoline car has been installed as part of the equipment of William Reilly's section gang.

Sam Johnson is cutting the hay at Brookside farm on shares. The crop is exceptionally large, and a good one at that.

Miss Marjorie Voorhies, of Asbury Park, has returned again to Lakeside Farm to spend the balance of the season.

The open air service at the Baptist church was a great success and was much enjoyed by all who attended.

Colonel Hardy who recently purchased the Beckstun place, has gone into a sanitarium for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McIntosh called upon friends here yesterday.

BOUND BROOK.

Charles Van Pelt and Miss Ada Miller were married Saturday afternoon in the Congregational parsonage by the Rev. A. E. Shattuck.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman and family, of East Second street, are visiting in Keyport.

Mrs. Michael Moynihan and daughter, Nora, have returned from Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Abigail Rigney, of Worcester, has returned home after a visit here.

NEW JERSEY BREWERS WATCHING AN APPEAL

Of immense interest to the brewery interests and liquor men of this State as well as adjoining States where liquor is sold in department stores for shipment to points in New Jersey is the appeal to the court of errors and appeals from the conviction of Charles and Otto Kind, of Atlantic county, of illegally selling liquor to the borough of Vineland, where no liquor licenses exist and where the authorities have claimed that it is illegal to bring liquor into the territory, although that liquor comes from a place where license to sell liquor exists. The briefs of this important case went to the court at Trenton, last week and are being considered by the justices and judges of the court while they are on vacation during the summer time. No decision is possible before the November opinion day of this the highest court in the State, and on this decision of the court will rest the right to bring liquor into unlicensed territories of New Jersey from the sources above enumerated.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Dr. Fitz-Randolph, chemist of the State Board of Health, asserts that the milk supply of Camden is second to none in the State in the mattery of purity.

Six-year-old George J. Young, of 282 Washington street, while playing on a raft in South Cove, Jersey City, Sunday, fell overboard and was drowned.

The body of a man was taken to the Woodbury morgue Sunday, having been found in the river at National Park. It is evidently that of a sailor and is badly decomposed.

Bitten on the hand by a horse, Harry Morgan, forty-six years old, of 436 William street, Camden, had the painful wound attended at the Homeopathic Hospital Sunday.

Relatives and friends of Sydney Gueterman, thirty years old, of Philadelphia, whose parents are cottagers at Atlantic and New Hampshire avenues, Atlantic City, expressed alarm Sunday for his safety. Mr. Gueterman left his home in the uptown cottage district Saturday evening for a short stroll.

In the severe electrical storm which passed over Cape May County Saturday night a bolt of lightning struck the barn on the farm of Henry Long, nine miles distant, totally destroying it and killing two horses. Telegraph and telephone communication was interfered with, the service being demoralized until morning.

The Cumberland County Automobile Club and Good Roads Association have decided to make today's "joy ride" for inspection of the roads of this section of the State a larger affair than was at first contemplated. Not only the members of the Board of Freeholders and representatives of the press have been invited, but also all the county officials.

The Loudenslager faction of the Republican party in Gloucester County has decided to name Lee T Halleck, a Clayton man, as the candidate for Assembly. Assemblyman Heritage, who trains with the Avis faction, has about decided not to make another try for the nomination, it is said, and nothing has been done by the Avis men to name a successor.

A collision took place at twenty minutes to 3 Sunday afternoon between two automobiles at Broadway and East Thirty-third street, Paterson, in which one of the machines was damaged to the extent of about $150. One of the machines was driven by John Youle, of the Broadway garage, while the other belonged to John D. Brown, of 1777 Broadway, New York.

Stabbed in the neck in a fight at Twenty-third and Callowhill streets, Philadelphia, Jerry Sheppard, twenty-nine years old, colored, hurried to the Camden terminal Sunday to take a train for Wildwood, where he is employed, but became so exhausted from the loss of blood that he was compelled to go to the Homeopathic Hospital, Camden, for treatment. He refused to give the name of his assailants.

Meeting for the first time since their arrival in this country from Germany thirty-five years ago Max Reinberger, a merchant of Atlantic City; Irvin P. Reinberger, a wealthy lawyer of Pine Bluff, Ark., and Benjamin F. Reinberger, a leading legal expert of St. Louis held a family reunion in Atlantic City Sunday. The three brothers were mere lads when they arrived in this country, but separated and all became prosperous. The meeting of Sunday had been talked of for a year, and when the two western brothers arrived a son of the Atlantic City man was forced to introduce them to his father, who had failed to recognize them.

Mrs. George Styles, of East Second street, who has been confined to her home for some time from an attack of rheumatism, has fully recovered and is able to be about once more.

This store will close all day Thursday during August to give our employees a full holiday.

ADV. IN NEWSPAPER LEADS TO WEDDING

Paterson, July 19.—"June 5 I advertised for a secretary. I received fifty-seven applications from men and women. Having made a study of phrenology, I selected one. She proved so satisfactory I made her my wife last Tuesday."

Dr. David Le Count Campau, a veterinary surgeon, of 208 Webster avenue, Brooklyn, makes this announcement and reveals a romance which began with an advertisement. Dr. Campau was married to Miss Elizabeth Francis Davis, of Paterson, in the rectory of the Church of St. Rose of Lima, Parkville, Brooklyn.

Dr. Campau, who was a widower, had no idea of being married again when he inserted the advertisement. The first letter he opened was signed by Miss Davis, who set forth her qualifications.

"Paterson is so far from here that I would not have much time to stay with mother," explained Miss Davis. "Because of ill health I have been out of employment since February. A short time before that my mother gave up a position as superintendent of a Paterson silk factory, which she held for twenty-five years."

When Dr. Campau had finished his first dictation he proposed to change the name of his concern to the Campau-Davis Manufacturing Company with Miss Davis as secretary and treasurer.

"That will make it possible for you and your mother to live in Parkville," said Dr. Campau. 'If she would like to make the change I would be more than pleased to become her son-in-law."

There was a hitch when Miss Davis told her business partner she could not seal the life partnership unless he became a Catholic. Again the doctor was prepared to meet the emergency, and he promptly consulted Father James McAleese, of the Church of St. Rose of Lima. A day later, Dr. Campau had his touring car ready, and the couple were on their way to the marriage license bureau.

Mrs. Joseph Sattels, of West Sixth street, and Miss Doris Sattels, started this morning for Niagara for a lengthy stay, during which time they will visit many points of interest in Canada.

Mrs. James Van Buskirk, of the Bristol, who has been seriously ill for a long time at the home of her father, Dr. Gregory in Strawsburg, Pa., has fully recuperated and is expected home soon.

SURE PREVENTATIVE OF TUBERCULOSIS CLAIMED

Pittsburg, Pa., July 19.—The State Board of Health in Pennsylvania has just completed experiments in preventing tuberculosis, which it is claimed will in time completely stamp out the disease which is carrying off two millions of persons annually. The announcement of this discovery was made Saturday by Dr. S. G. Dixon, of Philadelphia, State commissioner of health, at a banquet given in McKeesport.

Dr. Dixon was slated for an address, but before beginning he said he had a little surprise for the physicians gathered, and it was in the shape of an announcement that a sure preventative for tuberculosis had been found. The State Board of Health is now working hard on the principle that the same preventative may be used as a cure also for cases partly developed. This, however, has not yet been assured.

Dr. Dixon said he was not yet at liberty to give out the secrets of the preparation, which, he said, would be used to inoculate both sexes when quite young. It is something along the same lines as the famous lymph of Dr. Koch, though three times as powerful. Dr. Dixon said the authorities in Harrisburg had been working on the process for several years and that the first principle involved was the discovery of an obscure country doctor.

The State Commission of Health will ask the State of Pennsylvania for a large appropriation to be used in the erection of an institution so the discovery can be applied.

Heat Victim Frozen to Death.

Florence, N. J., July 19.—To be frozen to death in mid-July was the fate of a young Rumanian, known only as Paolo, here Sunday. Paolo was employed at the Florence Iron Foundry, and in the intense heat of Saturday he was overcome. Carried to his boarding house, a doctor was called, and he advised placing ice about the sufferer's head. The doctor said the man's condition was not serious. The eager friends of the young man took the advice to literally and placed large cakes of ice about his head, his neck and his limbs. Becoming alarmed over the man's condition, they called a neighbor, who discovered that Paolo had been dead for some time. Dr. Baird was called, and he found that too much ice had actually frozen the man. No one was held responsible for the death.

DEMOCRATS IN OPPOSITION.

Conditions are mixed in the Democratic camp in Hudson County, N. J. Robert Davis, the party leader, has repudiated the statement of Representative Eugene Kinkead that he (Davis) would make public a statement explaining why he favored the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for Governor. Mr. Davis said that there would be no statement yesterday he added.

"Nobody has a right to do any talking for me. I can make my own statements."

He refused to discuss politics, and, when pressed, said:

"Hunt up Kinkead, and let him do some more talking."

Omelet Recipe.

Jules Gouffe, the once famous chef to royalty, in his cook book, now out of print, gives the following rule for a flaming apricot omelet: Beat six eggs with a fork and add two pinches of sugar and a small pinch of salt. Fry the omelet in the usual way, and before folding it spread it with three tablespoonfuls of apricot jam. Fold the sides of the omelet over the jam and put it on a dish. Sprinkle fine sugar over the omelet, and glaze it with a salamander. Place on the dish in which it is to be served and pour over it a gill of hot Jamaica rum. Set the rum on fire and serve the omelet burning.

Modern cooks have modified or changed this rule to suit themselves. Escoffier uses mincemeat instead of the jam and calls it Christmas omelet. In making the omelet he adds for six eggs two tablespoonfuls of cream, a pinch of either orange rind or lemon rind and one tablespoonful of rum.

Any kind of jam or preserves may be used, or the filling may be omitted altogether, the rum being poured over a plain, sweet omelet glazed with sugar. In order to make the omelet esupecially delicate, the yolks and whites are sometimes beaten separately and folded together.

So Like a Family.

"Dear," said Mrs. Newcome, to her husband, on the evening of their first day at Lonesomehurst, "Mrs. Grabbitt—that's the lady next door—called upon me today, and she tells me all the people here are like one big family."

"Ah! yes," replied her husband, "always knocking each other."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Never Mind the Setbacks.

Never mind the setbacks,
Life is full of them.
Thorns are on the roses,
But the roses none condemn.
Never mind the trials,
Bear them with a smile,
It's the goal you're after
That is worth your while.

Never mind the failures,
Buckle in once more,
They are all forgotten
When the fight is o'er,
No one sees your bruises,
No one heeds your sighs,
All the world will cheer you,
If you win the prize.

Never mind the setbacks,
Take them with a grin,
Nothing matters, brother,
If you only win.
Tread the stony pathway
With a cheerful song,
Victory is sweetest
When the fight was strong.

Cleaning Lace.

Pure alcohol can be used with wonderful success as a means of cleaning black Spanish or chantilly lace. The alcohol should be poured into a clean basin and whipped with the hand until it is frothy, when the lace should be dipped into it and well worked about with the fingers until the dirt is removed.

After gently squeezing out the liquid the lace should be laid on a folded cloth, the patterned edge pulled out, each scallop or picot being fastened down with a pin

When perfectly dry the lace should be unpinned and pressed gently between the palms of the hands until smooth, in place of ironing it, as this would flatten the pattern and spoil the color.

Foot Notes.

Femininity must study her footgear as she has never done before, and the flat walking shoe, so long the favorite wear for walking, is quite as dead as the dodo, if not more so. Heels are not, however, extremely high, and a considerable length of foot is the effect of the moment. Varnished leather is easily first in smartness and extravagance.

A Palmy Day Regret.

Baseball isn't what it used to be out in my old town," said the boy who was selling soft drinks, cigars, chewing gum and candy.

"What makes you think so?"

"People didn't wait till they got thirsty to buy lemon soda and sarsaparilla. What they were after were bottles to throw at the umpires."—Washington Evening Star.

How to Cook Bacon.

Have your butcher slice your bacon on his dried beef slicer, and then crisp it in the oven. This bacon will be the right degree of thickness (or thinness) for wrapping oysters for "pigs in blankets."

The Miracle.

She's but a little colleen gay,
Scarce thicker than me thumb,
But oh, the word she spoke the day!
'Tis blind I am, and dumb
Her small mouth had a pleadin' twist
As though 'twas wishful to be kissed;
I thought it gave the true word whist
And hope lept in the heart of me.

But when I tried it—oh, the blow
The little hand laid on me cheek!
'Twas but a feather's weight I know
But sure, it left me faint and weak.
And oh, the look that changed her eyes!
'Twas like the change of Erin's skies
From shine to storm—the black surprise
And sorrow burst the heart o' me.

She stood there lashin' me bold ways—
So weak the gentle tongue of her,
Compared with some I've got 'twas praise—
Then somethin' sudden, seemed to stir
Within me breast. The truth it lept
Straight out, belike as if't had slept
Then—right into me arms she crept.
Sure, joy's near crazed the heart of me.

—Harper's Weekly.

Kickin'.

Kickin' 'bout de sunshine
'Cause it comes so strong;
Kickin' 'bout de cold wave
Dat's sure to las' too long;
Kickin' 'bout de rainstorm,
Kickin' 'cause it's dry,

Washington Evening Star.

Beautiful Hands.

The distinction of having the smallest hands in the world belongs to the American women, and next to them come the ladies of Austria, Spain, France and Italy. Russians have long but beautifully shaped hands; while those of Spaniards are often spoiled by the thickness of the fingers, which are apt to be rounded at the tips. The hands of aristocratic Englishwomen are generally well shaped, but they are somewhat long, and are apt to be too dry. No one takes such good care of her hands as the French grande dame. Germans generally have somewhat large, fat hands, with very large fingers.

Disqualified.

That little fellow there with his toes out may be President of these United States some day," said the man passing to a companion.

"You're mistaken, mister," said the poor boy's little mate.

"Why am I mistaken, my little man?"

"Because Jimmie's a Democrat."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Simple Matter.

"Charley, dear," said Young Mrs. Torkins, "the paper says that the Prohibitionists have trouble with bootleggers."

"I believe so."

AUG. LA VERE ACQUITTED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Augustus La Vere was acquitted of a charge of assault and disorderly conduct before Recorder Dolliver in the borough court this morning. La Vere was originally tried by the recorder on June 21 charged with assault on complaint of Elizabeth Dorman, of 302 Grove street. At that time, the accused was acquitted of the assault charge, but was fined $10 for disorderly conduct. The defendant's counsel, William G. De Meza immediately gave notice of an appeal. A new trial was granted by Recorder Dolliver, and the hearing was set for today.

This morning La Vere appeared in court with three new witnesses, but neither the complainant nor her counsel, Francis J. Blatz was in evidence. Recorder Dolliver after seeing the state of affairs decided that La Vere had been vindicated nad acquitted him.

STRUCK BY ENGINE; TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

A fracture of the right hip and internal bruises were the extent of the injuries to Paul Prinzen, of Newark, who was run down by a Lehigh Valley engine at the South Plainfield station this morning at 5.30. Prinzen is a laborer, is 37 years old and unmarried. His escape from more serious injury is considered miraculous.

It is reported that he was walking up the tracks reading a newspaper. An engine which had just coaled up and was backing to its train struck him. Prinzen was stunned and thrown to the ground heavily. Station attendants picked him up and hurried him to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was reported as doing nicely this afternoon.

HERE AND THERE.

"I trust it will be many years before I have to wear crape on my sleeve," said the sity salesman, "but when that sad time does come perhaps I shall profit by a tip I picked up the other day in a tailor's shop. A customer gave an order to sew crape on his sleeve while he waited.

"'Who is dead?' the tailor asked.

"'My wife,' said the man.

"'First or second?' said the tailor.

"'Second,' said the man.

"Without further remarks on either side the tailor sewed on the crape. When the man put his coat on he loked at the mourning band doubtfully.

"'What did you put it away down there for?' he said. 'Why didn't you put it in the usual place between the shoulder and elbow?'

"'Because that isn't the proper place for mourning a second wife,' said the tailor. 'A second wife calls for the mourning band between the elbow and the hand, and any tailor who knows his business will put it there.'"

PLAYGROUND ATTENDANCE MATERIALLY DECREASED.

According to the reports of Playground Supervisors, the Misses Moe and Childs, a total of 982 hildren were in attendance at the two playgrounds for the second week. This is a falling off of almost 100 children over the opening week's figures. The week's decrease was directly due to the extreme heat, which necessitated keeping the children indoors. However, the average daily attendance since the grounds were opened is 187 and speaks well for the supervision. No accidents have been reported, neither has there been a case calling for discipline.

The playgrounds are now completely equipped. Drinking fountains have been installed at both yards and large shade shelters have been erected. The work is carried out in a systematic order and the supervisors are prepared to meet the needs of all children in attendance.

A Birthday Party.

George A. Lacas, 3rd, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lacas, Jr., of 1100 Putnam avenue, gave a party for a number of his young friends yesterday afternoon. It was the occasion of his fifth birthday anniversary. He received a number of remembrances. Games were played and refreshments were served.

Passenger Train Delayed.

A broken eccentric strap delayed train No. 8, the 9.58 for New York, for fifteen minutes in the local station this morning. After being repaired by the engineer, the train resumed its interrupted trip.

FORMAL FAREWELL TO MR. AND MRS. T. LEECH

A largely attended service was held in the Rescue Mission last night the object of which was to bid a formal goodby to Thomas Leach who left today with his wife to take up mission work among the miners at Sterling, Ill.

A fine musical program was rendered and gifts were presented to both Mr. and Mrs. Leach by members of the mission and their friends. Short addresses were made by Robert Love, John Lematty and other workers in the mission. Following is the program:

Song service, led by Mr. Lematty; Hymn No. 295, "I am Thine;" Scripture, Joshua, 1-9; prayer, John Lematty; address, Robert Love, superintendent of the West End Tabernacle, John Lematty, Superintendent Lematty, of the Rescue Mission, and other officers.

The Ladies' Bible class of the West End Tabernacle at this pont presented to Mr. Leech a handsome fountain pen. Following the presentation Miss Bennett, Mrs. Honeyman and Mr. Barretson sang a trio and the quartet from the West End Tabernacle sang a selection. The concluding prayer was by Mr. Love. Refreshments were served after the service.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Smith and Sydney Smith of Ridgewood Heights, L. I., have returned home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Sutton, of Liberty street.

Registered this week among automobile tourists at the Hotel Sagamore, Lake George, N. Y., were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Freeman, H. H. Freeman and E. W. Freeman, of South avenue.

Plainfield visitors at Lake Hopatcong include Miss Ethel Humphries, at Camp Dolan, on Halsey Island, Roy Titsworth visiting F. L. Woodhull at Barwood and Leroy Woodhull and F. C. Martin, who are spending the summer at the cottage.

Miss Edna Oliver, of East Fifth street, who was severely hurt in a runaway accident last week at Lebanon, has so fully recovered, that she is now able to be about. Her aunt, Mrs. Mantz, who was also injured at the same time will leave soon to continue her vacation at Lebanon.

Barn on Fire.

A small fire in the barn of L. W. Serrell, of 964 West Seventh street, at 1:15 this afternoon, necessitated the calling out of the apparatus from companies one and two. A servant girl in burning up some papers on a rubbish fire allowed the flames too near the building with the result that the barn was soon burning rapidly. The damage amounted to about $75.

Looking for Games.

member of the Union County Board of Freeholders, was referred to by a Newark morning paper as a possible candidate for an Assembly nomination.

Orpington farm, near Scotch Plains, are the famous Orpington prize winners, an aviary containing peacocks, cuckatoos, cranes and numerous rare and precious birds. They also have a lion, a tiger and several rare species of monkeys, an aeroplane and motor cars.

Mr. Cook will race in the motor boat "Togo," in Bermuda Islands next December.

Auto Ride for Children.

An automobile ride for the 237 children at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp is being planned for tomorrow afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock. Automobiles have been offered for this purpose by Alexander Millar, George A. Chapman, J. D. Loizeaux, James D. Parker, John Truell and S. W. Rushmore. Any others having cars and who wish to help out in the enterprise may telephone their wishes to Herbert Henry, 413-L or they may have the cars at the camp at 5 o'clock when the ride begins.

Mygrant Reappointed.

William S. Mygrant, of Saugerties, N. Y., formerly of Fanwood, has received the appointment for the ensuing summer to play in Prospect Park, Brooklyn. Mr. Mygrant is leader of the Seventh Regiment band, and has played before numerous distinguished audiences. There was much competition for the appointment this year.

His Canoe Upset.

Roswell Duncan, who figured in a canoe upset at the New Market lake about a week ago is confined to his home with a severe cold. The lad was apparently uninjured after the untimely wetting; but several days afterward a heavy cold set in followed by its usual minor complaints

SHOOTING TOURNEY AT STATE RANGES

Sea Girt, July 19.—Marksmen throughout the country are looking forward with great interest to the twentieth annual Sea Girt shooting tournament, which is to be held here on the New Jersey State range from September 1 to 10, inclusive, and which will include the matches of the New Jersey Rifle Association, the New York State Rifle Association and the Pennsylvania State Rifle Association. The competitors in the combined matches will include the crack shots of America. Among them will be marksmen of most all the branches of the United States army and navy, the United States military and naval academies and the national guard.

Coming so soon after the national matches at Camp Perry, O., the big Sea Girt tournament should be a record one both in point of attendance and competition. General Bird W. Spencer, executive officer and post commandant, has issued the program for the tournament, which gives a complete list of the matches, conditions under which they are to be shot, the prizes and the dates for the matches. The order of events will be as follows:

September 1—Columbia trophy match (New Jersey State Rifle Association), 200, 500, 600 and 900 yards, teams of six; Columbia team match (New Jersey State Rifle Association), 200 and 500 yards, teams of five; New Jersey State Rifle Association, "Class A" trophy, 600 yards, ten shots; Keystone long range, 600 yards, ten shots; Keystone long range match (Pensylvania Rifle Association), 800 yards, ten shots.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these, not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

Iced Water is Better Than Ice Water

It is more healthy and thirst quenching.

Get a Fibre Water Cooler now before the hot weather gets unbearable.

The water flows from a glass bottle into a porcelain receptical that is enclosed with ice.. This thoroughly chills the water, using very little ice to do so.

In all sizes, complete with stand at very reasonable prices.

We also have water coolers of stone, porcelain lined at fair prices.

Housefurnishings of every description, up to date, and at prices that are right.

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Countess Fitzwilliam, the younger daughter of Lord and Lady Zetland, has become an enthusiastic aeronaut.

Mrs. Taft has become a member of the Washington Humane society. Mrs. Taft has always taken a great interest in the work done by the Humane society in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Frederick Schopf, president of the National Congress of Mothers, has been appointed a member of the American committee to attend the home educational convention at Brussels, Belgium, in August.

Miss Jennie Williams, a schoolteacher of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, camped on the cold doorstep of a public building in that town in order to be the first to file claims for a free section of land and as a reward of her grit won a section valued at $10,000.

Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin was elected at the Cincinnati convention as representative of the general federation at the national convention this year of the American Peace society. The society asked the federation to send a delegate, and Mrs. Henrotin was chosen because she has been so active in the work of establishing peace throughout the world.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS By MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"I love Marion," she breathed softly. "I would help you—I would help her—if I could." For a moment her pale beautiful face was filled with a light that might have shone from the face of an angel. "Don't you understand?" she continued, scarcely above a whisper. "I have been Strang's one great love—his life—until Marion came into his heart. I have lost—you have lost—but mine is the more bitter because Marion loves you, and Strang—"

With a cry Nathaniel sprang to her side. The candle fell from his hand, sputtered on the floor, and left them in darkness.

"Marion loves me! You say that Marion loves me?"

The woman's voice came to him in a whisper filled with the sweetness of sympathy.

"She said so tonight—in this room. She told me that she loved you as she never thought that she could love a man in this world. O, my God, is that not a balm for your heart, if it is broken? And Strang—my Strang—has forgotten his love for me!"

Nathaniel reached out his arms. They found the woman and for a time he held her hands in his, while a great silence fell upon them. He could hear the sobbing of her breath and as her fingers tightened about his own his heart seemed bursting with its hatred of this man who called himself a prophet of God; a hatred that burned furiously even as his being throbbed with the wild joys of the words he had just heard.

"Where is Marion?" he pleaded.

"I don't know," replied the woman. "They took her away alone. The others have gone to the temple."

"Do you think she is at the temple?" he inquired insistently.

"No. One of the others came back a little while ago. She said that Marion was not there."

"Where is Strang?"

This time he felt the woman tremble.

"Strang—"

She drew her hands away from him. There was a strange quiver in her voice.

"Yes—where is Strang?"

There came no reply.

"Tell me—where is he?"

"I don't know."

"Is he at the temple?"

"I don't know."

He could hear her stifled breath; he could almost feel her trembling, an arm's reach out there in the darkness. What a woman was this whose heart the Mormon king had broken for a new love!

"Listen," he said gently. "I am going to find Marion. I am going to take her away. Tomorrow you shall have Strang again—if he is alive!"

There was no answer and he moved slowly back to the door. He closed it after him as he entered the hall. Once in the big room he paused for a moment under the hanging lamp to examine his pistol and then went outside. The grove in which the castle stood was absolutely deserted. So far as he could see not even a guard watched over the property of the king. Nathaniel had become too accustomed to the surprises of Beaver island to wonder at this. He could see by the lights flaring along the harbor that the castle was in an isolated position and easy of attack. From what Strang's wife had told him and the evidences of panic in the chambers of the harem he believed that the Mormon king had abandoned the castle to its fate and that the approaching conflict would center about the temple.

Was Marion at the temple? If so he realized that she was beyond his reach. But the woman had said that she was not there. Where could she have gone? Why had not Strang taken her with his wives? In a flash Nathaniel thought of Arbor Croche and Obadiah—the two men who always knew what the king was doing. If he could find the sheriff alone—if he could only nurse Obadiah back into sane life again! He thrust his pistol into its holster. There was but one thing for him to do and that was to return to the old councilor. It would be madness for him to go down to St. James. He had lost—Strang had won. But his love for Marion was undying. If he found her Strang's wife it would make no difference to him. It would all be evened up when he killed the king. For Marion loved him—loved him—

He turned his face toward Obadiah's, his heart singing the glad words which the woman had spoken to him back there in the sixth chamber.

And as he was about to take the first step in that long race back to the mad councilor's he heard behind him the approach of quick feet. He crouched behind a clump of bushes and waited. A shadowy form was hurrying through the grove. It passed close to him, mounted the castle steps and in the doorway turned and looked back for an instant in the direction of St. James.

Nathaniel's lips quivered; the pounding of his heart half choked him; a shriek of mad, terrible joy was ready to leap from his lips.

There in the dim glow of the great lamp stood Strang, the Mormon king.

CHAPTER IX.

The Hand of Fate.

Like a panther Nathaniel crouched and watched the man on the steps. His muscles jerked, his hands were clenched; each instant he seemed about to spring. But he held himself back until Strang had passed through the door. Then he slipped along the log wall of the castle, hugging the shadows, fearing that the king might reappear and see him in time to close the door. What an opportunity fate had made for him! His fingers itched to get at Strang's thick bull-like throat. He felt no fear, no hesitation about the outcome of the struggle with this giant prophet of God. He did not plan to shoot, for a shot would destroy the secret of Marion's fate. He would choke the truth from Strang; rob him of life slowly, gasp by gasp, until in the horror of death the king would reveal her hiding place—would tell what he had done with her.

Then he would kill him!

There was the strength of tempered steel in his arms; his body, slender as an athlete's, quivered to hurl itself into action. Up the steps he crept so cautiously that he made no sound. In the intensity of his purpose Nathaniel looked only ahead of him—to the door. He did not see that another figure was stealing through the gloom behind him as cautiously, as quietly as himself. He passed through the door and stood erect. Strang had not seen him. He had not heard him. He was standing with his huge back toward him, facing the hall that led to the sixth chamber—and the woman. Nathaniel drew his pistol. He would not shoot, but Strang might be made to tell the truth with death leveling itself at his heart. He groped behind him, found the door, and slammed it shut. There would be no retreat for the king!

And the man who turned toward him at the slamming of that door, turned slowly, coolly, and gazed into the black muzzle of his pistol looked, indeed, every inch of him a king. The muscles of his face betrayed no surprise, no fear. His splendid nerve was unshaken, his eyes unfaltering as they rose above the pistol to the face behind it. For fifteen seconds there was a strange terrible silence as the eyes of the two men met. In that quarter of a minute Nathaniel knew that he had not guessed rightly. Strang was not afraid. He would not tell him where Marion was. The insuperable courage of this man maddened Captain Plum and unconsciously his finger fell upon the trigger of his pistol. He almost shrieked the words that he meant to speak calmly:

"Where is Marion?"

"She is safe, Captain Plum. She is where the friends who are invading us from the mainland will have no chance of finding her."

Strang spoke as quietly as though in his own office beside the temple. Suddenly he raised his voice.

"She is safe, Captain Plum—safe!"

His eyes wavered, and traveled beyond. As accurately as a striking serpent Nathaniel measured that glance. It had gone to the door. He heard a movement, felt a draft of air, and in an instant he whirled about with his pistol pointed to the door. In another instant he had fired and the huge form of Arbor Croche toppled headlong into the room. A roar like that of a beast came from behind him and before he could turn again Strang was upon him. In that moment he felt that all was lost. Under the weight of the Mormon king he was crushed to the floor; his pistol slipped from his grasp; two great hands choked a despairing cry from his throat. He saw the prophet's face over him, distorted with passion, his huge neck bulging, his eyes flaming like angry garnets. He struggled to free his pinioned arms, to wrench off the death grip at his throat, but his efforts were like those of a child against a giant. In a last terrible attempt he drew up his knees inch by inch under the weight of his enemy; it was his only chance—his only hope. Even as he felt the fingers about his throat sinking like hot iron into his flesh and the breath slipping from his body he remembered this murderous kneepunch of the rough fighters of the inland seas and with all the life that remained in him he sent it crushing into the abdomen of the Mormon king. It was a moment before he knew that it had been successful, before the film cleared from his eyes and he saw Strang groveling at his feet; another moment and he hurled himself on the prophet. His fist shot out like a hammer against Strang's jaw. Again and again he struck until the great shaggy head fell back limp. Then his fingers twined themselves like the links of a chain about the purplish throat and he choked until Strang's eyes opened wide and lifeless and his convulsions ceased. He would have held on until there was no doubt of the end, had not the king's wife—the woman whose misery he had shared that night—suddenly flung herself with a piercing cry, between him and the blackened face, clutching at his hands with all her fragile strength.

"My God, you are killing him—killing him!" she moaned.

Her eyes blazed as she tore at his shoulders.

"You are killing him—killing him!" she shrieked. "He has no destroyed Marion! You said you would take her and leave him—for me—" She struck her head against his breast, tearing the flesh of his wrists with her nails.

Nathaniel loosened his grip and staggered to his feet.

"For you!" he panted. "If you had only come—a little sooner—" He stumbled to his pistol and picked it up. "I am afraid he is—dead!"

He did not look back.

Arbor Croche barred the door. He had not moved since he had fallen. His head was twisted so that his face was turned to the glow of the lamp and Nathaniel shuddered as he saw where his shot had struck. He had apparently died with that last cry on his lips.

There was no longer a fear of the Mormons in Nathaniel. He believed the king and Arbor Croche dead, and that in the gloom and excitement of the night he could go among the people of St. James undiscovered. A great load was lifted from his soul, for if he had not been in time to save Marion he had at least delivered her after a short bondage. He had now only to save Marion and she would go with him, for she loved him—and Strang was no more.

He hurried through the grove toward the temple. Even before he had come near to it he could see that a great crowd had congregated there. The street which he passed was deserted. No lights shone in the houses. Even the dogs were gone. For the first time he understood what it meant. The whole town had fled to that huge log stronghold for protection. Buildings and trees shut out his view seaward but he could see the flare of great fires mounting into the sky and he knew that those who were not at the temple were guarding the shore.

Suddenly he almost fell over a figure in his path. It was an old woman mumbling and sobbing incoherently as she stumbled weakly in the direction of the temple. Like an inspiration the thought came to him that here was his opportunity of gaining admittance to that multitude of women and children. He seized the old woman by the arm and spoke words of courage to her as he half carried her on her way. A few minutes more and a blaze of light burst upon them and the great square in which the temple was situated lay open before them. Half a hundred yards ahead a fire was burning; oil and pine sent their lurid flame high up into the night, and in the thick gloom behind it, intensified by the blinding glare, Nathaniel saw the shadows of men. He caught the old woman in his arms and went on boldly. He passed close to a thin line of waiting men, saw the faint glint of firelight on their rifles, and staggering past them unchallenged with his weight he stopped for a moment to look back. The effect was startling. Beyond the three great fires that blazed around the temple the clearing was bathed in a sea of light; in its concealment of giant trees the temple was buried in gloom. From the gloom a hundred cool men might slaughter five times their number charging across that death square!

Nathaniel could not repress a shudder as he looked. Screened behind each of the three fires was a cannon. He figured that there were more than a hundred rifles in that silent cordon of men. What was there on the opposite side of the temple?

He turned with the old woman and joined the throng that was seething about the temple doors. There were women, children and old men, crushing and crowding, fighting with panic-stricken fierceness for admittance to the thick log walls. Through the doors there came the low thunder of countless voices pierced by the shrill cries of little children. Foot by foot Nathaniel fought his way up the steps. At the top were drawn a dozen men forming barriers with their rifles. One of them shoved him back.

"Not you!" he shouted. "This is for the women!"

YOUNG WOMEN RESCUE A BOY FROM DROWNING

Risking their own lives, three Brooklyn young women who are spending the summer at Lake Hopatcong, yesterday rescued John Rush, 23 years old, from drowning, and then went to the rescue of Fred Schroeder, who sank before they could reach him. The young women refused to give their names. They declared they had done no more than any other girls would have done. Schroeder and Rush were out canoeing when their craft upset. Rush was able to keep afloat until the girls could haul him into their boat. Schroeder was unable to swim. Schroeder and Rush, both of Brooklyn, arrived at Castle Edwards, a hotel at Landing, a week ago, to spend their vacation. They were on the water a great deal, although only Rush could swim, and he could do little more than keep himself afloat.

The two young Brooklynites were out on the lake Sunday night with two of the girls who figured in the rescue yesterday. An engagement was made for another boat ride yesterday, but at the last minute the two girls refused to ride in the canoe Rush and Schroeder had engaged, and the young men went out alone. About half an hour later the two girls with a companion set out in a big rowboat.

'Rush and Schroeder, after paddling several miles, were hauled in toward the beach in front of Colonel Brasher's Corinthian Cottage, when the girls, rowing along close to the shore, called to them. One of the two men stood up in the canoe to wave to the girls, and the craft tipped over.

The canoe drifted away from the young men. Rush, by violent struggles, kept himself on the surface and tried to aid his friend Schroeder. He was unable to make any progress. Schroeder soon went down.

The girls headed their rowboat for the scene of the accident. They came first upon Rush, whom they dragged into the boat. They rowed toward Schroeder, who had just appeared for the second time. He sank before they got to him.

Rush was almost insane when the girls got him ashore. He blamed himself for the loss of the life of Schroeder. The body of Schroeder has not been recovered, although scores of men in boats are dragging the lake for it. The tragedy occurred at a point about fifty yards off shore and in plain view of hundreds on the verandas of the hotels and cottages.

E. W. TOWNSEND TO RUN AGAIN FOR CONGRESS.

"He has worked for his living with his hands and his head," declares the Montclair Democratic Club in an appeal to the voters of the Seventh Congress District of New Jersey in support of Edward W. Townsend ("Chimmie Fadden"), of Montclair, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress at the primaries in September. The appeal recalls that Mr. Townsend two years ago, in a Presidential year, led the Democrats in a hopeless fight in this district.

The appeal says: "Mr. Townsend knows his country. Our party representatives in Washington will be measurably improved in character if we send a man of his type from the Seventh District of New Jersey. He is experienced in politics. He has written and published, besides the delightful stories that show his sympathies with all sorts and conditions of men, a serious historical study of the Constitution of the United States which has won high praise from competent critics."

KNIFE WOUND VICTIM IN SERIOUS PLIGHT.

Perth Amboy, July 19.—To await the outcome of injuries he is said to have inflicted on Frank Hotir, Sunday, in a boarding-house brawl, John Pesorik was committeed to jail yesterday. Hotir is at the City Hospital with a knife wound in the back of his head, which he and Mrs. Hotir say was inflicted by Pesorik, who denies the charge. Hotir's scalp is ripped open almost from ear to ear, and his condition is serious. Pesorik's wife had a babe less than a day old when the row occurred.

GRAND JURY HAD TO TRY EXCISE EXHIBIT.

New Brunswick, July 19.—That one member of the present grand jury hails form Missouri became evident in court yesterday, when Detective Frank Hoffman exhibited a bottle containing some whiskey which he testified he had bought at Dennis F. Donavan's saloon, at Perth Amboy, on Sunday, December 19. He testified that the bottle contained the drink of whiskey except a sip which a member of the grand jury took while he was showing the evidence before that body. Prosecutor Booraem declared, in justice to the grand juror, that "he wished to see if it was really whiskey."

This is the first of the Sunday selling cases against Perth Amboy liquor dealers on trial. Prosecutor Booraem got the evidence against these places over the head of Mayor Bollschwiler. George Stout was with Hoffman when he got the evidence. Stout drank both of the first two glasses served. Hoffman poured his second glass into a bottle concealed in a rain coat and produced it yesterday.

To Erect Memorial to Priest.

Announcement has been made that $750 has been contributed toward a fund for the erection of a monument to the late Rev. Cholera Mixture Causes Death.

Four ounces of cholera mixture a day taken to relieve pain caused the death Sunday night of Mrs. Lillian Porley, wife of Herbert Porley, of Blooomfield. It was thought that an overdose brought on convulsions that ended in her death. It was said that six years ago the woman was operated on for appendicitis, and since that time had been in distress, and the only relief she could obtain was from the mixture. County Physician McKenzie issued a burial permit.

Self-Inflicted Wound Fatal.

Geo. Allen, who cut his throat Sunday night, died in the General Hospital, Newark, this morning. Allen recently lost his wife, and his daughter is now seriously ill, and it was believed that his wife's death and his daughter's illness caused him to end his life.

Mr. and Mrs. Sampson, of East Fifth street, will spend the rest of the month at Belmar, N. J.

PLEA FOR LOCAL OPTION

Mr. Swackhamer Speaks on Third Magna Charta or Democracy's Opportunity.

CHAMPIONS PEOPLE'S RIGHTS.

Former Assemblyman Makes an Eloquent Speech Before a Large Crowd at Saengerbund Hall.

Eloquently advocating the cause of local option and championing the referendum, the initiative and the recall, former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, at Saengerbund hall, enthused a crowd that taxed the seating capacity of the auditorium. It was the opening gun of the campaign in Somerset county. William J. Conroy presided at the meeting which was held under the auspices of the North Plainfield Democratic club and was in the interests of no candidates or factions. Mr. Swackhamer's topic was "The Third Magna Charta, or Democracy's Opportunity." He spoke as follows:

"United States Senator Owen asked a crucial question when he said, 'If the people really rule, why don't the people get what they want?' The people wanted economy in the administration of government; they got extravagance in the administration of government. The people wanted a revision of the tariff downward; they got a revision of the tariff upward. The people wanted a scale of prices for the necessaries of life, fair alike to the bread-winner and the Trustite; they got a scale of prices that flattens the pocketbook of the bread winner, and fattens the pocketbook of the 'Trustite.' The people wanted more honesty and less rascality in public office; they got more rascality and less honesty in public office. The people wanted public servants who could be trusted behind the scenes; they got public servants who have turned State's evidence and confessed to bribery and corruption on every hand.

"In the realm of National politics it is manifest that the present administration has served the classes and betrayed the masses. As evidence of this fact, let the leading Insurgents be called to the witness stand or turn over the pages of the public records. In this State the people wanted a 'public utilities' commission with ample powers to enforce rates and inflict penalties; they got a thing called a public utilities commission with no powers except to issue orders that need not be obeyed. The people wanted a corrupt practices act to prevent the use of money for bribery purposes in elections; it was denied to them by their representatives. The people wanted the extension of the direct primary to nominations for governor and congress; it was denied to them by their representatives. Of about twenty measures upon which the people and the special interests clashed in the last Legislature, the people won one victory; the special interest eighteen, and one resulted in a compromise.

"Whom then, do the representatives at Trenton represent, the classes or the masses? Who are served at the State house, the people or the politicians and their political pets? The last Legislature increased the tax burdens of the State $1,400,000; exhausted the funds in the public treasury; threatened the public school moneys; and left bankruptcy standing on the steps of the capitol. But there is another count in this indictment of the machine politicians and bosses. In three successive years the people of this State have petitioned the Legislature for the privilege to vote on the license question. Once the appeal was made to the Assembly and twice to the Senate; but the Assembly and the Senate said, 'No! You have brains and sense enough to vote for us and send us here, but you haven't brains and sense enough to vote on the saloon question, and we won't let you do it.'

That right of self government, denied to our fathers, made America free. They said, 'A day, an hour of virtuous liberty is worth a whole eternity of bondage.' They were men who knew that 'War is Hell,' but who deemed that slavery to men of pride, is hell with the devils multiplied.

"When the fate of Free Government was trembling in the balance, the men stood appalled and pale before the awful issue; Samuel Adams stood up in the Continental congress and said, 'I should advise persisting in our struggle for liberty though it were revealed from Heaven that nine hundred and ninety-nine were to perish, and only one in a thousand survive to retain his liberty. One such freeman must possess more virtue and enjoy more happiness than a thousand slaves, and let him prop-

SUB-STATION NO. 3 P.O., WILL OPEN ON AUG. 16

Another sub-station to be known as sub-station No. 3 of the local post office will be opened by Postmaster Elias H. Bird in the confectionery store of Elmer R. Mills, at 1217 West Front street, thus adding another convenience to the people of the city, particularly those living at the west end.

There are sub-stations now on Somerset street, in the borough, which was the first to be established; another at 411 Park avenue, opened a few months ago. It is confidently expected that still another branch will be established before the year is out in the Netherwood section for the accommodation of the citizens of the east end of town.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS HAVING A FINE TIME IN CAMP

C. W. Bingaman, who has charge of the boys' work department of the Y. M. C. A., came to the city yesterday for a stay of a day from the association's camp, Waywayanda in Sussex county, bringing with him glowing reports of the progress of the work and the enjoyment of the life at the camp. Mr. Bingeman says that every one of the boys is in the best of health, and apparently all are having a glorious time.

The camp this year has been moved from the mainland, where it had been located for the past nine years to the island in the lake. This necessitated a large amount of hard work and earnest endeavor, but the willingness and earnestness of the campers made short work of the task.

On Monday an athletic meet was run off under the direction of G. L. Listman, physical director of the local association, and although the Plainfield boys secured but a tie for second place, their showing was far better than that of the Summit team, which took first place. Plainfield had four point winners, while Summit had but two, one of whom was an all around athlete and who did much to boost their total to 37 points. Plainfield and Montclair, who were tied for second place, each had 26 points, Elizabeth, 8, and Paterson, 2.

In the "unlimited class" Franklin Newell, of Sherman avenue, was the only point winner for the locals, he taking second place in the shot put. George Leigh and James McNamee counted for the local team in the "120-pound class." The former won second place in the 100-yard dash, while the latter tied for first in the high jump and came in second in the 50-yard dash. Craig Blair in the "95 pound class" won first in the standing broad jump and second in the 50-yard dash. An acquatic meet under the same conditions will be run off today.

A new large crude fireplace has just been completed in the lodge. It is the gift of the Y. M. C. Ladies' Auxiliaries of the State, but the earnest work of the local ladies aided much in making its erection possible. The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. presented the camp with a beautiful set of andirons, which are to be set before the fireplace.

FREEDOM CASTLE K. G. E. INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS.

The newly elected officers of Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, were installed last night at the lodge rooms in the Babcock building by Grand District Deputy Powlison and staff, of Somerville. Tonight Freedom Castle goes to Orange to participate in a similar service with the lodge there.

These were the officrs installe1 last night:—Past Chief Horace J. Martin; noble chief, N. J. Wiley; vice chief, Henry Weiss; Sir herald, George Church; high priest, John Bosterli and venerable hermit, Harry Joseph.

The installation was followed by a collation and speeches were made by Grand Deputy Powlison and the newly installed officers.

Visit Tuberculosis Headquarters.

J. Hervey Doane, president of the Tuberculosis Committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders, with the other members of the committee, visited the tuberculosis hadquarters in New York on Monday and obtained some useful information as to the newest and best appliances for the fighting the disease. The buildings now in use by the various tuberculosis societies throughout the country were of special interest and much was learned of the advantages of each of the approved types.

R.R. RATES GO UP TODAY

All Commuters Must Face Twenty-five Cent Increase in Fare.

INCREASE EQUALS $625 MONTH.

Injunction Proceedings Would Be of No Avail, Decides New Brunswick Board of Trade.

The fateful twentieth has arrived and the Plainfield commuter will have to face the twenty-five cent increase in the fare between here and New York. There are about 2,500 commuters in this city and the increased revenue accruing to the company on account of this one little quarter means about $625 a month. The other straight fare rates will correspondingly increase the income of the company.

There is considerable soreness, and counter accusations of indifference and incompetence were in circulation among the commuters interested in the fight against the railroads, as a result of their inability to postpone further or prevent the arrival of the evil day.

In East Orange, where Terry Parker, counsel for the Commuters' League, is the spokesman Governor Fort is being criticised for his refusal to call a special session of the Legislature to deal with the problem. The Board of Trade of New Brunswick, has it in for the Interstate Commerce Commission because, its members say, that body misled them, caught their counsel unprepared, and then gave the railroads the benefit of the doubt. Other commuters are complaining that the leaders in the fight took too much time playing politics.

But out of it all there will probably arise a stronger organization of commuters capable of a State-wide movement to demonstrate the unreasonableness of the increased rates before the commission in Washington. The commuters of New Brunswick, Metuchen and similarly situated points along the Pennsylvania Railroad will centre their energies and pool their resources in pressing before the commission the complaint and petition filed by the Board of Trade, of New Brunswick, the first passenger rate complaint filed with the commission under the recent amendment to the interstate commerce law.

At a meeting of the executive officers of the New Brunswick Board of Trade, the Commuters' League of New Brunswick and the Commuters' League of Metuchen, held on Monday night, it was decided that injunction proceedings in the courts would be of doubtful validity and that the effective prosecution of the pending proceedings was the wiser course. The active co-operation of Rahway, Elizabeth and other towns is counted upon.

Terry Parker said yesterday that he had dropped the fight, convinced that there was not another step to take that promised even a fair hope of relief.

"We have made every effort," said he, "and though we say it with much reluctance, we are forced to cease our efforts to hold up the advances any further."

But all Jersey commuters see encouragement in the fact that they were able to postpone the increase in the rates on all the roads for three weeks. This was accomplished through the Interstate Commerce Commission at the eleventh hour by the New Brunswick complaint and those filed with the commission by Attorney General Wilson of New Jersey. On some of the roads the new rates were scheduled to take effect on June 28 and on others on July 1. The commission got the roads to postpone the advances until July 20.

In instituting an investigation of the reasonableness of the advances, probably early in the fall, the commission will proceed on its own initiative, as permitted under the new law.

Harry De Meza Ill.

Henry G. De Meza, of 94 Jackson avenue, who has been on his vacation for the past two weeks at Swartzwood Lake, has been forced to remain there for the past few days owing to trouble from an abscess on his right leg. It is probable that the abscess has broken, which will necessitate his confinement at the Lake for the next few days. The trouble is not serious.

An Ice Cream Festival.

The second ice cream festival of the Junior Aid Society of St. Peter's Lutheran church will be held in the Sunday school rooms of the church, corner Grove street and Mercer avenue, on Wednesday, July 27, afternoon and evening, beginning at 3 o'clock.

"Wasted Resources to the State and Nation," Subject of a Local Temperance Advocate's Address—The Program.

Delegates to the State convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which opened at Ocean Grove today, began to arrive and many are registered at the hotels. The State president, Mrs. Emma Bourne, has been there several days.

The session opened today at 10.30, when Dr. A. E. Ballard, president of the Ocean Grove Camp-Meeting Association made an address. Mrs. E. F. Whittier represented the formal greetings of the delegates and other speakers and topics included "The Value of a Child to the W. C. T. U.," by Mrs. May T. Sparks, of Bridgeport; "How Many Can Advance W. C. T. U. Work," by Mrs. Ida Lillian Page, of West Hoboken; "How to Prepare for an Essay Contest," by Mrs. A. Swan Brown, of Passaic.

At the afternoon sesion Mrs. M. E. Perrine, of Newark, spoke on "The Uplook and the Outlook," and Mrs. I. H. Demarest told why the society opposes home prescriptions of alcoholics.

Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, of this city, and Mrs. Ella Boole, Ph. D., of New York, talked of "Wasted Resources in the State and Nation." Bishop Luther B. Wilson and Professor Samuel Dickie, L.L.D., of Michigan, will be the evening speakers, the topic of the latter being 'The American Anarchist."

Probationer Sent to Jail.

Aaron Reid, a probationer, was given ten days in the borough court this morning by Recorder Dolliver. Reid was supposed to report at the borough headquarters every Saturday night. He failed to show up last week and was rounded up yesterday by Chief Marshal Weiss.

Station is Looted.

The Elizabeth avenue station, on the Long Branch division of the Central Railroad, at Elizabeth, was broken in to Monday evening and $30 in cash and 600 tickets, valued at $90, were taken. The police believe that the robbery was committed by amateurs, probably boys.

HELD FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

William Brown, is Released in $100 Bond for Action of October Grand Jury.

TOOK HOD CARRIERS' $21?

After a Lively Scrap on July 6 Brown was Ejected From Meeting, But Wouldn't Give up the Coin.

The fighting spirit as it pervaded the whole country on July 4 broke loose in the meeting of the Hod Carriers union on the night of July 6, when William Brown, colored, who had been deputized to collect money from several applicants to the union, refused to turn over to the treasurer of the union twenty-one dollars which he had collected. Three men working on the Jefferson School contributed ten dollars and others whom the negro had approached gave the balance. For refusing to turn over the money or give an accounting of its disposal, Brown was held for the action of the October grand jury in the sum of $100 this morning by Judge William N. Runyon, on a charge of embezzlement.

So far as could be learned this morning Brown defied the entire meeting on July 6, declaring he could "lick the whole bunch" and inviting any member who doubted his ability to step up and get a taste of what Johnson gave Jeffries. Nobody seemed anxious to "step up," but at the suggestion of President Patrick Newell, Brown was ushered out into the hall of the Trades Council with little ceremony.

Subsequently Brown was notified to produce the money by July 13, or take the consequences. He failed to produce the coin and on Monday President Newell swore out a complaint against him before City Judge William N. Runyon and last night Brown was arrested. He had nothing to say for himself this morning and was held as above. W. V. Nash, Jr., appeared for the union.

FUNERAL SERVICE FOR REV. MR. ENGLUND.

There will be a very special time at the Salvation Army tent tomorrow evening when the Rev. Mr. Englund, of the Swedish church accompanied by the string band and choir will have charge of the service This will be the farewell service of Mr. Englund at the Army as he leaves in a short time for a new appointment. The service will be an interesting one for in addition to the farewell address there will be string music and singing in abundance by the members of the string band and choir.

On former visits the tent has been packed to its capacity and a repetition is looked for tomorrow evening. The address will be in English and the singing will be in Swedish and English. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

SUDDEN DEATH OF JESSIE R. NIELSEN.

Jessie, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew N. Nielsen, of 815 Second place, died at Camp Joy in the Adirondacks on Saturday last, very suddenly. The funeral was held today in Brooklyn, the interment being made in Grenwood cemetery.

Mr. Neilsen was the only one of the family to attend the funeral as his wife and other children remaining at Camp Joy. Florence, the other daughter is ill apparently from the same malady which caused the death of Jessie. Harold Nielsen was also attacked, but has recovered. The nature of the illness has not been learned here.

MISS O'BRIEN TAKEN HOME; JOHN MOTLEY BANISHED.

As a result of the police investigation of the escapade of John Motley and Fannie O'Brien, of Brooklyn, who were apprehended here under suspicious circumstances on Monday night, the mother of the girl, Mrs. Mary O'Brien arrived here this morning and took her daughter to her home in Brooklyn.

City Judge Runyon administered a scathing rebuke to Motley and told him to give Plainfield a wide berth in future. Motley could not be held on the charge of stealing his father's watch as the elder Motley did not appear to press the charge against his son.

Raymond E. Miller, of Fairview avenue, has returned home after spending a week at Hackettstown.

MISS FRANCES RAFFERTY A. W. TREADWELL'S BRIDE

A quiet wedding took place at noon today when Miss Frances A. Rafferty, eldest daughter of Mrs. John Rafferty, of Sanford avenue, became the bride of Arthur W. Treadwell, of White Plains, N. Y. The ceremony was performed by Rev. B. M. Bogan, at St. Mary's church.

The bride was attired in a cream colored travelling suit and was attended by her sister, Miss Annie Rafferty and her brother, William. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond sunburst that of the bride to the groom a diamond stick pin.

Immediately after the luncheon which followed the ceremony the couple started on a wedding trip which will take them along the coast of Maine, visiting all the points of interest for several weeks. On their return they will reside in White Plains.

"TRUTHS FROM TROLLEY" AT NETHERWOOD CAMP

The services at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home were conducted last night by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of Temple Baptist church and were well attended. The pastor of the church, Rev. J. W. Musson, was in charge and chose as his subject for the evening's talk "Truths from the Trolley."

Mr. Musson's topic gave him abundant opportunity to draw a striking comparison between the Christian life and a trolley car. In each he declared, four component parts were necessary.

First he took up the track, which was a necessity that the car might run its course. This he likened to the Bible, which directs the path of the Christian.

Secondly, he dwelt upon the power, which allows the trolley to move, and said that to the power of the electric car, there were three qualities, it was invisible, instantaneous and inexhaustible. This he likened unto God's power. He took up for a third part, the trolley pole, which he compared with faith and prayer, and fourthly dwelt upon the motorman, likening him to Christ, who controlled the Christian lives. Mr. Musson's sermon was interesting and his comparisons were entertaining.

PLAYGROUND SUPERVISORS' SUGGESTION TO PARENTS.

The supervisors of the playgrounds report that in some cases children have been forbidden by their parents to visit the playgrounds because they return from play with soiled clothing. The supervisors suggest to these parents that a child's oldest dress or suit is the most suitable for this out door amusement and that the children should be dressed in such a way as not to interefere with a full participation in all games.

Even the supervisors themselves do not dress in their best attire when they are on the grounds nor do they expect that any child should come attired as for an excursion or for Sunday school, but just as though they intended having a carefree and happy time without having to keep their clothes immaculate.

Dentists at Shore.

The fortieth annual session of the New Jersey Dental Association is now being held at Asbury Park and will last until Saturday. It is expected that every member of the association living in Plainfield will attend this session on different days. Tomorrow a goodly number will take advantage of the Sunday school excursion of the Park Avenue Baptist, Congregational and First Presbyterian churches, while others will go on other days. Several hundred are expected to attend during the four days session from all over the State.

Shamrocks Won.

The Shamrocks had an easy time winning from the Front streets this morning on Hyde Field, the score being 16 to 2. Kyle and Mullen were the battery for the Shamrocks while Luthman and Stiger were in the points for the Front streets.

Miss Grace Woolston and Miss Leonora Miller, of Fairview avenue, left yesterday for a two weeks' stay at Belmar.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Penn and son, of West Seventh street, are registered this week among the automobilists arriving at the Hotel Wendell, Pittsfield, Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Williams, of Darrow avenue, motoring through the Berkshires, are registered at the same hotel.

MISS COCK PASSES AWAY

Much Beloved Woman, Who was Identified with Good Works, is Dead.

AGED SEVENTY-THREE YEARS.

Prominent in Grace Epispocal Parish, Women's Exchange and Muhlenberg Hospital—Sister of W. R. Cock.

Miss Elizabeth R. Cock, daughter of the late Dr. Thomas Cock, and Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock, and one of the most prominent charitable workers in the city, breathed her last at her late residence, 235 East Fifth street, at 8 o'clock this morning. She had been in failing health for some time, and her death was due to a complication of diseases.

Miss Cock was born December 25, 1837, and was in her seventy-third year. Her father, Dr. Thomas R. Cock was a physician of great importance in New York in his day. He was for fifty years a member of the staff of the New York Hospital, and was so connected when he died. Two years after he passed away his family, moved to this city, where since that time she had been actively identified with charitable church work.

Miss Cock was a woman of exceptional intellect and had a host of friends to whom she had endeared herself. Early in her life here, she identifid herself with the work of public philanthropic institutions and soon became recognized as a tireless toiler and a leader among those who help people in sickness and other adversity.

Miss Cock was a member of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of the Muhlenberg Hospital, a position which she held to the last. For three years, she was president of that body. She was prominent in the work of the Grace Episcopal church parish from the time she first moved here, taking much interest in the advancement and upbuilding of the Sunday school particularly. For a long time she was a teacher of one of the classes and was recognized as one of the most efficient and painstaking instructors in the school. She was also a member of the executive board of the Women's Exchange and was prominent in the Monday Afternoon Club. Although an invalid for several years, Miss Cock kept in close touch with her work along charity and church lines and maintained her interest to the east. Hers was a most useful life.

Miss Cock is survived by one brother, William R. Cock, one of Plainfield's most prominent men, with whom she resided. The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at Grace church. The rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson will officiate. Interment will be in Hillside Cemetery.

ANOTHER JERSEY AIR SHIP NEARLY READY TO FLY

While Clinton Hall is making repairs to his demolished aeroplane another amibitious aviator has come to the front, but not in this city. The new aspirant for aerial honors is Henry Albisser, who conducts an automobile garage in Rahway.

Mr. Albisser has completed his aeroplane, which now requires only the adjustment of its respective parts in order to be complete. The parts in order to be finished. The owing to the lack of space at the garage, Mr. Albisser will be obliged to secure other quarters before the flyer can be put together.

The aeroplane when completed will weight less than 300 pounds, and in general construction is graceful and compact—the wings, rudder, propeller and, in fact, the entire machine, showing careful and painstaking work. The motive power will be furnished by a small engine of twelve horsepower located directly in front of the seat of the driver, which Mr. Albisser does not think will interfere with the balance of the machine, but if it should, he says it can easily be arranged otherwise.

The woodwork of the machine is largely of spruce, which proves light and durable for constructive work of this kind. The two wings of the machine weigh only sixty pounds, while the powerful little engine tops the scales at forty-five pounds.

The aim of Mr. Albisser is to obtain an operative buoyancy to the machine and if the balance is not properly adjusted, to remedy that feature after it has been found whether or not the machine will fly as constructed. The aeroplane has been built during Mr. Albisser's spare moments and is a credit to his ingenuity and skill.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Plainfield Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has man aches and pains.

Most times 'tis the kidneys' fault.

Backache is really kidney ache;

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by a weak and lame back and I was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My ack bpained me so badly that I could hardly stoop and when I caught cold or overexerted myself, my suffering was doubled. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy helped me at once and I continued taking them until I was cured. I have had no need of a kidney remedy in the past two years, but value Doan's Kidney Pills today as highly as ever."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, eNw York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name Doan's — and take no other.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Arrangements have been made whereby George Evans' Honey Boys minstrels will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, Thursday evening, Aug. 11. W. J. Counihan, of this city, will be manager of the minstrels and he naturally is desirous of starting his season from Plainfield. George Evans, since he was launched as a minstrel star by Cohan and Harris, has been a decided innovation in this time honored style of entertainment. He stands easily at the head of the minstrel stars and the idealized production of minstrelsy with which he is urrounded now ranks as America's one, big organization in this field. For the coming season which will be inaugurated in this city on August 11th, the Honey Boy Minstrels promise an offering of high class entertainment which will establish a record in this field of amusement. With George Evans at the head of the funmakers and such luminaries as John King, Sam Lee, Clarence Marks, Pierce Keegan, Tommy Hyde at his command the laughing possibilities of the offering are second to none. The list of vocalists comprise such favorites as Vaughn Comfort, James Meehan, Tom Kane, Master George Fagan, Joe Wesley and Wilson Miller. This year's production has been staged by George M. Cohan, James Gorman and George Evans so that it may be seen that master minds have had this important work in hand. The usual funless afterpiece has been done away with by the minstrel musical comedy "The Firemen's Picnic," written, rehearsed and staged by George M. Cohan. In this tuneful speed limit the entire company will be seen and George Evans as "Snowball Livingston" and John King as "Susan Avery" will be found a perfect "scream." There will be a big red fire parade on the evening of August 10 and the big company will be here for several days in rebearsal.

Mrs. Robert Lowry, of East Seventh street, is spending the summer at Lake Minnewaski, New York.

Included in the registration of guests at the Hotel Far oRckaway, L. I., is H. J. Kirkpatrick, of Westfield.

Mrs. Eli Long, of Grove street, left yesterday for Sea Girt, where she will spend the summer with her daughter, Mrs. George C. Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clifton, of this city, are stopping at the Clifton House, Patchogue, L. I. W. M. Jenkins, proprietor of the hotel, is a brother-in-law of Mr. Clifton and named the beautiful hotel in his honor.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Work on the new Runyon block on North avenue is being rapidly pushed toward completion. Walter Clawson, the mason and builder, who has the contract for laying the foundations, has all but finished his part of the work.

The Misses Fannie and Imogene Smith are having improvements made to their residence on Washington avenue. The changes include the building of an addition and the installation of gas service.

Rev. Ernest Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, will take his annual vacation of four weeks in August. He and his family will spend the time along the Jersey shore.

On Monday night Deputy Councilor Frank O. Nelson, of New Market, installed the officers of Rock View Council, Daughters of Liberty, at their regular meeting.

Mrs. Mary F. Crowe and her niece, Miss Grace Quimby, both of Somerville, were guests recently at the Presbyterian parsonage.

Miss Hattie Selover, of New Brunswick, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Ryno. She will remain throughout the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ayers, of New Market, are spending several weeks in Salem as the guests of their son, Dr. O. S. Ayers.

The roadbed on North avenue in front of the postoffice which has been recently repaired is much improved.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Hallis Cubberly visited friends in town recently. He is living with his parents on the Fountain Farm and commutes to New York daily. He is still employed in the Fire Insurance Co., where he has been for the past three yars.

Rev. J. J. Allen has become quite popular among his flock and it is believed that after he has finished his course at Crozier Seminary he will be called to the church permanently.

Lou Harris has the largest and finest crop of lima beans in this vicinity except Erastus Maltby who has 5,000 hills and is the first to put them on the market.

Morris Higgins, who sold his hotel to William Thornton, of New Market, has gone to live with his brother, Mike Higgins, of Front street, Plainfield.

Miller's grocery store has had a coat of paint and several other houses on Lehigh avenue have received the same treatment.

The elm beetle has killed many beautiful elm trees in this vicinity, although they have been thoroughly sprayed and treated.

Paul Wilson, wife and mother, of New York city, are spending a few weeks at Brookside Farm.

Jack Holby is the proud possessor of a fine saddle horse and a motorcycle.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Several hundred tired but happy excursionists returned last night from the Big 8 excursion, after an ideal day at the shore. The return home was made in two sections, the second one leaving the shore at 8.30 and arriving at Fanwood at 11 o'clock. No accidents happened to mar the day's pleasure and the excursion was one of the most successful ones that has yet been held.

The local ball team has an open date for Saturday afternoon, Manager Alberts having cancelled the game scheduled with the South Orange team on the home grounds. Lack of support has put an end to the game here for the season. The game with the Perth Amboy team two weeks ago netted less than $5.

The job of a night marshal in town is still open. The Township Committee are looking for a man of experience, one who has been on the police force and knows his business, an out of town man preferred.

Mrs. John Robison has sold her property on Forest avenue to Miss C. O. Lyons, of Plainfield. Miss Lyons purchased the property as an investment and will put it on the market to rent.

William Reynolds, of Bartle avenue, is recovering from his recent serious illness, which has detained him at home for the past two weeks.

The weekly prayer and praise meeting of the Baptist church will be held tonight in the church parlors.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gillotti, of Forest avenue, have been entertaining relatives from Bridgeport over Sunday.

Miss Leona Henry, of Plainfield, has been visiting Miss Evelyn Buckley, of Front street.

What One Woman Said

A Montclair woman—a regular customer of this store—happened in one day last week, and, seeing a big crowd around a centre table upon which we had on sale a certain lot of advertised goods, remarked:

"Tell me, if you will, why it is that you always have a crowd around your advertised goods? Do you offer better bargains than the other stores or have people more confidence in what you say? I was remarking to my husband aobut it the other day. There must be a reason."

Yes, there IS A REASON, and a good one—as a matter of fact, there are many reasons.

In the first place, we never falsify a value or claim for an article anything that isn't ABSOLUTELY SO. On the other hand, we do not term a bargain a bargain UNLESS IT IS A BARGAIN THROUGH AND THROUGH.

We do not waste space on unimportant store news, and we do not advertise merchandise that we think you cannot use or do not want.

No "will-o'-the-wisp" values at THIS store. What you see in our ad tonight you will find here tomorrow.

If we say a thing is 36 inches wide, all wool and worth a dollar, you may stake your last copper on it.

It's more profiatable to tell the truth than to misrepresent—as the Montclair customer said, it's "CONFIDENCE" that counts.

CLEANLINESS TO KEEP MOTHS AND INSECTS AWAY.

To prevent depredations by moths and other insects in a house closed for the summer, cleanliness is necessary, as spots on fabrics and dust or dirt on wood attract household pests.

If the dirt alone were not reason enough for applying soap and other cleansing agents, there is the added fact that washing or airing will exterminate insects.

It is not too much to say that every inch of wood which is not in the light of day should be washed with ammonia water and soap. All bureau and dressing table drawers should be emptied, wiped carefully with a wet cloth and then put into the sun for an hour or so, to dry and air. Fresh papers should be supplied, and every article that has been in the drawers must be shaken and aired.

The fact that garments are not of a material that moths will attack is no reason for omitting the precaution of shaking them, for there are insects that prey on cotton as well as woolens.

Lavender flowers or a few drops of oil of lavender in chests and drawers serve as preventatives.

All heavy draperies must be sunned as well as brushed and shaken before being packed away for the summer. Silk curtains should be carefully brushed or shaken to remove dust before laying them away.

If there are woolen carpets on the floors and the rooms are to be darkened, special attention must be given to floor coverings. For example, the carpet should be swept and then wiped with a heavy cloth wrung out of strong ammonia water. Then the windows must be opened to dry the carpets before camphor, tar balls, or other moth preventatives are scattered over the rugs, etc., and ground into the nap by walking on the balls.

Closet doors, in rooms tightly closed, must be opened so more air will be admitted and the retreat be less snug for moths. Whatever articles are wrapped in newspapers should be done so that no persistent intruder can get into them around the edges, and the safest way to accomplish this is to turn the edges and tops and sides twice before tying the bundles.

Rugs are likely to go through the warm season in good condition if laid flat on the floor, putting plenty of moth preventative over the surface, as the carpets are treated.

Mrs. L. B. Drayton and daughters, of Hillside avenue, sailed for Europe July 9, on the Steamship "Amerika" of the Hamburg-American Line.

Miss May Vincent Whitney and Mrs. McNeil Hopcraft, of this city, are spending the summer at Queen St. Terrace, Digby, Nova Scotia. They will return here in September.

OUR GREAT "Help Yourself" SHOE SALE

Women's, Boys' and Girls' Summer Shoes - - - - - $2.00 to $3.50 $1.29

Sale Starts Thursday Morning at 9.00 o'Clock

It's the sale many are waiting for, and it's the sale that always stirs up enthusiasm of economical shoe buyers.

By "Help Yourself" we mean that goods are arranged on tables according to size so that you can pick out your size in whatever you like—all at one price. Plenty of salespeople to help you try them on.

We never came so near giving away shoes as we will in this greatest of all Summer Sales. The numerous lots and the various styles of each size make detail description impossible. But the way we display them on tables according to sizes will enable you to tell at a glance if your size is here in the style you can use. The lowest value in the lot is a tremendous bargain at 1.29 and many will buy four to six pairs for future use as they have done heretofore, although we never made the price so tempting as now.

The lots embrace numerous styles in most desirable Summer Shoes for women, boys and girls.

Pianos & Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually,

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

HERE AND THERE.

The fire commisisoners of New York have consented to put into operation a suggestion made by Deputy Commissioner Decker, of the borough of Brooklyn, by which it is claimed the fire losses in that borough will be materially lessened. Every letter carrier and clerk in the postoffice, all the clerks in the various municipal offices, owners of stores, responsible business men, ministers and doctors are to receive keys to the fire alarm boxes as soon as they apply for them. Deputy Decker believes through this move he will save time in notifying the department of fires and at the same time eliminate the risk of false alarms being turned in. The glass key holder will be dispensed with. Already upward of three thousand keys have been distributed, each of which is numbered and the holder's name and address taken.

Plainfield, N. J., July 20, 1910.

The nomination of Woodrow Wilson as the Democratic gubernatorial nomination would make the Republican party hustle some to defeat him, but will the minority party have the good sense to make him its standard bearer?

By no means, is it any certainty that Messrs. Pierce, Thompson and Schwartz will be nominated by the Republicans for return to the Assembly. The situation appears as it should be, an open fight, with no favorites being played. May the best men win!

State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's boom for the Republican gubernatorial nomination appears to be in the state of innocuous desuetude. His position on the voting machine and on the automobile law, in both of which we think that he is right and is actuated by what he considers best for the people, appears to have been the means of sounding the death knell to his political ambitions.

In the death of Miss Elizabeth R. Cock, Grace Episcopal church, the Women's Exchange and Muhlenberg hospital suffer a distinct loss. She was a woman of a most loveable character and she used her talents in a way that earned for her the esteem of a host of friends in this life and her reward for the world to come. Much of her time was given in assisting and comforting those in sickness, sorrow and in need. She will be missed in the community.

It cannot be denied that sentiment in this enlightened community is strongly opposed to the voting machine. This paper has not been alone in defense of the automatic method of registering the ballot, but we believe more in the rights of the people and when it is shown, as it will be at the special election on Tuesday, July 26, that the majority of the voters are strongly opposed to the innovation and favor a restoration of the paper ballot, the costly machines, fostered upon the people of the State, at a public expense of half a million without their consent, the junk heap will be the proper place for them.

Notice has been given by many of the leading merchants that their shops will be closed on Thursday afternoons during August. This is a welcome, a commendable innovation; one that should appeal to and receive the support of the shoppers. The half-holiday, once a week, means much to the salesman and salesgirl, who toils week in and week out; who stands on her feet for hours; who must have a smiling face and accommodating manner no matter how unpleasant a customer may be. August days are hot and trying, and it will be a blessed relief to the merchants' employes to have just one half day in each week away from the stores. It would be well if all the merchants would adopt this plan and thereby make it a general and annual custom here.

HOPATCONG WATER SPORT

Motor Fishing Boats to Race for a Prize Over a Five Miles Course.

IDEA OF PRINCETON MAN.

"Tom" Muir's "Rams Horn Camp" the Mecca of Plainfielders—Other Social Notes.

Those who angle and trowl in the waters of Lake Hopatcong and who have installed motors in their boats to get them from one point to another in a hurry have arranged for a novel race to be held off Nolan's Point on Sunday. So many owners have claimed that their respective "kickers" are the speediest that twenty-five of them have been matched up for a five-mile go and the first one over the line will be awarded a prize of $25.

The idea originated with J. Frank Loughlin, of Princeton, who is well known to Plainfielders and his boat "Close-Shave" is the favorite in the betting.

The entries include boats owned by Clarence Peel, of Craig place, who stands a good chance of winning and T. T. Woodhull, of West Grove street, whose smack will be handled by his son Edson Woodhull. The race will be over a triangular course from Nolan's Point to eHnderson's Cove thence to Bentrad's Island and back to the starting point. The influx of Plainfield visitors to the lake still continues and many familiar faces are to be seen.

Recent guests at Tom Muir's "Ram's Horn Camp" were Thomas De Meza and Edwin Baker, who remained a week, Elmer Cutting, Edwin Bennett, Harry Blimm, William Smith and John Mottley. Arthur Caleen, of Mariners place, will be at the camp for a week beginning Friday.

Mrs. Annie Moore, of West Fifth street, has leased Freeholder Wilbur's cottage, "Elkwood," for the balance of the month. Miss Clara Rhoades, also of West Fifth street, who has been her guest for the past week, will leave tomorrow for her home in Sliamokie, Penn., to remain until some time in August. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Moynihan, and their daughter, Mrs. Slattery, of Bound Brook, have leased a cottage near Bass Rock on the mainland and have been entertaining Andrew Kenny and son, Edmund Kenny, of Watchung avenue, and Miss Katie Moynihan, of Dunellen. John Moynihan, of New York, and Harvey Moynihan, of Bound Brook, who have many acquaintances in this city, are regular week-end visitors.

Miss Anna Warnock, of Craig place, and Miss Edith Palmer, of Garwood, are spending two weeks at "Orolola" cottage in Great Cove.

Miss Ethel Humphrey, of East Front street, will return home Friday after a two weeks' stay at Camp Dolan on Halsey Island.

Wallace Moulton, of Orchard park, who has been at Camp "There he Goes," on Halsey Island, for three weeks, returned home last night and will leave tomorrow for Atlantic City to spend the remainder of the month. His father, John Moulton, returned home Sunday after spending several days at the camp, and will sail for Scotland on August 20 for the benefit of his health.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

It has been the wonder of strangers passing through the town that such a thriving village should have such a dilapidated post office. It has been said by some of the old settlers that the building has not had a coat of paint in forty years and its looks do not belie the charge. Now that the village is taking on such a spirit of improvement would it not be a credit to the town to have a clean and attractive post office?

This village is fast growing into a railroad town. The place known as the Laing farm has been bought for the sum of $26,000 by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company and it is rumored that extensive shops are to be built upon the newly acquired property and that a number of small cottages will also be erected for the accommodation of the workmen.

The old Runyon property on which stands a house more than a century old, is being repaired and remodeled. It has been one of the landmarks for so long and has ben neglected that it has not been fit for occupancy and the community will be glad to see the improvement.

The Be Dout place at the sand pit has been sold to a New York syndicate. The consideration was not stated.

Another Chimney Fire.

Chemical Engine No. 1 was summoned to 312 East Seventh street at 2.45 o'clock to extinguish a chimney fire.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR REPUBLICAN OUTING

Final arrangements for the annual outing of the Republican County Committee, to be held on Saturday, August 13, have been made. The outing committee reported last night that tickets are selling fast and a larger crowd than in any previous year is expected. The meeting of the county committee Monday night at Republican headquarters in the Dix Building in Elizabeth, was one of the best summer month meetings ever held. Twenty-nine committeemen were present. In the absence of Chairman Frank H. Smith, Vice-Chairman James C. Calvert presided and Neil McLeod acted as secretary pro tem.

It was decided to appoint a committee of five to act in conjunction with the committee of the Downtown Republican Club in making arrangements for the big dollar dinner to be held at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, early in October. The committee will be named by Chairman Smith at the meeting to be held in August. Members were requested to send in names of election officers not later than August 1.

The members of the outing committee are enthusiastic over the outlook for the success of the big "get-together" to be held in August. Invitations will be extended to leaders all over the State and several of the notables who are in line for State offices, including the Governorship, will be on board the Isabel, when the boat leaves the recration pier for Rockaway.

Candidates for city and county offices have but another month in which to file petitions. Thus far, no candidates have filed petitions at the office of the county clerk. According to the Elections Act as amended, all petitions must be filed before the primaries.

THE FORUM.

He Withdraws.

Editor, The Daily Press:

So many gentlemen have come up as Republican candidates for Freeholder that I believe the interest of the party will be best secured by my setting the example of withdrawing. Therefore, I shall not enter the race. Trusting that others may follow and that those who remain in the race, will support the winner at the primary, I beg to remain,

FRANK C. SHAFFER.

New Providence Township, July 20, 1910.

The Voting Machines.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Though at first disagreeing on the question our Common Council have finally fixed the twenty-sixth of July as the day the citizens of this city may vote on the matter of removing the voting machines from this city. This is a question of great importance, and it behooves all citizens to deliberately consider the matter and cast their ballots. The universal unpopularity of these devices has been demonstrated in every city or town in which an election has been held, until now, according to Secretary Dickinson, there are but seven in the State; in this city four of them.

Hundreds of citizens through poor sight and other infirmities, are each year disfranchised through their use. The old paper ballot as regulated under the "Werts law," was secret, and safe, and has stood our Commonwealth in good stead. Then fellow citizens let us get back to the old ballot. Let these complicated pieces of mechanism be put aside for the ballot box of old. I do not plead as a partizan, but as a citizen, loving fair play and urging the right. July 26 is the day, the usual voting precinct the place where the voter may record his desires. I trust your vote may be against the further use of the voting machine in this city.

JAMES E. MARTINE.

J. Richard Day.

J. Richard Day, the 19-year-old son of Richard Day, died yesterday afternoon in the Alexian Brothers' Hospital in Elizabeth from lung trouble. He had been ill for some time. His funeral will take place Friday morning from the residence of his uncle, Frank Day, 435 West Fourth street. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Democratic Club Sign.

Under the direction of its president, J. LeRoy Ellis, the Plainfield Democratic Club yesterday placed a large transparent sign in front of its club rooms in the Woolston & Buckle building, North and Park avenues. It contains the inscription: The Democratic Club. Tax Wealth; Not Poverty.

Y. M. C. A. Plays Somerville.

The Y. M. C. A. and Somerville B. B. baseball teams will cross bats at Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon at 3:30. The Somerville team is one of the strongest in this section of the State. The two nines have met once this season already when the Plainfield players scored a 2 to 1 victory.

Miss Ella Miller, of Fairview avenue, is spending a month at Budd's Lake.

A Jilted Lover's Revenge.

A jilted lover at Davos, Switzerland, has taken a novel but cruel revenge. His wedding was fixed for this week, but shaving off his beard, his fiancee would have nothing to do with him. Every day he wrote to her, but received no reply.

Finding his case was hopeless, he posted all the love letters he had received from her on the walls of her house and a crowd promptly collected to read them. The indignant lady says she will return the compliment by taking similar action.

E. B. Maynard, of North avnue, is again compelled to lay by on account of an attack of bronchitis and asthma.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Ground will be broken this week for the new First M. E. Sunday school temple, Millville, which will cost $25,000.

Assemblyman I. T. Nicaols, of Bridgeton, will address the Brotherhood of America at a reunion to be held at Centreton Park next Saturday.

Horace F. Sutton, a Camden lawyer, died at his home, 411 Elm street, Monday, thirty-four years old. He had been ill two years from tuberculosis.

The Cape May Board of Trade met Monday night and sent a protest to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company against the continued refusal to sell anual commutation tickets between Cape May and Philadelphia.

E. L. Bolles, one of the leading grangers of Vineland, and his daughter, Miss Fannie, a public school teacher, started Monday for a vacation drive of 1,000 miles through Pennsylvania and New York States.

The home of Ira M. Irwin, six miles below Millville, was badly damaged Sunday night by lightning. Two frightened children had gone down stairs five minutes before the bolt demolished their bed. Mrs. Irwin was stunned.

As result of a fall from high steps while playing tag, Sarah, youn. daughter of William Fowkes, lies unconscious at her home in Beverly. The physician is puzzled over her prolonged unconsciousness and an operation will have to be performed.

The police of South Jersey, have been notified to look for John Jordan, a 'trusty," who escaped from the Cumberland County jail Sunday. Jordan, who was one of Millville's dog catchers, was serving a sentence for assault and battery.

The third annual outing and field day of the Knights of Columbus of South Jersey was held yesterday at Rancocas Park, given under the joint auspices of Camden, Mt. Holly, Moorestown, Burlington, Riverside, Haddon Heights and Gloucester.

A horse died of anthrax on the farm of Frank Tatem, near Gloucester City, Monday night. Two others are infected with the disease. Last week cows died from the disease on the same farm. Dr. Thomas B. Rogers Monday night received word that a cow on the Kelly farm has also been affected by the disease.

The will of the late Anna W. Starr, of Woodbury, was offered for probate, Monday in the Gloucester County surrogate's office. The document leaves the estate, presumed to be worth from $10,000 to $15,000, to her nephews, Judge Lewis Starr and City Clerk Arthur Starr, and a niece. Judge Starr is made executor.

Lightning struck the famous old hostelry, the Gatzmer House, at Dennisville, eighteen miles north of Cape May, Sunday. The bolt ran down a coping on the roof into a closet, setting fire to the clothing there. Villagers were soon on the scene, and a bucket brigade was formed and the fire was soon extinguished. Loss, $300.

Charged with taking Cora Conrad to Atlantic City from New York and forcing her to live as a "white slave," John Bureas was committed in default of $2,000 bonds by Acting Recorder Grove in Atlantic City Monday. The girl, who was found in a Tenderloin resort by Detective Herbert, made a pitiful plea of protection from Bureas, who she claimed lured her from New York with tales of gay and jolly times at the shore.

Michael Henninger, formerly a sergeant of police in Philadelphia, was roundly scored by Recorder Keffer in Atlantic City Monday after he had caused the arrest of two girls and a young man on the charge that they had robbed him. After the police had hunted up the trio and locked them up Henninger found the supposed stolen cash in his pocket. The trio was forced to spend hours in cells until the mistake was discovered, and they threaten suit for damages.

Rough breakers driven ahead of the off-shore storm nearly cost the lives of two of the few score bathers who braved the stormy skies at Atlantic City, Monday. William Simpkins, of Philadelphia, was tumbled over by a big breaker off South Carolina avenue, and was unconscious when brought ashore by Guards Brome and Conover. John Brant, another Philadelphian, was caught in the current off Tennessee avenue and had disappeared beneath the waves when rescued.

Seeking alimony and counsel fee from her husband, Dr. Wilson G. Bailey, of Broadway and Line street, Camden, Mrs. Sophia Bailey, through counsel in the Court of Chancery, Camden, Monday alleged that the conduct of her husband was such that she was compelled to leave him. William T. Boyle, for the doctor, denied the allegations, with the exception of on one occasion, when he admitted that he threw a glass of water in her face. Decision was reserved.

Found in a dazed condition by Policeman Pike near the Federal street bridge, at Cooper's Creek, Camden, early Monday, Dennis Winters, forty-three years old, of Kensington, was sent to the city jail. He had been robbed of his shoes, coat and hat in the night, and admitted later in the police court that he visited Jersey to "have a good time." He thought he might have been the victim of newly made acquaintances in Philadelphia. Winters was furnished with an outfit and left for his home.

Down Comes Another Familiar Broadway Sign

Tefft, Weller Co., Wholesale House, Closes Its Doors

Sale of Enormous Wash Goods Stocks Begins Here Tomorrow

The firm of Tefft, Weller Co., No. 326 to No. 330 Broadway, New York, has been as familiar to Broadway travelers as was the name of A. T. Stewart in Stewart's day. This old-time house has just retired from business, and the disposals of the stock has begun. Our position in the transaction has been a most advantageous one, enabling us to buy at the earliest moment the first and best lots of summer goods which were disposed of by the H. B. Claflin Co., which bought out the entire stock of the Tefft, Weller Co. Our purchases were enormous and we will be first in the field with any considerable stock of Wash Goods from this great liquidation sale. A PLACE TO GO.

There's a place that I can go to when my plans all go astray,
There's a place that I can go to when
I've had a grouchy day,
There's a place that I can rush to when I need a bit of cheer,
It's a seat upon the bleachers, now the baseball season's here.

There's a place that I can sneak to when my brains refuse to work,
There's a place that I can hike to when I really want to shirk;
I can dodge the bill collectors, and the office bores who call,
Oh a seat upon the bleachers, now the boys are playing ball.

O, I tell you what, it's splendid to have somewhere else to go,
When your business worries fret you and your head is aching so,
And I grab my coat and derby and
I hurry on my way
To a seat upon the bleachers when the team is home to play.

Afternoon Tea.

"Have you heard how Mrs. Smith is?" "Yes, her hat's a little trying." "Jones! Eloped to Europe with his—" "Maude has faults, there's no denying." "Bridge is how she gets her money." "Do you take two lumps or three?" "Ain't the Suffragettes too funny?"

"Have another cup of tea."

"Tetrazzini's lovely high C——" "I just dote upon Caruso." "Mary Garden? She's too spicy." "Wonder how she dares to do so?" "Problem plays, I think, are horrid." "Dancing don't appeal to me." "Isn't this room something torrid?"

"Have another cup of tea?"

"Lemon? Did you say two slices?" "Had to sell their automobile." "Out of fashion to serve ices." "Yes, I'm quite a—bibliophile." "Had the dearest time in Yurrup." She engaged to Charley! Gee! "I love cakes and maple syrup."

"Have another cup of tea."

"Must be going?" "what's your hurry?" "I think—" "He said—" "I said—" "We—" "An engagement. Got to scurry."

"Have another cup of tea."

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS By MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

Nathaniel fell back, filled with horror. A glance had shown him the vast dimly lighted interior of the temple packed to suffocation. What sins had this people wrought that it thus feared the vengeance of the men from the mainland! He felt the sweat break out upon his face as he thought of Marion being in that mob, tired and fainting with her terrible day's experience—perhaps dying under the panic-stricken feet of those stronger than herself. He hoped now for that which at first had filled him with despair—that Strang had hidden Marion away from the terror and suffocation of this multitude that fought for its breath within the temple. Freeing himself of the crowd he ran to the farther side of the building. A fourth fire blazed in his face. But on this side there was no cannon; scarcely a score of men were guarding the rear of the temple.

For a full minute he stood concealed in the gloom. He realized now that it would be useless to return to Obadiah. The old councilor could probably have told him all that he had discovered for himself; that Marion had gone to the castle—that Strang intended to make her his bride that night. But did Obadiah know that the castle had been abandoned? Did he know that the king's wives had sought refuge in the temple, and did he know where Marion was hidden? Nathaniel could assure himself but one answer: Obadiah, struck down by his strange madness, was more ignorant than he himself of what had occurred at St. James.

While he paused a heavy noise arose that quickened his heart-beats and sent the blood through his veins in wild excitement. From far down by the shore there came the roar of a cannon. It was closely followed by a second and third, and hardly was the night shaken by their thunder than a mighty cheering of men swept up from the fire-rimmed coast. The battle had begun! Nathaniel leaped out into the glow of the great blazing fire beyond the temple; he heard a warning shout as he darted past the men; for an instant he saw their white faces staring at him from the firelight—heard a second shout, which he knew was a command—and was gone. Half a dozen rifles cracked behind him and a yell of joyful defiance burst from his throat as the bullets hissed over his head. The battle had begun! Another hour and the Mormon kingdom would be at the mercy of the avenging host from the mainland—and Marion would be his own for ever! He heard again the deep rumble of a heavy gun and from its sullen detonation he knew that it was fired from a ship at sea. A nearer crash of returning fire turned him into a deserted street down which he ran wildly, on past the last houses of the town, until he came to the foot of a hill up which he climbed more slowly, panting like a winded animal.

From its top he could look down upon the scene of battle. To the eastward stretched the harbor line with its rim of fires. A glance showed him that the fight was not to center about these. They had served their purpose, had forced the mainlanders to seek a landing farther down the coast. The light of dawn had already begun to disperse the thick gloom of night, and an eighth of a mile below Nathaniel the Mormon forces were creeping slowly along the shore. The pale ghostly mistiness of the sea hung like a curtain between him and what was beyond, and even as he strained his eyes to catch a glimpse of the avenging fleet a vivid light leaped out of the white distance, followed by the thunder of a cannon. He saw the head of the Mormon line falter. In an instant it had been thrown into confusion. A second shot from the sea—a storm of cheering voices from out of that white chaos of mist—and the Mormons fell back from the shore in a panic-stricken, fleeing mob. Were those frightened cowards the fierce fighters of whom he had heard so much? Were they the men who had made themselves masters of a kingdom in the land of their enemies—whose mere name carried terror for a hundred miles along the coast? He was stupefied, bewildered. He made no effort to conceal himself as they approached the hill, but drew his pistol, ready to fire down upon them as they came. Suddenly there was a change. So quickly that he could scarcely believe his eyes the flying Mormons had disappeared. Not a man was visible upon that narrow plain between the hill and the sea. Like a huge covey of quail they had dropped to the ground, their rifles lost in that ghostly gloom through which the voices of the mainlanders came in fierce cries of triumph. It was magnificent! Even as the crushing truth of what it all meant came to him, the fighting blood in his veins leaped at the sight of it—the pretended effect of the shots from sea, the sham confusion, the disorderly flight, the wonderful quickness and precision with which the rabble of armed men had thrown itself into ambush!

Would the mainlanders rush into the trap? Had some keen eye seen those shadowy forms dropping through the mist? Each instant the ghostly pall that shut out vision seaward seemed drifting away. Nathaniel's staring eyes saw a vague shape appear in it, an indistinct dirt-gray blotch, and he knew that it was a boat. Another followed, and then another; he heard the sound of oars, the grinding of keels upon the sand, and where the Mormons had been a few moments before the beach was now alive with mainlanders. In the growing light he could make out the king's men below him, inanimate spots in the middle of the narrow plain. Helpless he stood clutching his pistol, the horror in him growing with each breath. Could he give no warning? Could he do nothing—nothing—

At least he could join in the fight! He ran down the hill, swinging to the left of the Mormons. Half way, and he stopped as a thundering cheer swept up from the shore. The mainlanders had started toward the hill! Without rank, without order—shouting their triumph as they came they were rushing blindly into the arms of the ambush! A shriek of warning left Nathaniel's lips. It was drowned in a crash of rifle fire. Volley after volley burst from that shadowy stretch of plain. Before the furious fire the van of the mainlanders crumpled into ruin. Like chaff before a wind those behind were swept back. Apparently they were flying without waiting to fire a shot! Nathaniel dashed down into the plain. Ahead of him the Mormons were charging in a solid line, and in another moment the shore had become a mass of fighting men. Far to the left he saw a group of the mainlanders running along the beach toward the conflict. If he could only intercept them—and bring them into the rear! Like the wind he sped to cut them off, shouting and firing his pistol. He won by a hundred yards and stood panting as they came toward him. Dawn had dispelled the mist-gloom and as the mainlanders drew nearer he discerned in their lead a figure that brought a cry of joy from his lips.

"Neil!" he shouted. "Neil—"

He turned as Marion's brother darted to his side.

"This way—from behind!"

The two led the way, side by side, followed by a dozen men. A glance told Nathaniel that nothing much less than a miracle could turn the tide of battle. Half of the mainlanders were fighting in the water. Others were struggling desperately to get away in the boats. Foot by foot the Mormons were crushing them back, their battle cries now turned into demoniac yells of victory. Into the rear of the struggling mass, firing as they ran, charged the handful of men behind Captain Plum and Neil. For a little space the king's men gave way before them and with wild cheers the powerful fishermen from the coast fought their way toward their comrades. Many of them were armed with long knives; some had pistols; others used their empty rifles as clubs. A dozen more men and they would have split like a wedge through the Mormon mass. Above the din of battle Nathaniel's voice rose in thundering shouts to the men in the sea, and close beside him he heard Neil shrieking out a name between his blows. Like demons they fought straight ahead, slashing with their knives. The Mormon line was thinning. The mainlanders had turned and were fighting their way back, gaining foot by foot what they had lost. Suddenly there came a terrific cheer from the plain and the hope that had flamed in Nathaniel's breast died out as he heard it. He knew what it meant—that the Mormons at St. James had come to reinforce their comrades. He fought now to reach the boats, calling to Neil, whom he could no longer see. Even in that moment he thought of Marion. His only chance was to escape with the others, his only hope of wresting her from the kingdom lay in his own freedom. He had waited too long. A crushing blow fell upon him from behind and with a last cry to Neil he sank under the trampling feet. Indistinctly there came to him the surging shock of the fresh body of Mormons. The din about him became fainter and fainter as though he was being carried rapidly away from it; shouting voices came to him in whispers, and deadened sounds, like the quick tapping of a finger on his forehead, were all that he heard of the steady rifle fire that pursued the defeated mainlanders in their flight.

After a little he began struggling back into consciousness. There was a splitting pain somewhere in his head and he tried to reach his hand to it.

"You won't have to carry him," he heard a voice say. "Give him a little water and he'll walk."

agate his like, and transmit to them what he hath so nobly preserved."

"If this right is so precious that it was paid for with martyr blood; if it was pursued by our fathers with naked bleeding feet over the ice and snows of New Jersey, and through the midnight perils of the frozen Delaware, and into the lingering agonies of Valley Forge; if for it, our fathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor, and Nathan Hale facing the scaffold could say, 'I only regret that I have but one life to lose for liberty'; why then, did a Republican Legislature, holding in its hands this sacred, blod-bought right, deny it to the people?

"Not because it is a novelty in legislation, for in all but five States of the Union, this principle of majority rule, on this question, has been recognized and given to the people. Not because there is any doubt of its constitutionality, for the first article of New Jersey's constitution declares that all political power is inherent in the people. Not because its legality can be called in question for the highest court in the State, the court of last resort, has decided that it is a positive legal right. Not because the sweet-faced mother, kneeling with her little son, prayed that the right might be denied to its father, for the prayers and tears of mothers were pleading for that right. But because our representatives declined to represent. Because in the estimation of the law-makers, the 2,144,000 plain citizens of New Jersey weighed less than the 'Brewer's Trust.' The people wanted the law; the brewers opposed it, and the people's representatives, standing between them and the brewers, deliberately decided against the people.

Here is Democracy's opportunity! The Republican party has betrayed its trust and sinned away its day of political grace. The Republican bosses and machine men in 1910, have placed the Republican party exactly where the Democratic boses and machine men had placed the Democratic party in 1893. In 'Modern Battles of Trenton,' the author describes the situation in which the Democratic party had been placed in 1893 by the rule of the ring and the bosses, and says 'they had to come to the open and meet, without adventitious shield, the charge that they had abused their trusts, sold the rights of the people outraged their consciences conspired against their welfare, stained the escutcheon of the State with shame, and treated public office as a private emolument. * * * When the election came, the Republican majority in the State approached 30,000. Never in its history had the State so emphatically repudiated her rulers, and sent new men forward to replace them and undo their wrongs, and inaugurate a cleaner government on a higher plane.

"And now my friends, the Republican machine runs truer to boss dictation in 1910, than did the Democratic machine in 1893. The Republican managers of 1910 are in closer alliance with trust magnates and venal interests and corrupt powers, than were the Democratic managers of 1893. The Republican administration of 1910 has defied the will of the people with as much audacity as that will was defied by the Democratic administration of 1893, and it has deprived the people of the dearest right—the right of self-government, the right of majority rule. Are the people less virtuous in 1910 than they were in 1893? Are the appeals of pulpits, or the prayers of wives and mothers and sisters less potent and persuasive in 1910 than they were in 1893?

"If the political freebooters of 1893 could not stand against an aroused public conscience, will the political freebooters of 1910 be able to withstand the ligtning strokes of that same white hot public resentment? Here, then, is the open door of opportunity through which the Democratic party, with a patriot-statesman at its head, may march to certain and honorable victory; and is it not the path of duty? It is well to put the Republican party in the wrong but it is better to put the Democratic party in the right. The Republican party, in the last Legislature, either said to the people of New Jersey, 'We cannot trust you,' or it said to them, 'There are others we prefer to serve.'

"It has written itself into history as the tool of the trusts; the caretaker of the corporations; the guardian of special interests; the political embezzler of the people's rights; the ally of law breakers and the open enemy of free goevrnment. I said the Republican party; I meant the Republican machine, the men who make politics their trade. The Republican organization, dominated and controlled by these men, is committed to the policy of denying to the people the right of self-government; the right of majority rule; the American method of settling their own questions. The immortal founder of our party said, 'governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed'; and the builders of our constitution laid hold of this vital truth and embalmed it in the organic law of the State.

"If we are Jefferson Democrats; if we believe in the people, and in their capacity for home-rule, let us say so in simple, direct, honest words. I believe these words, mortised into the political platform which will be framed by Democrats in the coming gubernatorial convention, would be clearly understood by every voter of the State, namely: Recognizing the constitutional doctrine that all political power is inherent in the people, and firmly believing in the principal of municipal home rule, we demand the submission of the question of granting or denying liquor licenses in the several municipalities of this State, to a direct vote of the people.

"If we say that every Democrat will support our cause, for we are declaring only what Jefferson declared, namely: 'Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed'; if we say that every independent Republican will support our cause, for we are declaring only what Abraham Lincoln declared, namely: 'No man is good enough to govern another man against that other's consent'; if we say that the voters of this State will trust us to keep that platform pledge, for they will know that it was not dictated by bosses, and that it shys clear around the cunning that equivocates; they will know that the words in that plank will not dodge and dip when they hear the footfalls of the brewer and distiller, and yet that they are fair and just to them as to all other citizens.

They will know that the choice was between a silent bid for the support of the liquor trust, and an honest, open stand for the right of local self-government. The people are expecting this declaration; for the Democratic party is the only present hope of the friends of popular rights and civil liberty, as in 1852 the Whig party was the only hope of the friends of popular rights and civil liberty. The Whig party temporized, became politic, straddled, and a new party slipped by it into power.

If we fail to make that declaration, and preserve a servile silence, or adopt darklantern methods, or cover that plank with velvet phrases, or use the ruse of a Talleyrand or a Machiavelli; the voters of this State will know that we have tried to dodge the issue; that we intend to serve the saloon and not the State; that we have placed the liquor oligarchy above the virtuous citizenship of New Jersey; that for the hope of gaining the high seats of Mammon and power, we have deliberately chosen to go through the campaign covered all over with run-labels.

'What Democra', that has not, for an adequate price, secretly bargained ahead for a platform and candidate that will insure success to the Republican party, or serve as a pliant tool, will hesitate in the vestibule of such an alternative?

I do not mean to say that this plank is the only one that should be spiked down into the Democratic platform. The crying need of the hour is a return to the people; and it is the duty of the Democratic party to strive after the initiative and referendum, the recall, the election of U. S. senators by direct vote of the people; the extension of the direct primary to nominations for governor and congress; a public utilities commission with ample powers to make rates and inflict penalties; a corrupt practices act to prevent bribery in elections; and other reform measures, all of which should be set out in the platform in plain, simple, concise terms, so that the promises of the party may be clear cut, positive and capable of exact performance.

The people of this State do not want from the Democratic party a tremendous pronunciamento to be followed only by a miserable performance. The situation that confronts this State at this time, is momentous, and what we want in our platform resolutions this fall, is less rhetoric and more logic,—an appeal to experience and the judgment, not to the passions. Hat in the air and shouts, may please and stimulate for a moment, but you must lodge ideas that will shadow the face with thought, and put the deep wrinkle of intense reflection between the eyes. I am convinced that the home rule plank cannot be spared this fall; first, it is right; second, it is expedient.

Every Democrat here, knows that the citizens of this Borough have just decided the sewer question by a local option vote; and that the citizens of Plainfield are just about to decide the voting machine question by a local option vote. Can the heaviest brain God ever packed away in the bony skull of a man, tell why those same citizens should not be allowed to decide the license question by a local option vote? Why their opinions should be ignored, and that question sent to a judge ten miles away? Every Democrat knows that local option, that is a political 'yes' or 'no' to a given question, is a hereditary right of the citizens of this State. He knows it is monstrous that the people should have to fall on their faces, prostrate themselves in the dust, and supplicate their representatives for the exercise of this right!

"He knows that the fathers of New Jersey only ask the ballot of a freeman to protect their boys; just as the saloon men may use that ballot to protect their bars. He knows that the brewer, fighting for his vats, should touch no tenderer chord in the legislator's breast than the sorrow stricken widow trying to save her son. He knows that no one knows what a local option vote on the license question in New Jersey would show—whether the voice of the majority would be 'for' or 'against' the license. We are concerned about the right, not the result. Democracy says, 'The voice of the people is the voice of God,' and this is the challenge of this campaign.

"Democrats, there is a moral sense that we cannot afford to disregard. There is a public conscience that we cannot afford to defy. Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just, and he but haked, though locked up in steel, whose conscience with injustice is corrupted. Adopt that platform, and put a man upon it who has the courage to say in the words of the immortal Lincoln, 'The time has come when these sentiments must be uttered, and if it is decreed that I shall go down, let me go down linked with truth. Let me die in the advocacy of what is right and just," and victory is inevitable.

"I know that the grafter will oppose this policy, but that will commend it to the virtuous citizenship of the State. 'If Tweed is against it, I am for it.' I know that the trust magnate will oppose this policy, for the people's gain is his loss; but to one robber, there are thousands of the robbed.

"I know that the neutral will oppose this policy, for 'white livered indifference is always dismayed by earnest conviction.' I know that the opportunist will oppose this policy, but he is an unsafe counselor. Daniel Webster, whose brain weighed more than any other statesman's, was the idol of the nation, and to my mind it is an open question whether his reply to Hayne in the United States Senate was not a more potent influence for the preservation of the American Union, than Grant's battallions in the field; but he made his Seventh of March speech, and it sent him into political exile, and his party to political death. When the Republican convention of the State of Illinois met at Springfield, June 17, 1858, it nominated Abraham Lincoln for a seat in United States Senate, then held by StephenA. Douglas. This action was expected, and Mr. Lincoln had prepared himself to accept the nomination in a speech which he foresaw would be the pivot of debate with Douglas. That speech he submitted to a council of at least twelve of his personal and political friends, all of whom advised him to omit or change materially the first paragraph. This Lincoln refused to do, even when challenged by the opinion that it would cost him his seat in the Senate.

"It did cost him his seat in the Senate, but the speech would have been delivered had he foreseen that it would cost him much more. After its delivery, and while the canvass was going on, he said to his friends, 'You may think that speech was a mistake, but I never have believed it was, and you will see the day when you will consider it was the wisest thing I ever said. If I had to draw a pen across, and erase my whole ilef from existence, and I had one poor gift or choice left as to what I should save from the wreck, I should choose that speech, and leave it to the world unerased.' The words which startled his political friends were these: 'A house divided against itself cannot stand.' They would offend the friends of slacery, but they put the 'Rail Splitter' into the White House and crowned his party with a victory unparalleled in the history of parties.

"Democrats, we are called to a great work; momentous issues are at stake. Let us head the lofty summons, and with souls serene and constant, prepare to tread boldly in the path of highest duty.' Let us serve our party by serving our State."

FOR FREE DENTAL CLINIC

President Dilts Suggests Them for All Cities in the State —Praises Gov. Fort.

NEW MEETING PLACE URGED

Fund Needed for Prosecution of Illegal Practitioners Will Probably Be Voted Today—Plainfielders Attend.

Several of the local dentists took advantage of the Sunday school excursion this morning to attend the annual meeting of the New Jersey Dental Association at Asbury Park. One was so kind as to say "Come along and get your teeth pulled for nothing," but the reporter couldn't go and besides he didn't have any teeth needing extraction. The present session of the dentists will last until Saturday.

Some important topics were discussed at the afternoon session yesterday, the most important of which was the suggestion made by President Charles H. Dilts, of Trenton, who declared that the association should lay aside a fund for the prosecution of illegal practice of dentistry. He praised the action taken by the New Jersey State board in prosecuting one man who had operated in different parts of the State and thought that with the assistance of the association more work along this line could be accomplished.

President Dilts also drew attention to the great interest being taken all over the State in the free clinics which have been established in some cities of the State, and hoped that all cities would soon feel the necessity for and vote for their establishment. He praised Governor John Franklin Fort for signing the bill granting any city in the State $1,000 for the maintenance of such a free clinic.

A model free clinic is being conducted at this meeting and is in charge of Thomas Weeks, of Philadelphia, in the Casino. Faithful work at these free clinics was urged so that the public might be shown that the members are in earnest in their work in organizations of this kind. President Dilts also said that the State of Virginia was the most advanced State in the Union in dental matters.

It is quite likely that before this meeting is over another and more convenient site for the next annual meeting will be selected. It is believed that many of the dentists are kept away from the meetings because of the idstances many of them have to travel.

Dr. C. S. Stockton, of Jersey City, warmly espoused the cause of Asbury Park as a meeting place and hoped that the association would be able to build a convention hall of its own in the near future. He said the conventions have been held in Asbury Park for over twenty years and hoped there would be no action taken against a continuance of the practice.

Rev. F. B. Stockdale opened the morning session with prayer and Mayor T. Frank Appleby made an address in which he welcomed the dentists. It is not recorded that any Plainfielder took part in the speeches.

Freight Wreck at Lincoln.

Five ice-laden cars attached to a freight train on the Lehigh Valley railroad were derailed this morning at Lincoln strewing the frozen water and parts of the smashed cars across and along the tracks enough to stop all traffic. Trains of the Lehigh Valley were switched to the tracks of the Central Railroad while the wreck was being cleared. Nobody was injured. The derailment was caused by the breaking of a flange on one of the freight car wheels.

FOR ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT

Veterans Planning for Forty-Fourth to Be Held at Atlantic City in Sept.

LARGE ATTENDANCE EXPECTED.

Plainfield to Be Represented by Winfield Scott Post and Women's Relief Corps—Delegates Not Yet Named.

Grand Army of the Republic veterans and members of the Woman's Relief Corps in all parts of the country are completing arrangements for the forty-fourth National Encampment of the Grand Army, which will be held in Atlantic City during the week of September 19.

Ex-Governor Samuel R. Vansant, of Minnesota, commander-in-chief, has issued an order anouncing that National headquarters will be established on Young's Pier, and the commander-inchief and staff will be entertained at the Hotel Chalfonte. It is announced that the National council of administration will meet at headquarters on Tuesday morning, September 20, at 10 o'clock.

Among the matters of business to come before the encampment will be an amendment to the rules and regulations of the Grand Army of the Republic, proposed by the Department of Maryland, admitting members of the Revenue Cutter Service to membership in the organization —those who served in the Civil War. The Department of Connecticut proposes an amendment giving the Sons of Veterans the privilege of sitting at any regular meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic, excepting musters. It is believed that both amendments will be adopted.

Col. John McElroy, editor of the National Tribune, is said to be slated for commander-in-chief next year. Little doubt of his election is felt in Grand Army circles, as the veterans of the Western departments are also for him.

The business sessions of the encampment will commence Thursday, day September 22, on the steel pier at the foot of Virginia avenue, at 10 a. m.

Abraham M. Metz, of Joe Hooker Post, No. 32, Department of New Jersey, is appointed officer of the day.

Michael Heller, of Hetty A. Jones Post, No. 12, Department of Pennsylvania, is appointed officer of the guard.

The parade will occur on Wednesday, September 21. Details will be announced in special orders about August 1.

Winfield Post No. 77 and the Women's Relief Corps of this city will be largely represented at the Encampment, but the delegates have not yet been namd.

NOTED SLUM WORKER TO SPEAK HERE ON SUNDAY

Brigadier Mrs. Boville, who has the oversight of the women's and children's rescue work also the slum department of the Salvation Army in the United States will be the speaker at the tent next Sunday and the local corps has been very fortunate in procuring her.

She will give an insight into the great work in which she is engaged Perhaps no other woman in this country knows more of the sorrows and darkness of the submerged population of the large cities than Mrs. Boville. The Army in this country has twenty-six fully equipped rescue homes through which 1,533 women and girls were passed last year; besides this they have 23 slum posts, four children's homes and six nurseries all of which Mrs. Boville is interested in.

Wilson May Go.

Further plans for the outing of the Elizabeth Democratic committee, to be held on Wednesday, August 17, to Witzel's Point View Grove, Long Island, were made at a meeting last night of the committee which has the event in charge. It was reported that invitations to attend had been extended to party leaders all over the State and that there was a possibility that such men as Frank S. Katzenbach, Woodrow Wilson and George Silzer would be present.

Mrs. James Middledith, of Truell Court, left town Wednesday for Canada, where she will spend the summer.

Miss Emma Rountree, of Steiner place, clerk and typewriter in the law offices of J. H. Van Winkle & Son, Babcock building, will go on her vacation next week, spending the time at Asbury Park.

VISIT BLUE RIDGE CASTLE

Freedom Sends Large Delegation to Orange on Fraternal Visit.

LOCAL TEAM'S WORK PRAISED.

Forty-five Members Help Orangeites Spend a Happy Evening—Plainfielders Play and Sing.

A large delegation from Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, of this city, spent an enjoyable time with their brother knights in Blue Ridge Castle at Orange last night. The local party left here shortly after 6.30 on a special car chartered for the trip and reached Orange shortly after 8 o'clock. About forty-five of the knights took the trip, and after the fun was over, voted their Orange brothers, the best of entertainers.

Drill and floor work by the local degree team was a feature of the night's entertainment.

The local team composed of William A. Day, R. V. Kinney, Joseph Randall, Caspar Waglo, Frank Neidig, P. Niles, Arthur Coleen, Frank Runyon, Walter Butz and John Boasterle were attired in military uniform and were roundly applauded after they had gone through their paces. Other members of the local castle who furnished entertainment for the night were Ed. Young and Mr. Frazee, who both rendered cornet selections and Horace Martin, Jr. and Joseph Randall, whose vocal selections were well received. The party left Orange at 11.30 and arrived home shortly after 1 o'clock.

In the party were: Grand Chief Horace J. Martin, Past Grand Chief, R. V. Kinney, Past Chiefs, William Day, Charles Graves, Joseph Randall, Caspar Wagler, Arthur Caleen, Clark Lowrey, Walter Butts, Frank Runyon, Frank Neidig, F. Niles, Louis A. Martin and Al. Leevers, Bert Vail, Fred Koller, Louis Stites, N. Meyer, H. Baunner, Harry Joseph, George Church, J. Smith, H. Sutphen, Horace Martin, Jr., Charles Schoonover, L. A. Hummer, Charles Hummer, Henry Haurand, John Bosterle, M. Frazee, and a number of others.

P.S.C. GETS PRINCETON LIGHT HEAT & POWER CO.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey has secured control of the Princeton Light, Heat and Power Co., which supplies Princeton and surrounding territory with gas and electric service. The final details of the transfer are expected to be carried out today. At a meeting held in New York City Tuesday afternoon a change was effected among the officers and directors of the company. Heman Dowd resigned as President and Frank Bergen was chosen in his place; Harry C. Stevenson took Geo. Whitfield Betts, Jr.'s place as secretary and William H. Pettes and John L. O'Toole were made directors upon Bayard Stockton and William P. McMichael, Jr., of the old board resigning. J. Henry Stout, a director, did not resign, nor did Richard Stockton, treasurer and general manager of the company, who was not at the meeting.

The Public Service acquires all but a comparatively few shares of the Princeton concern and guarantees the interest on outsanding bonds amounting to something like $175-000.

The Princeton company serves Princeton borough and township, Hopewell borough and township, Rocky Hill, Skillman, Dayton, Monmouth Junction, Deans and Cranberry.

Local Moose Go Trailing.

Loyal Order of Moose took the trail to New Brunswick last night joining their brethren of Perth Amboy and Newark. A parade through the streets was followed by initiatory exercises at Columbia hall and a collation at Whitehall Hotel. The local contingent had two special trolley cars at their disposal.

Another Wheel Stolen.

A wheel was stolen from beside the Manning marble yard on the Central avenue side some time between Monday night and Tuesday morning. An investigation is being made by the police and in all likelihood the wheel will be recovered.

Children Enjoyed Ride.

The children of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp enjoyed automobile rides from 5 to 7 o'clock yesterday evening. The autos were furnished by friends of the camp.

RECTOR'S TRIBUTE TO JUDGE RUNYON

In a communication from Camp Comfort, Hedges Lake, New York, where he is enjoying a much needed rest from his labors, Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, tells the editor of this paper what he thinks of Judge Runyon as a candidate for Congress. The letter addressed to the editor was unsolicited and was prompted, no doubt by the clergymen's well known interest in all matters pertaining to the public welfare.

Here is the letter:

"News of the outside world sifts now and then to inmates of our camp. Among the items of interest to me is the announcement of Judge W. N. Runyon's candidacy for nomination on the Republican ticket for Congressman from New Jersey.

"I am glad that Judge Runyon has come forward in State and national politics. We need just the type of men Judge Runyon represents to stand for New Jersey in the House of Representatives. He is a man we all know, vigorous, alert, mentally keen, a man of experience and judicial temperament, a man in touch with the people, tactful, broad minded and of sound common sense.

"I hope many of my friends and fellow-citizens may join with me in endorsing and working for the coveted nomination for Judge Runyon."

CAMPERS CATCH BIG FISH

Fifteen Pounds the Record for One Morning—Two Heavy Bass for "Gus."

BOYS BROWN AS INDIANS.

Baseball Games and Other Sports—Lots of Visitors—Camp to Close September Three.

Camp Comfort, Hedges Lake, N. Y., where Rev. George A. Warner and many of the boys of Holy Cross parish are enjoying the season, must be all that its name implies judging from the reports emanating from there. There is plently of hot sun and fair weather to tan the boys, a lake of clear water in which to swim, ice cream for dinner and flapjacks for supper—"Pop Greelishe's best," therefore is it any wonder that the boys are looking like young Indians, brown and fat?

"Early morning," comes the report, "fishing trips have been the order of the day, the boys getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning and journeying to Clark's pond. Last Saturday the "dominie and the sexton" with "Fat" and "Gus" caught about fifteen pounds of fish. Gus landed two black bass, one weighing 1¾ pounds and the other 1¼.

"Four boys whose time expired have returned to their homes, Taylor and Thorp, of East Orange, and Blume and Vandeventer, of Plainfield. That just tramping and fishing and eating do not take up all the boys' time is evidenced by the two baseball games played with St. Peters' boys, who are camping at Lake Lauderdale. The first game was won by Camp Comfort by the score of 10 to 3. St. Peter's took the second by 11 to 6. A feature of the first game was a home run by "Father" and a delayed steal by Van Norden.

"Many excellent pictures of the camp have been taken by the boys and their friends. Automobile parties from Cambridge, Hoosick Falls and nearby places frequently visit the camp. Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Ball, of Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield, are expected this week and later Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Irons in their new Lozier car will be here.

"Several boys will return to Plainfield on August 1. On August 2 Aaron Higgins, of Stone street, will go up on the Troy line for a two weks' stay at the camp. The camp will be maintained until September."

Sentence Suspended.

The case against Charles Emmons, of Steiner place, who was arrested on complaint of his wife in Sterling, Tuesday night charged with desertion and non-support was settled in an amicable manner o all concerned, by Justice Snape in the borough court last night. Emmons agreed to go back to his wife and support her, and on his promise the justice suspended sentence.

Reception at Shiloh Baptist.

The closing reception of the Middlesex Central Association delegates will be held in the Shiloh Baptist church, West Fourth street on Monday evening, July 25. The doors will open at 7:30 o'clock and the exercises will begin at 8:30.

HELP FROM LITTLE ONES

Three Pretty Girls Show the Way for Others to Help King's Daughters Camp.

TWELVE DOLLARS REALIZED.

Louise Seader, Grace Wakefield and Bertha Martin Raise Money in Original Way—Had Four Helpers.

Three little girls imbued with a desire to help the King's Daughters' baby camp on the mountain, after reading about the effort The Daily Press is making to raise funds for this charity, decided to do something themselves. Louise Seader, Grace Wakefield and Bertha Martin, ranging in age from 11 to 12 years thought a whole lot about the scheme and finally decided to hold a lawn festival.

Henry P. Seader, the father of Louise, readily granted permission to the three to hold the festival on his lawn at 102 Manning avenue. The little girls printed their own tickets, and sold them all while their mothers turned to and made cake, candy and ice cream, with the result that the lawn was a scene of activity and fun yesterday afternoon, when the festival was held and twelve dollars were thus added to the fund for the sick babies. Imitation would be the sincerest form of approval and would help the good work along.

Those who assisted the three girls were Blanche Martin, Charles Wakefield and Arthur and Dorothy Seader.

Contributions sent to The Daily Press for this laudable purpose will be acknowledged immediately and will be transmitted to the camp authorities. Money is sorely needed and we believe that many Plainfielders will respond to the appeal. Little girls and boys who get up lawn parties and other entertainments for the camp's sake are requested to send to this office full accounts of their affairs which will gladly be published.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED WITH GARDEN PARTY

Miss Willetta Ord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ord, of 623 East Seventh street, was given a garden party in honor of her sixth birthday yesterday afternoono. The table was prettily decorated with red and white carnations and after the children had partaken of the delicious dainties they enjoyed games and a good time in general.

Miss Ord was the recipient of many gifts. Those present were Heaten Heffelfinger, Rutherford Dalley, Arthur Giles, Dorothy Giles, Elizabeth Dugan, Dorothy Stangel Esther Hellstrom, Marguerite Neal, Mildred Poole, John Muhlenbeck, Helen Lake, Finley Lake, Grace Goldsack, Robert Goldsack, Ethel Anderson, Fred Wynne, Charles Johnson, Alvia Hansen, Elsie Soul and Willetta H. Ord.

FOWLER'S NOT SELFISH; WANTS ONLY TWO OFFICES

The Trenton Times wants to know how Charles N. Fowler proposes to fill two political offices at one and the same time. He is a candidate for the Republican nomination for both Senate and House at Washington. Of course there are a few other qualified men in New Jersey, but evidently Mr. Fowler feels that there is no crying need for their services when he is to be had. This is what the Trenton Times says:

At the reception given to Congressman Fowler, at Hackensack on Friday evening, a resolution was adopted naming him "as a logical candidate of the Republican party in New Jersey for United States Senator," and the reports of the meeting say that Mr. Fowler "began his campaign for the seat of Senator Kean," though there is nothing in the speech he made to indicate that he will make an appeal for popular support in the primaries, or even that he will enter the contes for the Senatorship. Assuming that the newspaper reports are correct, and based on "inside information," an interesting question is raised. Mr. Fowler has already started a campaign for renomination to Congress. Can he be a candidate for the two offices at the same time? The general election law, section 42, provides for the filing of "all certificates of nomination and all petitions naming candidates for office to be filed by voters of the entire State, or of any Congressional district," with the Secretary of State; and says that "candidates nominated for any office in any certificate or petition shall manifest their acceptance of such nomination by a written acceptance thereof, signed by their own hand, upon or annexed to and filed with such certificate or petition." An acceptance carries a promise to perform the duties of the office accepted. It is apparent that no man can fill the two offices of Senator and Representative at the same time. Further, it is a question whether the Secretary of State would be warranted to filing two certificates of nomination for different offices. However, that is a matter to be disposed of when the occasion requires action. Possibly Mr. Fowler has been frightened out of the Congressional race by the announcement of the candidacy of Judge Runyon, and has decided to yield to the solicitations of his friends that he make a fight for Senator Kean's seat.—Trenton Times.

DIDN'T LIKE HER SOUP

Mrs. Cartwright Wants Her Father-in-Law to Leave the House.

APPEALS TO JUDGE RUNYON.

Husband All Right and Both Will Reflect for a Week—Reconciliation Probable Outcome.

Judge William N. Runyon could see but one way to adjust the domestic troubles of Mr. and Mrs. John Cartwright in the city court this morning and that was to advise them to try and patch up the differences which caused them to appeal to him and in event of their being unable to come to an amicable agreement to come to court next Thursday.

Mrs. Cartwright complained not of her husband particularly, but of her father-in-law, whom she says is a persona non grata in their home. She told the judge that their married life was pleasant until the elder Cartwright began to find fault with her soup. She did not even object to taking in the father, mother and the two sisters of the husband, but she most strenuously objects to have to listen to abuse for what she does. Mr. Cartwright corroborated his wife as to the loving relationship existing between himself and his wife until events with his father transpired, but notwithstanding the protests of his wife he says he wants to take care of his father in the home. He is a linotype machinst and works on a Newark newspaper earning about $35 per week and as he furnished the money he thinks he ought to have the say as to whom he entertains in the house.

Judge Runyon in advising the couple declared that he deplored the separation of married people for any cause, but especially for any thing so trival a matter as this and he gave it as his opinion that if the couple would think the matter over carefully they would agree with him that it is better to strain a point for the sake of harmony than to break up the entire domestic fabric.

Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright left the courtroom promising Judge Runyon to give the matter further consideration and prayerful thought. Robert Newton Crane appeared for Mrs. Cartwright and S. S. Swackhaamer for her husband.

AMPUTATION FOLLOWS GASHING OF FINGER

As a result of having the flesh torn from her finger by a gold ring while climbing a fence about a wek ago, Helen Eagle, the eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Birney Eagle, of 1158 West Front street, had the finger amputated ysterday, the operation being performed by Doctors Endicott and Probasco.

Little Helen in company with Marjory Storrs went searching for daisies and coming to a lot in the vicinity of West End avenue decided that there were enough daisies in the lot for their use, but in order to get the flowers they had to climb a fence. Marjory got safely over but when Helen attempted the climb the ring on her finger caught on the picket just as she was jumping for the ground. The ring broke, but instead of slipping off it cut a gash the whole length of the finger, clear to the bone.

When she arrived home the wound was dressed and apparently was healing. Upon examination by the doctors it was found that the little member was dead and that it would be necessary to amputate it. This was done successfully yesterday.

EXCURSIONISTS OFF FOR ASBURY PARK.

Twelve cars loaded to the limit left this city this morning for Asbury Park. It was the annual excursion of the First Presbyterian, Park Avenue and Congregational Sunday schools. There were fifteen cars exclusive of the baggage car on the train, but the three forward cars were not occupied.

Among the passengers were several dentists bound for the annual meeting of the New Jersey Dental Association.

Included among the guests of the Brighton Beach Hotel, Manhattan, N. Y., are Mr. and Mrs. Alford Olenopad, of this city.

Mrs. Joseph W. Yates and her daughter, Miss Yates, of East Seventh street, are spending the summer at Lake Minnewaski, New York.

Henry O'Connors, of Bayonne, has been a guest this week of Mr. and Mrs. John Purcell.

WESTFIELD.

John S. Burnhans, for many years a prominent resident of the town, died suddenly at his home, on Prospect street, Tuesday from an attack of acute indigestion. Mr. Burhans was in his seventy-seventh year and is survived by a wife and two sons. In his young days he was a resident of New York city and a member of the old New York Volunteer Fire Department. He was also an exempt of the Westfield department.

A complaint against W. H. Barton, for blocking North avenue with livery rigs, will be tried before the recorder today. It is claimed that Barton makes a practice of storing his carriages in the street to the hindrance of the regular tramc.

Andrew Tompkins, aged ten years, was taken to the Elizabeth General Hospital to be treated for appendicitis, on Tuesday.

Westfield Council held a special meeting last night to award the contracts for work on the new fire department house.

GAMBLING DEN STIRS UNION TWP.

To suppress gambling at the Vaux Hall Club at Vaux Hall road and Springfield avenue, Union Township, a special meeting of the Township Committee has been called for Friday night. Gottlieb Schnabel, chairman of the committee, issued the call and in a statement declared the place would be closed. He has procured evidence substantiating the story of doings at the den published yesterday.

The place was running full blast yesterday afternoon. Bets were made on the horses and roulette wheels. The clubhouse at first was said to be in Springfield, but was later found to be located in Union.

According to Prosecutor Charles A. Swift, of Union county, the publication in yesterday's papers that a poolroom, with a roulette wheel attachment, was being conducted at the club, was the first information he had on the subject. No complaint had ever been made to him, he said.

Sheriff Kirkland was out of town yesterday.

Mr. Schnabel made this statement yesterday:

"Myself and other members of the Township Committee were unaware that gambling was being carried on at the place. Had we known it, action would have been taken to close it up at once. We had heard at one time that liquor was being sold at the club without license, but an investigation did not produce evidence to this effect. After that we received no complaints against the club.

"I conducted a personal investigation this morning, following the published reports about the place, and found four men who told me they had played the horses at the Vaux Hall Club. I am going after the lawbreakers, and all may be assured that laws will not again be violated in Union township."

The club is located close to the Essex County line and just over the boundary line of Springfield Township. This caused it to be supposed at first that the club was really in Springfield Township.

RAHWAY LOSES; GARWOOD WINS

Trenton, July 21.—Holding that the various laws abolishing the old State Sewerage Commission and conferring its powers upon the present State Board of Health, and also the laws giving the State Board of Health control over sewage disposal plants, are constitutional, Justice Parker filed in the Supreme Court yesterday an opinion upholding the right of the borough of Garwood to construct a seweage disposal plant and run its effluent into the Rahway River.

The decision is a defeat for the city of Rahway, which brought certiorari proceedings to restrain the running of the effluent from sewage into waters of this State except under conditions approved by the State Sewage Commission. In 1908 the Legislature passed the laws abolishing the Sewerage Commission and vesting all its power in the State Board of Health.

The plans for the Garwood sewage disposal plant were approved by the State Board of Health, and then Rahway brought this suit. There was further legislation in 1909, before notice was served upon Garwood to install a disposal plant, amending the act of 1908.

Justice Parker holds that the laws of 1908, as amended by the law of 1909, vesting the duties and powers of the old sewerage commission in the State Board of Health, does not have the effect of intermixing in the Sewerage Commission acts of 1899 and 1900 things that have no proper relation to those acts, as was argued by counsel for Rahway.

The effect of the various pieces of legislation, the justice says, is to make the State Board of Health, ex-officio the State Sewerage Commission, as far as this sewage disposal plant and these proceedings are concerned. Finding that the laws are constitutional the proceedings providing for the Garwood disposal plant are affirmed.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A party of nine fishermen caught 600 weakfish near Beach Haven.

The vicinity of Toms River has a large crop of huckleberries, the first in several years.

Dr. J. S. Waggoner, who died suddenly at Ocean City a few days ago, was buried Tuesday.

A Mantua grocer, who saved the Lincoln pennies that came his way, Tuesday deposited 1,875 of them in the bank.

Arthur Brown was released from custody Tuesday upon the promise that he would leave Millville and never return. He had been arrested for petit larceny.

For the Republican nomination for Mayor of Millville there are already three candidates in the field—B. Frank Buck, Joseph F. Smith, the incumbent, and H. R. Errickson.

Two concrete bridges, built by the City Park Commission, Bridgeton, will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies July 27. There will be an automobile parade and at night a boat parade and fireworks.

Beach posers who have been outlawed by Mayor Stoy, of Atlantic City, were outdone Tuesday by Joseph Seamon, William Pearson and Paul Cavanaugh, young Washingtonians, who went bathing in such abbreviated attire that beach policemen were shocked. The three men were rushed to police headquarters, where Recorder Keffer fined them $25 each.

The members of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Cumberland County, together with the county officers, were guests Tuesday of the Cumberland Automobile Club. In twelve machines the guests were given a run to Glossboro, where dinner was served, and in the afternoon the party was taken over State roads to Buena. The trip was for the purpose of showing the freeholders and officials the benefit of good State roads.

Mrs. Winfield Martin, a young woman of Bridgeton, is looking for her husband. She has detectives and police officers also engaged in the search. Mrs. Martin tells the story of being taken last week to Wildwood by her husband and on Saturday she says he left her there, saying he would have to go to Bridgeton for a day on business. He promised to return that day, but never came back. Mrs. Martin arrived in Bridgeton, yesterday, and went at once to her home. There was nothing left. Martin had stripped the house of everything and gone off, leaving no address.

GEORGE C. OTTO MAY RUN FOR ASSEMBLY.

Friends of George C. Otto, of Elizabeth, are urging him to be a candidate for the Assembly on the Republican ticket. Mr. Otto has not yet made a decision, but his supporters hope that he will consent, because they feel that his personal popularity would make him a strong candidate, even in a Democratic stronghold. Downtown Republicans, of Elizabeth, feel that the lower section of the city should be represented in the House of Assembly, and think that in Mr. Otto they have a man who would fill the office in a most creditable manner.

Mr. Otto has not interested himself to any extent in politics and speaking on the subject today said: "Two years ago I was asked to run for councilman, but I refused. A few weeks ago I was asked to be a candidate for the mayoralty, but I said I didn't care to enter politics, as I thought it would interfere with my business.' Now they come again this time insisting that I consent if not for myself for the good of the party to make the race for the Assembly. I am no party man and my choice is the man who I think will fill the office best, and if I do enter the race and should happen to be elected I would work as I thought best."

Mr. Otto has an unusually large acquaintance, being personally popular, and has the confidence of all who know him and is connected with some of the leading organizations of the city.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these; not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

RAILROAD DETECTIVES MUST WEAR UNIFORMS

Detectives and policemen employed by the Central Railroad Company, will hereafter be uniformed. The uniforms will be like those worn by the New York City police, and will consist of dress coat, white-striped trousers and cap. The "gum hoe" men of the railroad police depratment while having uniforms, will wear them only on state occasions.

Police Captain Reynolds, of Elizabeth, in discussing the change, said that it was thought better to uniform the men, especially when they were doing special work, such as excursion duty and duty where it is necessary to handle big crowds. The police officers, Chief Grey and the three captains, will also wear uniforms when the occasion demands.

Since the seashore rush has commenced on the Long Branch division of the railroad, the company has been bothered with pickpockets. Last summer it was necessary to keep plainclothesmen on duty all the time at the Elizabethport station, where it was found that thieves were gathering a harvest among the passengers changing cars there from the seashore branch. This year, it is said, the thieves have continued their operations.

Plainfield, N. J., July 21, 1910.

FOWLER'S MUD MAN DUNN.

That Mr. Fowler's ill advised friends intend to resort to a campaign of virtuperpation and abuse to win away from Judge Runyon some of his strong and enviable support, appears to be evident. A fair sample of what may be expected is to be found in the shape of a letter signed by Fred W. Dunn, a census enumerator, appearing on this page. We do not think the public will be misled by the authorship of this communication. We believe that Dunn did not write it himself. Many of the insinuations are false. The people of Plainfield know Judge Runyon too well to be blinded by the Fowler mud-batteries.

It is unnecessary, we say, for Judge Runyon to pay any attention to such stuff. He is unlikely to do so. The evident purpose is to confuse the issue; to blind the people. It is the tactics of a hopeless cause, made use of to do as much damage as possible. Undoubtedly the plan is to gain publicity for the letter in other sections of the district where Judge Runyon is not so well known, and the real purpose of requesting publication in the local papers is to be able to say that it appeared in Judge Runyon's home town papers. We gratify this purpose and publish the letter, and questions and signature, believing that they will act as a boomerang and do good to Judge Runyon's cause.

The real issue in this campaign is, which is the better man in whom to repose this high trusteeship? Which one stands upon the better platform of declared belief and position on the issues confronting the party and the country, and which one may be depended upon better to carry out his avowed declarations?

In the course of a few days, Judge Runyon, we understand, will make a full, unequivocal and honest statement concerning his candidacy and the position he takes on the principal issues. The people here have enough faith in the man to believe that what he will have to say will meet with the approval and receive the endorsement of the sound and honorable members of his party in this district. Mr. Fowler has already issued his statement and it speaks for itself, it speaks in a way that has hurt him in the esteem he formally enjoyed.

The numbers affixed to the questions are our own. There are twenty questions, and we undertake one on our own responsibility and without consulting Judge Runyon to answer seriatim:—

(1). Possibly. Many citizens did this, and it was worth doing. The question is, like others, wholly immaterial to the canvas.

(2). No.

(3). No. Judge Runyon never curses and seldom "excoriates."

(4). Probably this is mostly, if not entirely, untrue.

(5). They and others probably did so.

(6). This question appears to have no sense.

(7). Probably it is not a fact. If it is, then what of it?

(8). Yes, and is yet.

(9). We don't believe Judge Runyon gave Mr. Fowler's letter his "unqualified approval."

(10. No.

(11). Probably it is not a fact.

(12). No.

(13). Probably, No.

(14). No.

(15). Judge Runyon has not changed his ground and will not.

16. No. The insinuation is wickedly false.

(17). No.

(18). The insinuation is mean, malicious and false.

(19). No. If they or anyone else had done so, Judge Runyon would have nothing to do with such proffers or suggestions.

(20). Everybody who knows Judge Runyon knows him as the soul of honor—a clean, high-minded, independent, public-spirited gentleman, a man of his word and of experience and marked ability—a man who would not stoop to mean acts of any sort—a man of conscience and increasing usefulness.

Without any doubt the west side of Park avenue between the railroad and Second street presented the most substantial and modern appearance in the business section, before some one for the sake of a few paltry dollars allowed an unsightly looking cheap lunch wagon to disfigure that particular locality. The owners of the handsome structures adjoining should take up a collection for the property owner who would thus spoil the neighborhood in such a selfish manner. A little lesson in civic pride is sorely needed by the landlord.

The communication signed by Fred W. Dunn, appearing on this page, is celarly libellous in our opinion, but we have taken the precaution of obtaining from Judge Runyon a waiver for any claim for damages. We hope he will be as generous to the reputed author of the slanderous statement.

THE FORUM.

Attacks Judge Runyon.

Editor, The Daily Press:

As Mr. Runyon has forced himself into the Congressional arena it seems pertinent at this time to examine what has been his relation to public men and political events, as it stands revealed by his own words and deeds.

1. Is it not a fact that James T. MacMurray took up Mr. Runyon when he first began his practice of law in Plainfield, and pushed him forward politically?

2. Is it not a fact that in 1906, Mr. Runyon deserted and denounced Mr. MacMurray although he had been his best political friend?

3. Is it not a fact that in 1906, Mr. Runyon evcoriated, in unmeasured terms, Frank H. Smith, Andrew McCardell and Senator Kean, and cursed as corrupt the very machine whose candidate he now is?

4. Is it not a fact that Mr. MacMurray advocated and urged the reelection of Mr. Runyon in 1907, but that Andrew McCardell and Frank H. Smith denounced him in terms and names unfit to print?

5. Is it not a fact that Mr. Mac Murray and Mr. Fowler put Mr. Runyon forward as a senatorial candidate against Judge Cross in 1902, and did all in their power to nominate him?

6. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon, in 1906, out-Heroded Herod in his enthusiasm for the new-ideaists?

7. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon has not once met with the Progressive Republicans, this summer, giving various reasons therefor and among others that he was out of politics, liked to be out, and was going to stay out?

8. Is it not a fact that Mr. Fowler has been a personal and political friend of Mr. Runyon's for years?

9. Is it not a fact that Mr. Fowler, because of his supposed close friendship, as Mr. Tracy has alleged, submitted his recent open letter to Mr. Runyon for criticism, and that Mr. Runyon gave this letter his unqualified approval.

10. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon, within a fortnight after he had thus set his approval upon this letter, criticising as it did Senator Kean and Frank H. Smith, entered into negotiations with Hamilton Kean and Frank H. Smith to have them back his Congressional candidacy with their machine?

11. Is it not a fact that Boss Voorhees, of Morris county, offered the Congressional nomination to every possible candidate in that county and that each and every one of them refused it before these fellow-conspirators of his began to search Union county for a candidate?

12. Is it not a fact that Frank H. Smith offered the nomination to every eligible man in Union county he could think of, and even told one man that he could name anyone he pleased, before he offered it to Mr. Runyon.

13. Is it not a fact that Boss Voorhees stated two weeks before Mr. Runyon's announcement of his candidacy, that Mr. Runyon was going to be the candidate?

14. Is it not a fact that the men who first publicly approved Mr. Runyon's candidacy were Frank H. Smith, Boss Voorhees and Sheriff Kirkland—all machinists?

15. Is it not a fact that if Mr. Runyon stood where he pretended to stand in 1906, or now stands with the insurgents in favor of the Roosevelt policies, consistency and honor would compel him as a man to support Mr. Fowler in his fight for the reforms he is identified with and the Roosevelt policies, and against Cannonism and all the political corruption it implies?

16. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon has deserted and betrayed every political friend and principle he has ever had?

17. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon is fickle, vain and as unstable as water?

18. Is it not a fact that Mr. Runyon has his price, and that this price is the mere possibility of political opportunity?

19. Is it not a fact that either the Keans have agreed to pay the political freight for Mr. Runyon, or that Speaker Cannon, on behalf of the interests, when he plotted wtih Boss Voorhees and eSnator Kean to defeat Mr. Fowler, guaranteed to furnish the necessary funds?

20. Is it not a fact that if all these things are true, the Republicans of the Fifth district should think this matter over a good many times before they decide to trust a candidate upon his mere promise not to wear the collar of any man? Why did Mr. Runyon mention a collar when he made his announcement, if he himself did not realize that the facts forced the conclusion that he already had put one on? Did he not protest too quickly and too much for an innocent man?

Very truly yours,
FRED W. DUNN,

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

MAYOR FISK AND PLAINFIELD.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, who has served that city in one capacity and another for nineteen years and three times as Mayor, announces that he will not be a candidate for re-election this fall. He cannot spare the time for another period of service as chief executive. He purposes, therefore, to step down and give someone elese a chance.

There is nothing more refreshing in American politics than to find here and there a man unselfish and interested enough to share a large part of his leisure, and to encroach seriously on the time set apart for the conduct of business affairs, for the sake of serving a municipality. Probably there is no more thankless task than acting in an official capacity in most of our American cities. If things go wrong there are plenty to criticise. If things go right there are few who take the trouble to commend. For those at all sensitive and unable to take the broad view, overlook, forgive and keep right on with the tasks in hand unflinchingly, trouble nips in the bud the ambitious public career which may have been planned. "I have troubles enough of my own," is the remark so many of us have heard from the lips of some thoroughly capable business man retiring from politics, who, on entering the public service, had been looked upon as full of large possibilities for long continued usefulness. That the truth is spoken the average business man in these strenuous days will easily admit. But what a loss to the municipality has been such abandonment!

Mayor Fisk had the patience to work up in politics. Few capable and prosperous business men are satisfied to do that. He served faithfully as a member of the Common Council, becoming president of that body. Then he was elected Mayor. But he was not too big or too weary of serving the people to fail to see an opportunity in becoming a member of the Board of Health, of which organization he was made president. Later he was chosen Mayor again, which position he is still holding very effectively and creditably. Meantime, he has been prominent in the councils of the Republican party, serving as chairman of the Republican city committee and as a member of the Union County Republican Committee. He has appeared often as a delegate to party conventions, both county, State and National, lending a hand where one has been needed.

Throughout Union county, and in the State at large as well, Plainfield has a reputation firmly established for being a well-governed city. How much of the credit is due to Mayor Fisk, Plainfield people who have seen his work at close range know best. But those of us who have viewed his work from the outside have seen in his labors qualities which could hardly have failed to work for the good of the municipality. His wide business experience has been freely drawn upon in meeting the city's problems, as well as his advantage of education and natural gift of good common sense. Face such a man, full of vigor and directness of aim in power, and something worth while is reasonably sure to be brought about. As might be expected, Mayor Fisk has the pleasure of looking back over a long record of accomplishments while in municipal service. It is not the intention now to praise him or to pamper him, but merely to call attention to the good fortune of any city which can secure such a man for service and keep him in political life in various useful capacities for so long a period of years. Say what you please they are getting exceedingly rare in scores of municipalities in the United States. That they have never been more needed, and without doubt will continue to be needed, unless our public exercise is to be allowed to suffer a serious decline, will not be denied. —Elizabeth Journal.

UNDER TON AND HALF OF CEMENT BUT LITTLE HURT.

After having been crushed under thirty bags of cement weighing one hundred pounds each, Ford Seaman, a negro, 250 Line street, walked out of the Homeopathic Hospital Tuesday. He was hurt while working on one of the new buildings for the Victor Talking Machine Company.

Seaman was stooping under a large pile of cement bags, which were piled upon one another, in quest of something and was pinned to the ground when the entire pile collapsed, burying him. Several workmen dug him out.

The doctors who examined him were unable to ascertain that he had received any further injuries than a few contusions of the body, a sprained wrist and a lacerated scalp. When the physicians had finished dressing his injuries, he surprised all hands by getting up and walking out of the building.

CHAINED A WARSHIP.

An Incident of the War Between Greece and Turkey.

A YOUNG OFFICER'S DARING.

The Turk's Pluck and Strategy Resulted in Making a Powerful Greek Vessel a Helpless Prisoner Within the Landlocked Waters of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1897 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, fresh from the crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic fleet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with this artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gantlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boathouse, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large caique, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the bight. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

The heart of man is made to reconcile contradictions.—Hume.

A BUSINESS TRAINING

The Methods That Are Used In the Schools of Germany.

CLASS ROOMS AS OFFICES.

The Pupils Are Divided Into Firms That Carry on an Imaginary Trade With Each Other—The Course From Office Boy to Director.

No one will deny the fact that Germans are among the keenest business men in the world. And undoubtedly one of the secrets of their success lies in the fact that in German schools boys are taught the practical details of business. The writer recently returned from Hamburg after a year's course of education, and an outline of the system of training boys in business may be interesting.

On my first day's attendance I was handed a time table on which appeared, set out in formidable array, such subjects as commercial correspondence, laws of bills of exchange, currency, political economy and commercial law, none of which at the time conveyed much to me and raised serious doubts in my mind as to whether I should be able to understand and appreciate what appeared to be most abstruse subjects.

At 9 a. m. sharp on the following day the course began, prefaced by a couple of hours' hard study, for the Germans are gluttons to work and think nothing of a twelve hour day. The first course was called "business training." We worked in two spacious rooms furnished as offices, each room representing a different business house. These two firms carried on an imaginary trade with each other, and the routine adhered to was modeled exactly on the lines of a first class business establishment.

Each firm had a director, and these two were the most eminent students in the academy. They had subject to their management and control a complete staff of correspondents, shorthand writers, typists, bookkeepers, etc. The whole was supervised by a master, to whom reference was made in case of dispute or difficulty.

On making my appearance I was informed that my services were in request as an office boy. I was somewhat taken back, not to say a little humiliated, by the lowly position assigned to me, and I gave the master to understand that I considered I was qualified to occupy a much better post than that which he had chosen for me. He did not seem in the least perturbed by my remarks, but said: "You have already made a mistake—a mistake of diplomacy. One of the great maxims of business as taught here is to do what you are told, to do it at once and do it well."

With that he handed me a pile of envelopes and a long list of addresses and told me to set to work addressing them. I did so, but not with a very good grace, the master coming round from time to time to inspect my work. For two solid hours I plodded on until 11 a. m., when the course came to an end. Then I took the opportunity of going up to the master again and asking him if he did not really think I had been wasting my time in what I had been doing.

"Not in the least," said he. "In everything, no matter how simple or how difficult, there is always a good deal to learn. If you have paid attention while you were working you will have learned something about the geography of the German empire, for each address contains the name of some important town and province in which it is situated and the name of some firm celebrated for some particular class of goods."

This gave me food for reflection. As a matter of fact, I had not paid the least attention to what I had been writing; consequently I had failed to derive the benefit which it was the master's intention I should obtain from what seemed to me at the outset a most senseless task. On the following day I resolved to follow out the master's instructions to the letter, and I was surprised to find how interesting the work became.

I continued addressing envelopes for two hours a day for a whole week, and the next week I received promotion. In this way I went through the whole routine, from office boy to director, and the experience which I obtained in the various capacities has proved invaluable to me in business.

As director I had to sign checks, dictate letters, enter into agreements with the other firm with reference to the sale and purchase of goods, keep an eye on the money market, work out arbitrage calculations, draw up and indorse bills of exchange and bills of lading, make out periodical statements of affairs, allow or dispute amounts placed to the debit of the firm on account of general average losses and generally supervise everything.

While we were thus drilled in practical work the theoretical side of business was not neglected. Lectures were given at fixed hours, bookkeeping and mercantile law. Thus we enjoyed the inestimable advantage of acquiring the theory and practice of business at the same time.—Detroit Free Press.

The Heroic Role

"It's nothing short of a miracle that I am spared to my friends and relatives," declared Patty, with a lugubrious air, as she proceeded to unload the millinery creation of birds and animals from her head. "It's a wonder that my sad and sudden end—"

"Why, Patty, what in the world has happened?" asked Corinne, plumping down on the hatrack seat and drawing her caller to the place beside her.

"I came over to tell you the whole thrilling tale," said Patty. "You know, dear, that all my life I have longed to do something worth while—I mean to put my own powers and resources to the test. I wanted to know just what I should do under circumstances calling for coolness and quick decision. Well, yesterday my opportunity came."

"Why, what in the world happened?" exclaimed Corinne. "Do get into your story quick, Patty ,and leave out the preliminaries."

"No story is good without the proper introduction," returned Patty, reprovingly, "and this is just like the stories you read in books."

Seeing that her listener was properly impressed, Patty went on: "I had promised Merrill that I would press out his muffler, so I put an iron on that little stove attached by a hose to the jet near mother's dresser and then went down to the library to read, while it was heating. Only a few minutes later there came a smell of burning stuff and the room began to fill with smoke."

"Why, Patty, it was a fire!"

"Please don't interrupt, Corinne, but you guessed correctly. Instead of rushing wildly into the street or screaming for Hilda in the kitchen, I ran upstairs and by some instinct made for mother's room. There the seething, roaring flames met my gaze."

"You didn't go in?" cried Corinne.

"I did," declared Patty, grimly, though well pleased with the effect of her recital upon her listener. "Of course, the fire was over in the corner, where Merrill's muffler, dangling from the dresser, was a mass of flames. Without a cry, but with my face deadly pale—I could see myself in the mirror—I rushed into the midst of that terrible conflagration and turned off the open gas jet. The frightful heat and smoke and odor almost overcame me. I fell back only to come on again with renewed determination, dragging mother's new blankets which had lain folded on the couch. I dashed the bundle with all my strength on that wicked blaze."

"Why, what if you had caught on fire?"

"In such moments of peril," said Patty grandly, "one must not think of one's self. Next I rushed to the telephone and told the operator that our house was burning to the ground and asked her to ring the alarm for me. In an another second or two I had Merrill on the wire. To him I had barely reported that our home was in flames and I was battling with them all alone when I heard the receiver drop at his end of the line.

"By this time I was faint and giddy with the smoke. I ran to the windows and threw them open just as the hook and ladder wagon came tearing along. I waved to the driver to stop and the firemen yelled to me not to jump.

"There came a horrible crashing and falling. It proved to be our front door, which they had broken down. Then the house immediately was filled with the firemen.

"I had scarcely finished showing them the smoking debris when Merrill came dashing wildly into the hall, grabbed me and carried me out in his arms to the street.

"I succeeded in explaining to Merrill in just a few more minutes that I, all unaided, had quelled the blaze. As he had rushed down in a taxicab, without his hat or coat, we went back into the house to get thawed out.

"Honestly, after he came and was holding me I hardly swooned at all.

"The firemen were all filing down the steps and every one of them was smiling and chuckling as if pleased with my heroism. Still, one horrid fireman said as he passed that it was a pity I didn't have sense enough to thrown a glass of water on the muffler instead of making a bonfire of my mother's blankets. But the others told him to hush and Merrill said I was a brave, cool-headed little heroine."

"Well, I should think you were!" breathed Corinne, allowing herself to relax. "If you had only called me up, too. I'm so sorry I missed it."

Lord Rosse's Charity Legacy.

Lord Rosse is one of the Irish peers who has come up to London since the presentation of the budget. He owns the little town of Birr. One of the legacies going with this inheritance is an almshouse, to each inmate of which the family in power must give 12 pence every Sunday. Each woman among them receives a new red gown every second year from Lord Rosse and a badge from the hands of the heir. This institution was founded in 1641 and the conditions go with the title to last as long as it lasts. Lord Rosse is a scientist and took honors in this department at Oxford.

THE OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE UNION COUNTY BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

The regular meeting of the Board of Freeholders of Union County was held on July 7, at 2.30 o'clock P. M.

Roll call showed the following members present: Director Cady, Freeholders Adams, Crane, Darby, Doane, Garrison, Gruener, Haviland, Jensen, Jones, Krouse, Martin, Meisel, Perry, Randolph, Smith, Swain and Wilbur—18. Absent—Freeholder Thompson—1.

On motion of Freholder Wilbur it was ordered that the minutes of the meeting of June2 be approved as per printed copies on members' desks.

Communications.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—We hereby respectfully petition your honorable body for permission to extend the mains of this company in the Township of Springfield as follows:

On Westfield avenue, from Brook street to Tucker lane, a private road running nearly parallel with the tracks of the Rahway Valley Railroad, we having been requested by the Township Fire Commissioners to locate and maintain a fire hydrant at that point.

Respectfully,
SHORT HILLS WATER CO.

On motion of Freeholder Smith the communication was received and referred to the County Road Committee with power.

Committee Reports.

The report of Jail Committee was as follows:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Jail Inspection would respectfully report that it has inspected the jail, also the books of the warden:

Number of prisoners in custody June 1	61
Number received during the month	72
Number in custody, July 1	49
Number day's board	1,599
Cost per day per prisoner	.3731c
Meat, provisions, salaries etc.	$596.45

Respectfully submitted,
JOSEPH PERRY,
J. H. DOANE,
JACOB MARTIN,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Gruener the report was received and placed on file.

The Auditor's report was as follows:

Gentlemen—Your Auditor respectfully reports: I have examined the books and vouchers of the Surrogate, Sheriff, Registrar and County Clerk, and find the same correct.

The net receipts are:

Surrogate	$1,348.23
Sheriff	1,204.17
Registrar	1,831.48
County Clerk	444.49

Which amount has been turned over to the County Collector.

Yours respectfully,
BENJAMIN KING,
Auditor.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the report was received and placed on file.

Report of Committee on Bridge over Green Brook.

Gentlemen—Your committee on Somerset county line bridge over Green Brook, New Providence Township, would respectfully report that we met with the Board of Freeholders of Somerset county at the office of the engineer, F. J. Hubbard, on June 3, 1910, and awarded the contract for rebuilding said bridge to Charles A. Peterson for the sum of one thousand four hundred and eighty-five dollars ($1,485), he being the lowest bidder.

BRADFORD JONES,
C. A. SMITH,
J. H. DOANE,
S. P. T. WILBUR,
Committee.

On motion of Freholder Wilbur the report was received and placed on file.

Report of Committee on Westfield Avenue Culvert.

Gentlemen—Your committee on Westfield Avenue Culvert, Westfield, would respectfully report that it has awarded the contract for the building of this culvert to A. W. Stiles for the sum of three hundred and forty-three dollars ($343) he being the lowest bidder.

C. A. SMITH,
BRADFORD JONES,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Swain received and placed on file.

Report of Comittee on Bridge on Grant avenue, near Union Road, Roselle Park.

Gentlemen—Your committee would respectfully report that it has examined the ground, and is of the opinion that the present bridge should be extended.

Your committee would recommend that the extension be made for a length of about sixty-five feet, of the same size of the present bridge, namely four feet span by three feet high, the cost not to exceed the sum of $700.

Part of this extension will occupy the sidewalk and on this section we would lay a concrete sidewalk on top of the new bridge.

Your committee would recommend that a communication be sent to the Borough Council of Roselle Park Borough, stating that this board will expect the Borough Council to pay to the County of Union seventy-five cents per lineal foot for each lineal foot of sidewalk that may so constructed by the county in the building of this bridge.

Respectfully submitted,
AARON D. CRANE,
POSEPH PERRY,
ELSTON DARBY,
Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted which on roll call was so ordered without dissent.

By the Committee on Elizabeth Draw-bridge.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Elizabeth Drawbridges would respectfully report that it has recently made an examination of the superstructure of the Summer street drawbridge, Elizabeth. We find that the steel work of this bridge is disintegrated very badly in places. The floor beams will have to be entirely replaced. Parts of the chords of the main trusses of the bridge are also very badly rusted in several places.

Your committee has obtained a preliminary estimate of the cost of making the necessary repairs, and, based on that estimate, your committee is of the opinion that the repairs would cost from twelve hundred to fifteen hundred dollars.

This bridge is a very light construction; so light in fact that no city fire engines are permitted to go over it.

The foundations of the bridge are in good order and probably would be capable of supporting a heavier bridge than the present one without much additional cost to the foundations. Your committee is of the opinion that before this expenditure for repairs is made an investigation should be made as to the cost of replacing the superstructure of this bridge with one of heavier design.

We would therefore recommend that a committee of five be appointed to investigate the need of replacing this bridge and to report at the next meeting of the board as to such necessity and the probable cost of the work.

C. J. JENSEN,
F. F. HAVILAND,
JACOB MARTIN,
Committee.

Freeholder Krouse moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, which was so ordered. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Jensen, Haviland, Martin, Krouse and Wilbur.

New Business.

By Mr. Meisel.

Resolved, That Springfield avenue and Milltown road or Shunpike road, beginning at the intersection of Springfield avenue with Turkey road, and thence running easterly along Springfield avenue to the Milltown road or Shunpike road, and thence northerly along the Milltown road or Shunpike road to the intersection of the same with Westfield avenue, all lying in the Township of Springfield and being at least thirty-three feet in width and about one and one-quarter miles in length, and forming a connection with a permanently improved road, be improved by the construction of a macadamized roadway in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled, "An act providing for the permanent improvement of public roads in this State," revision of 1905, and the supplements and amendments thereto; and be it further

Resolved, That the clerk of this board be directed to forward a copy of this resolution to the State Commissioner of Public Roads for his approval, and that upon the approval of the same by the State Commissioner of Public Roads, the County Road Committee be and is hereby authorized to cause a survey of said road, so to be improved, to be made, and plans, cross-sections and specifications of the work to be done on the same, to be prepared, and that the same be submitted to this board for its approval or rejection; and, if approved by this board, the same to be submitted to the State Commissioner of Public Roads for his approval or rejection.

Freeholder Wilbur moved the adoption of the resolution which on roll call was so ordered without dissent.

By Freeholder Adams.

Resolved, That the bills due to various parties for work and material furnished and done in connection with the building of the bridge over Cranford River, at Cranford, be and and the same are hereby referred to the committee in charge of said bridge, the engineer and County Attorney with power to adjust and audit the same, and when properly audited the County Collector be authorized to pay the same, and if ordered paid the same be charged to W. E. Warren, under his contract with the county for the building of said bridge.

Freeholder Swain moved the adoption of the resolution and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Adams.

Resolved, That the bill of W. R. Codington, County Attorney, for one hundred and fifty dollars ($150) for services rendered in suit of Eunice Ward vs. Board of Chosen Freeholders, be paid , and charged to the account of William E. Warren.

Freeholder Krouse moved the adoption of the resolution and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Resolved, That all committees in charge of work upon which contracts are awarded report to this board the name of contractor, amount of contract and date of award and terms of payment and name of engineer in charge of work; and be it further

Resolved, That no bill be paid for any work unless such report be made to the board.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Swain.

Resolved, That John Duffy and Conrad Wagner, special policemen employed by George B. Vanderpool, or such other men as he may employ from time to time in the like capacity, are hereby authorized and empowered to guard and patrol the new bridge recently erected over the Passiac River on Main street, Chatam, in the regular course of police duty; to keep order upon the said bridge; and to prevent all lounging, loitering, loud talking, or other disorderly conduct of any kind upon the said bridge or upon or about the approaches thereto, it being distinctly understood that neither of the counties or other municipalities bordering upon the river at that point, nor any other public board or body shall be called upon directly or indirectly, to pay the whole or any part of the xepense of such guarding of the said bridge; but that the salaries of such policemen shall be wholly paid by said George B. Vanderpool as heretofore. And it is further understood that such police service upon the said bridge may be discontinued at any time that said George B. Vanderpool may see fit.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freholder Adams.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the old wooden bridge on Hampton street, near Hampton Hall, at Cranford, and ascertain the condition of same with a view to either strengthening or rebuilding and report at the next regular meeting of this board with the probable cost of the work to be done.

On motion of Freeholder Jones the resolution was adopted and the Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Adams, Darby and Smith.

By Freeholder Krouse.

Whereas, the Baltimore and New York Railroad Company has declined to bear a proportionate share of the expense of elevating its tracks at the Edgar road crossing; and

Whereas, this board does not feel justified in incurring the entire expense necessary for the depression of the road and the elevation of the tracks at that point; therefore be it

Resolved, That the County Road Committee be, and is hereby empowered by and with the consent and approval of the State Commissioner of Public Roads to proceed with the completion of the macadamizing of said Edgar road at said point of grade, and to do all things necessary or required therein.

Freeholder Wilbur moved the adoption of the foregoing preamble and resolution, which was so ordered on roll call without dissent.

By Freeholder Wilbur.

Resolved, That when this board adjourns, it adjourns to meet on Friday, July 15, at 2.30 P. M.

O motion of Freeholder Gruener the resolution was adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Meisel.

Resolved, That the County Collector be, and hereby is, authorized to pay the bill of the Lehigh Contracting Company amounting to fifteen hundred and twenty-five dollars ($1,525) for balance due for work on bridge over Passaic River on the Morris Turnpike, Summit and Chatham, when the same shall have been properly audited by the committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved the adoption of the resolution which on roll call was so ordered without dissent.

By Freehlder Doane.

Resolved, That this board extend to County Collector N. R. Leavitt a vote of thanks for the handsome bound volumes of Jersey laws of 1910 presented by him to the various members.

On motion of Freeholder Jones the resolution was adopted without dissent.

At this time Freehlder Darby was excused.

Resolution by Freeholder Adams.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to examine the present bridge on Normandie place, Cranford, near Fourth street, the committee to report at the next meeting of this board as to the advisailbty of removing the present old bridge and constructing a new bridge in a different location on the said street, together with the probable cost of the work.

On motion of Freeholder Meisel the resolution was adopted and the Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Adams, Perry and Jones.

Sea Bathing.

Sea bathing is excellent for strengthening the system. It will very often prevent a disease from developing and restore the original vitality to a constitution which has been broken up by some dreadful malady.

There are some persons who are not strong enough to endure the shock of a cold sea bath, and for such as these a warm salt water bath taken at home will be very beneficial.

Temperature of bath waters:

A cold bath	60-70 degrees
A tepid bath	84-90 degrees
A warm bath	90-98 degrees
A hot bath	Above 98 degrees

The Refrigerator.

In building our pantry we had our refrigerator put up two feet from the floor, against the north wall of the house, says a housewife. This brings the refrigerator shelves where they are easy to reach and clean and makes an excellen dry, cool "lock-up" below for raisins, nuts, loaf sugar, chocolates, etc. A window at the back admits the ice in summer, leaving it open in winter makes ice unnecessary. There are separate steps to this window, so that the iceman is not obliged to track either kitchen or porch.

Historic Courthouse Sold.

The old Passaic County Courthouse was sold under the hammer Wednesday to Marcus Cohan for $30,000. The courthouse was erected in 1839 and was the scene of many noted trials.

Store Closes Saturdays at 12 Noon.
Remaining Open Friday Evenings Until 10 P. M.

AN ORDINANCE

Concerning the Construction and Repair of Sidewalks and Curbs.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That all sidewalks not already laid out under prior ordinances of said city shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street, and shall be raised, from the curbstone line to the side of the street adjoining in the proportion of one-half inch to one foot, unless otherwise specially directed by resolution of the Common Council.

Sec. 2. That all sidewalks of blue stone flagging or concrete of not more than four feet in width which shall hereafter be constructed under this ordinance shall be constructed so that the nearest edge of the blue stone flagging or concrete shall be the following distances from the curb line, that is to say: On sidewalks having a width of twenty feet or more between the property line and the curb line, a distance of eight feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of twelve feet or more and less than twenty feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of six feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of ten feet or more and less than twelve feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of four feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of less than ten feet between the property line and the curb line, said blue stone flagging or concrete shall be so laid that the side lines shall be at equal distances respectively from the property line and the curb line; provided, that in any case on application to the Common Council for that purpose, the Common Council may by resolution specially direct the distance which any blue stone flagging or concrete may be laid from the curb line as the Common Council shall deem to be for the best interests of the City.

All sidewalks of blue stone flagging or concrete of more than four feet in width which shall hereafter be constructed under this ordinance shall be constructed at such distance from the curb line as shall be designated by the Street Commissioner on application to him for that purpose, or may start from the curb line itself, if he shall so authorize.

Sec. 3. That all sidewalks in said city shall be well and sufficiently constructed, repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, so as to be even on the surface and so laid and constructed as freely to shed water and for the width of at least four feet free from turf, grass, weeds, stubble and other foreign substances.

Sec. 4. That within that portion of said city described as follows, viz:

Beginning at a point in the southeasterly side of Green Brook at the northeasterly side line of Leland Avenue and running thence along said line of Leland Avenue to the southeasterly side line of Berkeley Avenue produced; thence along said line produced and said line of Berkeley Avenue to the easterly side line of Denmark Road; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Ravine Road; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Charlotte Road produced; thence along said line produced and said line of Charlotte Road to the southeasterly side line of Belvidere Avenue; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Woodland Avenue; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Hillside Avenue; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Randolph Road; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Plainfield Avenue; thence along said line to the southeasterly side line of Sherman Avenue; thence along said line to the westerly City Line; thence along said line to the westerly side line of Evona Avenue; thence along said line to the southwesterly side line of Clinton Avenue; thence along said line to the southeasterly side of Green Brook; thence along the same to the place of beginning; also on both sides of East Front Street from Leland Avenue to Terrill Road; also on both sides of West Front Street from Clinton Avenue to the westerly City Line; also on both sides of North and South Avenues from Leland Avenue to Terrill Road; also on both sides of Central Avenue from Randolph Road to Elizabeth Street; also on both sides of Park Avenue from Randolph Road to the southerly City Line; also on both sides of Plainfield Avenue from Sherman Avenue to the southerly City Line, in all cases in which the sidewalks are not already constructed of blue stone flagging, or concrete, properly laid to the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, sidewalks shall be constructed, repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, composed either (1) of blue stone flagging smooth and even on the surface, and properly laid under the direction of the Street Commissioner, said blue stone flags to be not less than four feet long transversely to the length of the street, not less than two feet wide lengthwise of said street, and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part; or (2) of concrete, to be laid in conformity with the specifications for cement sidewalks as set forth in Standard Specifications for Portland Cement Sidewalks and Curbs, filed in the office of the City Clerk April 11th, 1910. The Street Commissioner shall give the correct lines and grades in all cases.

Sec. 5. Within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in Section 4, in all cases in which sidewalks are not already curbed with stone, concrete or similar substance, properly laid to the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, said sidewalks shall be curbed and the curbs repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, the curbs to be either (1) of blue stone not less than four inches thick in the thinnest part and sixteen inches in depth, smooth and even on the surface, or (2) of concrete, constructed in conformity with specifications for curbs as set forth in the Standard Specifications referred to in Section 4 of this ordinance, and laid under the direction of the Street Commissioner. That all return curbs shall have a radius of six feet, no piece to be less than three feet two inches in length. The Street Commissioner shall give the correct lines and grades in all cases.

Sec. 6. That within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in Section 4, all sidewalks and curbs shall be laid and maintained at the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, and where any sidewalk or curb or any part thereof is or shall become above or below grade so fixed or established, or is or shall become broken or uneven on the surface, such sidewalk or curb shall be repaired, put to grade, relaid or the broken parts replaced, as the case may require, at the expense of the abutting land owner.

Sec. 7. If after the passage of this ordinance the owner or owners of lands affected thereby shall neglect for the space of thirty days to make the improvement to the sidewalks thereof by this ordinance directed and required, the Common Council may cause such improvements to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner as authorized by the statute in such case made and provided. Before proceeding to make any such improvement, the Common Council shall cause notice of such contemplated improvement to be given to the owner or owners of any land thereby affected, which notice shall contain a description of the property affected, sufficiently definite in terms to identify the same, as well as a description of the required improvements and a notice that unless said improvement shall be completed within thirty days after the service thereof it is the intention of the City to make said improvement or cause the same to be made pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs, and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April 13th, 1908. Such notice shall be served as in said Act directed, and proof under oath of the publication or service of such notice shall be filed within two days thereafter in the office of the Collector of said City.

If such improvement shall not be completed within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith proceed to cause such improvement to be made by the City under his direction as authorized by this ordinance and said Act of the Legislature.

Sec. 8. When any improvement of the character hereinbefore mentioned shall be made by the City pursuant to said Act of the Legislature, a true and accurate account of the cost and expense thereof shall be kept by the Street Commissioner, and apportioned among the several properties improved in proportion to the frontage of their respective lands, and a true statement of such cost under oath or affirmation of said Street Commissioner shall forthwith be filed by him with the Collector of said City, whereupon said charge shall be and remain a first lien upon the lands and real estate thereby improved, and shall bear the same rate of interest as other assessments made under the laws governing said City, and shall be collected in the same manner as assessments are now collected under such laws, and in case of the non-payment of such charges the land and real estate subject to such liens may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments made under such laws.

Sec. 9. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.
Attest: J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

To vacate an unused street on property of Eric N. Erickson and others, extending from West Seventh Street to West Eighth Street, between Central Avenue and Division Street, and being a part of New Street.

Whereas, It is alleged and appears that the hereinafter described unused street, which is referred to and shown only by parallel lines, on a map made by Thomas B. Stillman, Clark Rogers, Nathan Rogers, and Nicholas Rogers, and which said map was duly filed in the office of the Clerk of Essex County, in the State of New Jersey, in the year Eighteen Hundren and Fifty-three, although dedicated as a street, by the filing of the aforesaid map, and although accepted by the City by Ordinance approved November first, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-one, (in connection with that part of New street lying northwesterly of West Seventh Street and extending to West Fifth Street), has never been opened to public use; and

Whereas, It appears that Delia D. Erickson, widow, Julius E. Erickson, Jean E. Hallock, Roger W. Erickson, Eric N. Erickson, Louise K. Green, Thomas H. Leggett, Bessie T. Hubbard and Ethel L. Titsworth, John W. Murray, Helen R. Swan, Frank L. Clark, Mary Horan, widow, Bridget T. Horan, Mary Horan, and Helena E. Horan are all of the owners of abutting lands on said street, and that all of the said owners of the abutting lands, together with Delia D. Erickson, as executrix of the last will and testament of Eric N. Erickson, deceased, William C. Hubbard, as executrix of the last will and testament of Sarah P. Potter, deceased, Frank J. Hubbard, the husband of the above named Bessie T. Hubbard, and John J. Swan, the husband of the above named Helen R. Swan, have applied to the Common Council of the City of Plainfield to vacate said street pursuant to Chapter One hundred and thirty-nine of the Laws of Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-seven; and

Whereas, the said street has not been opened to public use for more than twenty years since it was dedicated to public use; and

Whereas, It appears that the opening of said street to public use would involve a large expenditure of public funds, and that the opening of said street to public use would be of no public benefit; and

Whereas, All of the owners of the abutting lands on such unused street, which is sought to be vacated, have consented in writing to such vacation by filing in the office of the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield, such consent duly acknowledged as in the case of an acknowledgement to a conveyance of lands; and

Whereas, It appears that it is to the interests of the City that such street should be vacated:

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That the unused street hereinabove referred to and more particularly hereinafter described, and which is shown by parallel lines on a certain map made by Thomas B. Stillman, Clark Rogers, Nathan Rogers, and Nicholas Rogers, and filed in the year Eighteen Hundred and Fifty-three, in the County Clerk's (now Register's) Office of the County of Essex, in the State of New Jersey, and which street was accepted as a street by the City by an Ordinance approved November First, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-one, and which said street lying between Central Avenue and Division Street, and leading from West Seventh Street to West Eighth Street on properties of Delia D. Erickson, widow, Julius E. Erickson, Jean E. Hallock, Roger W. Erickson, and Eric N. Erickson, Louise K. Green, Thomas H. Leggett, Bessie T. Hubbard and Ethel L. Titsworth, John W. Murray, Helen R. Swan, Frank L. Clark, Mary Horan, widow, Bridget T. Horan, Mary Horan and Helena E. Horan, and being a part of New street, and is thus described: Beginning at a point in the southeasterly side line of West Seventh Street, distant along said side line southwesterly two hundred and thirty-seven feet (more or less) from the southwesterly side line of Central Avenue; thence southeasterly at right angles to West Seventh Street, or nearly so, along the northeasterly side line of New Street, as shown on the above mentioned map, a distance of four hundred and ninety-five feet (more or less) to the northwesterly side line of West Eighth Street; thence with the northwesterly side line of West Eighth Street, southwesterly fifty feet; thence parallel with the first course herein northwesterly four hundred and ninety-five feet (more or less) to the southwesterly side line of West Seventh Street; thence along said side line of West Seventh Street northeasterly fifty feet to the beginning, be and the same is hereby vacated, and relieved of the public use and burden, pursuant to the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.
Attest: J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Permanent Improvement of Thornton Avenue with Durable Macadam Pavement.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Thornton Avenue from Park Avenue to Hillside Avenue shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement for the full width of thirty feet, that is to say, fifteen feet on each side of the center line thereof, the said durable macadam pavement to be laid and constructed in strict conformity with the specifications particularly set forth in the ordinance of said City entitled "An Ordinance to authorize the issuing of municipal bonds for the purpose of obtaining money from the sale thereof for the permanent improvement of streets and highways of the City of Plainfield, pursuant to Chapter 200 of the Laws of 1898, during the year 1910," approved June 7, 1910; and all work shall be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder, the necessary funds provided, commissioners to estimate and assess benefits appointed, assessments made, and all proceedings in the premises be had and taken in strict conformity with the provisions of said last mentioned ordinance (the provisions of which ordinance are hereby referred to and made a part hereof), and the acts of the Legislature therein referred to.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.
Attest: J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

HERE AND THERE.

In sharp contrast to divorce court bickerings stands an Old World romance revealed in an interesting human document, the will of Arthur J. Munby, a London barrister and poet, who recently died, aged 81.

He left about $130,000 and his will reveals that he was not a bachelor, as his relatives and the world at large supposed, but that many years ago he married his cook, Hannah Cullwick, who, he says in his will, "has been for forty-five years and upwards beloved by me with a pure and honorable love, and not otherwise, and she, the said Hannah, had during all that time been as faithful and loving and devoted to me as ever woman was to man, and whereas after vainly trying to explain this state of things to my father I married the said Hannah (she being then in my service) publicly in the presence of all her kindred who could be got together at the parish church of Clerkenwell, in the county of Middlesex, on the 14th January, 1873.

"And whereas there is no issue of the said marriage and whereas, notwithstanding her said marriage, the said Hannah has always refused and still refuses to have the position which as my wife she might and could have had and had always insisted and still insists on being my servant as well as my wife, her one grievance being that she cannot be my only servant; and whereas, owing chiefly to this noble and unselfish resolve of hers, I have never been able to make known my said marriage to my family or to the world at large, and the same is known only to her kindred and three of my most intimate college friends."

Mrs. Munby disliked London and preferred to live in the country, and her husband spent as much time as possible with her. She refused all presents, cared for neither jewelry nor social recognition, would take nothing but her wages, $25 a month, and always wore the regulation English hired girl's cap and gown. Out of her pay she had saved $1,000, which she gave to her husband to do with as he thought best for her.

The couple worshipped each other. Mrs. Munby died a few months before her husband. There were no children, and her tombstone at Shifnal records that beneath it lies: "The body of Hannah, the beloved wife and servant of Arthur Joseph Munby, and concludes the pure and honorable love of thirty-seven years."

THE CARVING KNIFE.

There is a great deal in knowing how to sharpen the carving knife. The steel should be held in the left hand, which should be on a level with the elbow, pointed toward the right shoulder and the knife held almost perpendicularly in the right hand.

The hilt of the knife's edge should be placed at the top of the steel and the blade drawn downward the whole length of both steel and knife, first on one side and then on the other, so that the point of the knife finishes at the hilt of the steel.

The blade should be almost flat on the steel with the back slightly raised, but with only the edge touching it.

Handy Ways of a Husband

"When you have time, George," said Mrs. Andrews one evening, "I wish you would put up that shelf in the kitchen."

"It is so hard to do anything after dark," sighed her husband. "If you can wait till Saturday afternoon I'll do it then."

"That's what you said last week," Mrs. Andrews remonstrated. "I waited till Saturday and then you said you would put up the shelf when you finished reading the paper. By that time you had forgotten it."

"Well, then, I suppose it's up to me to do it now," he said. "Where's the shelf?"

"Out in the kitchen. Do you need help?"

"You needn't stir," he said, generously. "I can do it, all right."

In a few minutes after he disappeared his wife heard his apologetic tones. "I'm sorry to bother you," he said, "but where do you want that shelf?"

His wife could not count the number of times she had told him she wanted it put up over the sink, but she went patiently and indicated the place with her finger.

"Oh, seems to me you did say something about that," he acknowledged. "It won't take me a minute, so you needn't bother to wait when you're so tired."

She went back to her sewing and had taken several stitches before he called again: "Say, do you know where the mischief the hammer's gone to?"

"It is in the tool drawer," she answered. "That is, unless you've had it since I put it away."

"It isn't there," he cried, triumphantly. "I've already looked there."

Mrs. Andrews went out to the kitchen and hunted for the missing hammer.

"It beats all how things get lost in this house," he said. "That girl is the limit. It's sheer carelessness."

"That's what I've always said," Mrs. Andrews agreed, sweetly, as she fished the hammer out from under the stove. "Here it is."

The husband had the grace to laugh.

"That time I was stung," he said. "I used the hammer this morning to pound a nail in my shoe and I remember my foot struck it as I left the room, so I must have kicked it under the stove. Where are the nails?"

"Aren't screws better?"

"Screws!" he exclaimed. "In that wood? Nothing but long nails would hold that shelf. I haven't the slightest idea where there are any."

Mrs. Andrews found the nails and went back to her work.

"Alice!" her husband called presently. "Would you mind holding the shelf while I pound?"

She went out again and held it while he hammered away for dear life. She was also properly sympathetic when the nails bent.

"There seems to be a confounded beam in the way," he said. "I'll have to bore holes first. You go and sit down and I'll call you when I need help."

He was as good as his word, for she was scarcely seated when she was summoned again.

"Do you know where the bit is?" he asked. "I've been hunting an age for it."

She opened the tool drawer and took it out.

"Well, that beats all!" he exclaimed. "I looked there. It must have been under that box. It's very hard to find anything with the box of nails in there."

She had sewed a full seam when she looked up and saw him standing in the doorway.

"You were quiet," she said. "I didn't hear you do much hammering."

"I had to give it up," he told her. "Those nails are worthless and I knocked quite a bit of plaster down trying to make them stay in. I'll get better nails and put it up some other time."

When his wife had taken care of the tools and sent for the girl to sweep up the plaster she finished her sewing without so much as a reference to the shelf. Indeed, it was not mentioned again for six weeks. Then Andrews spoke of it himself.

"Great Scott!" he cried, aghast. "I'll put up that shelf at once. I never thought of it till I put my hand into my pocket just now and found the nails I bought."

"Never mind," she said. "You are pretty tired to-night, and anyhow Bertha and I put up that shelf with screws six weeks ago."

Avoiding Infection of Milk.

In order to eliminate all danger of infection from dirty milk bottles, and to place the distribution of whole milk on a strictly sanitary basis, the New York milk committee, in its seven infants' milk depots, is using for the first time in New York city a single service paper milk bottle, which it instructs its patrons to throw away as soon as it is emptied of milk.—Scientific American.

Miller Brothers contend that the champion roughriders and horsebreakers of the world are enrolled under their standard.

"We carry a score of our bucking horses, and, in turn, we challenge any townsman to ride them. They were born with a spirit of evil combat and unrelenting resistance to human efforts at subjugation. The daily struggle of our own cowboys to temporarily subdue the brutes provides moments which stir the blood and fire the heart of every beholder. They are 'buckers' by nature, whose hatred for bridle and saddle increases with age and association. Unhampered, they are docile. With the appearance of strap and rope they become demons incarnate, a menace to the life and limb of the human being who approaches and indifferent, in the savage passion which dominates them to their own fate."

A TRICK IN FENCING

One Highly Distressing to an Accomplished Swordsman.

TURNS A DUEL INTO A FARCE.

Used by a Weak or a Timid Opponent It Renders His Adversary Practically Helpless—A Case of Two Playing at the Same Game.

A long and interesting chapter might be written on the humors of duels which never came off or which in some way fell short of deserving the name. A case which occurred a few years ago in Paris, the particular home and harvest field of the habitual duelist, merits mention.

A peaceable looking gentleman was walking down one of the boulevards with a lady on his arm when out of a cafe sprang a man, who dealt him a violent kick. The victim turned, only to meet the horrified apologies of the aggressor, who begged to assure him that it was wholly a mistake in identity. Instead of insisting upon an exchange of cards and the other customary forms, the kicked man answered, with much warmth, but admirable self control: "I cannot, sir, accept your expression of regret as sufficient. Your action may have been a mistake, as you say, but acquaintances of mine may have witnessed it and will go away and spread the news that I have submitted to an insult without avenging it. I must therefore and instantly slap your face with equal publicity." The other most becomingly assented, the first sufferer administering a ringing blow on his ear, and the affair ended with entire satisfaction on both sides.

Weak or timid fencers are sometimes taught by their masters to keep a more skillful antagonist busy by fixing the sword in one position, aimed straight at his sword hand, and then not moving except to retreat when pressed too hard. It is highly distressing to an accomplished swordsman to have to face a learner so instructed, for it means a great outlay of energy and wind to little purpose.

Comte de Dion once thus chased a retreating adversary across plowed fields for a mile and a half and finally under the wheel of a cab for the poor satisfaction of giving him a slight prod in the back. Dr. Clemenceau in his famous duel with M. Deschanel, after a swift and wearisome pursuit, halted, shouldered his rapier like a walking stick and strolled back to his original place, throwing the contemptuous remark over his shoulder, "And now, monsieur, I will await you here."

Catulle Mendes had a similar run after Lugne Poe through the forest of St. Germain, which he ended by flinging his own sword into the bushes, with the angry exclamation, "I am willing to die from exhaustion by the roadside, if need be, but not from running after a poltroon."

A yet funnier incident was that which occurred in Toulouse, where a lawyer of some note named Cazeneuve was called out by a landed proprietor whom he had offended by a speech in court. He repaired at once to a fencing master, as he knew nothing whatever about handling a sword. This teacher gave him the usual advice about keeping his adversary at arm's length with the poised and immovable rapier, but strongly enjoined him not to retreat. It so happened that the landed proprietor, being equally ignorant, applied to the same master for instruction. The master, who was somewhat of a wag, gave him the lawyer's lesson in duplicate.

When the two men met and their seconds had duly placed them a long and tedious stillness ensued. For more than five minutes each foeman stood with his sword arm extended at full length, waiting for the other to advance. Then the seconds intervened, claiming that both had proved themselves men of honor and courage and that nothing further was necessary but to shake hands and be reconciled.

And this recalls the occasion when Lieutenant Randolph Ridgely of our army while in the Mexican war was sought by two young officers who had quarreled and each of whom wished the lieutenant for his second. It was finally arranged that he should act as second for both. On the field, where the adversaries were armed with shotguns, Ridgely measured off a line of ten paces and placed them respectively at its two termini, cocked his own revolver and announced that he would give all the orders himself and in his own way and that he would shoot down whichever of his principals disobeyed him in the slightest particular.

Then came the orders, very deliberately uttered: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Take aim!" They took careful aim and waited almost breathlessly for some minutes for the command to fire. It never came. Instead came the orders: "Present arms!" "Carry arms!" "Shoulder arms!" "Right about face!" "Front!" "Forward march!"

They recognized his commands as given in deadly earnest and knew that it would be instantly fatal to rebel. He kept them marching till they reached his tent. There he halted them and bade them stand at parade rest till they had listened to a lecture on the folly of dueling which fairly made their ears ring. But he seasoned his dose of rebuke with a few words of praise for the soldierly mettle they had shown in facing each other's gun without flinching, and the two men became fast friends from that hour.—New York Post.

QUESTIONS IN COURT

A Series That Moved an Observer to Turn Critic.

SOME GEMS HE PRESERVED.

The Lawyers Didn't Seem to See the Ridiculous Phase of the Inquiry, but It Loomed Large to the Man With an Idea That the Law Is Solemn.

A man who spent several days in a courtroom listening to the examination of veniremen was struck with the reflection that some shining legal minds would not be unduly dimmed by the infusion of a few of the principles of logic. The time taken up by attorneys in drawing the conclusion that a juror who lives at a given address makes his home there and then referring the conclusion to the juror for confirmation has not been computed, but any one mathematically inclined may figure it out by multiplying the following examples by any handy large round number:

"What is your occupation?"

"I am a switchman."

"On a railroad?"

The obvious answer which the juror's awe of his surroundings prevents him from making would be, of course, "No, in an ice cream parlor."

"Judge," said a juror, "I would like to be excused from service. When summoned I was making arrangements for my brother-in-law's funeral."

"Is your brother-in-law dead?" inquired the court.

It developed that he was.

"Now, Mr. Juror," came another question, "what is your age?"

"Forty-four."

"Forty-four years old?"

That is exactly what the juror meant. The lawyer guessed right the very first time.

Here is another flash that came to one of the attorneys. "Where do you live?" he asked.

"At 4416 Blank street."

"You reside there, do you?"

Once in awhile there is a funny answer which isn't to be wondered at considering the power of suggestion.

"Are you married?"

"Yes."

"Any family?"

"Two."

But the balance is well on the lawyers' side. Witness this: The questioner had asked if a juror was related in any way to any of the principals or witnesses in the case.

"I am a brother-in-law of Mr. Blank, one of the witnesses," was the reply.

"You married his sister, then?"

He had.

"Let me ask you now, Mr. Juror, have you formed any opinion about the guilt or innocence of this defendant?"

"I have."

"Is it a fixed opinion or is it one that could be changed by evidence?"

"It could be changed if the evidence were strong enough."

"Then you would not call it a definite opinion?"

"No."

"It is a vague opinion, then?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mr. Juror, follow me closely, if you please. You say your opinion is a vague one and not definitely fixed. Now, then, if that is the case and you went into that jury box and listened to the evidence adduced from that witness stand and heard the law expounded by the judge from that bench, would it not be possible for you to lay aside that opinion and concur in a verdict warranted by the evidence and the instructions of the court?"

"Yes."

The attorney, having received the same answer to his long question as to his short one, is perfectly satisfied and throws a triumphant look at his colleague, which says, "I knew I could get it out of him if I kept at him long enough."

Here is another astonishing deduction: A juror took the stand dressed in a blue uniform with brass buttons. Around his belt was strapped a money changer. The examining attorney looked at him long and searchingly and then said in a tone which admitted of no trifling:

"You are a street car conductor?"

It was the same attorney who forced this confession from another juror:

"What is your occupation?"

"I'm a bookkeeper for Blank & Co."

"You keep books in the office?"

Unmasked, the bookkeeper broke down and made a clean breast of it.

"Now, Mr. Juror, be good enough to state how old you are."

"Fifty-six years."

"How long have you resided in this state?"

"Fifteen years."

"Then you were not born here?"

The trapped man admitted the truth.

Here is another:

"Were you born in Missouri?"

"No, sir."

"Oh, I see. Then you moved here from some other state." And then in a "come-come-don't-delay-the-court" tone of voice, "Where did you come from?"

"Chicago."

"Chicago, Ill.?"—Kansas City Times.

Unhappy Man!

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS By MAGNUS G. KETTNER
COPYRIGHT 1906 by BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

He felt the dash of the water in his face and it put new life into him. Somebody had raised him to a sitting posture and was supporting him there while a second person bound a cloth about his head. He opened his eyes and the light of day shot into them like a stinging, burning charge of needle-points, and he closed them again with a sharp cry of pain. That second's glance had shown him that it was a woman who was binding his head. He had not seen her face. Beyond her he had caught a half-formed vision of many people and the glistening edge of the sea, and as he lay with closed eyes the murmur of voices came to him. The support at his back was taken away, slowly, as if the person who held him feared that he would fall. Nathaniel stiffened himself to show his returning strength and opened his eyes again. This time the pain was not so great. A few yards away he saw a group of people and among them were women; still farther away, so far that his brain grew dizzy as he looked, there was a black moving crowd. He was among the wounded. The Mormon women were here. Down there along the shore—among the dead—had assembled the population of St. James.

A strange sickness overpowered him and he sank back against his supporter. A cool hand passed over his face. It was a soothing, gentle touch—the hand of the woman. He felt the sweep of soft hair against his cheek—a breath whispering in his ear.

"You will be better soon."

His heart stood still.

"You will be better—"

Against his rough cheek there fell the soft pressure of a woman's lips.

Nathaniel pulled himself erect, every drop of blood in him striving for the mastery of his body, his vision, his strength. He tried to turn, but strong arms seized him from behind. A man's voice spoke to him, a man's strength held him. In an agony of appeal Marion's name burst from his lips.

"Sh-h-!" warned the voice behind him. "Are you crazy?"

The arms relaxed their hold and Nathaniel dragged himself to his knees. The woman was gone. As far as he could see there were people—scores of them, hundreds of them—multiplied into thousands and millions as he looked, until there was only a black cloud about him. He staggered to his feet and a strong hand kept him from falling while his brain slowly cleared. The millions and thousands and hundreds of people dissolved themselves into the day until only a handful was left where he had seen multitudes. He turned his face weakly to the man beside him.

"Where did she go?" he asked.

It was a boyish face into which his pleading eyes gazed, a face white with the strain of battle, reddened a little on one cheek with a smear of blood, and there was a startled, frightened look in it that did not come of the strife that had passed.

"Who? What are you talking about?"

"The woman," whispered Nathaniel. "The woman—Marion—who kissed—me—"

The young fellow's hand gripped his arm in a sudden fierce clutch.

"You've been dreaming!" he exclaimed in a threatening voice. "Shut up!" He spoke the words loudly. Then quickly dropping his voice to a whisper he added: "For God's sake don't betray her! They saw her with us—everybody knows that it was the king's wife with you!"

The king's wife! Nathaniel was too weak to analyze the words beyond the fact that they carried the dread truth of his fears deep into his soul. Who would have come to him but Marion? Who else would have kissed him? It was her voice that had whispered in his ear—the thrill of her hand that had passed over his face.

Strang Was Alive.

And this man had said that she was the wife of the king! He heard the voices of other men near him but did not understand what they were saying. He knew that after a moment there was a man on each side of him holding him by the arms, and mechanically he moved his legs, knowing that they wanted him to walk. They did not guess how weak he was—how he struggled to keep from becoming too great a weight on their hands. Once or twice they stopped in their agonizing climb up the hill. On its top the cool sea air swept into Nathaniel's face and it was like water to a parched throat.

After a time—it seemed a day of terrible work and pain to him—they came to the streets of the town, and in a half conscious sort of way he cursed at the rabble trailing at their heels. They passed close to the temple, dirt and blood and a burning torment shutting the vision of it from his eyes, and beyond this there was another crowd. An aisle opened for them, as it had opened for others ahead of them. In front of the jail they stopped. Nathaniel's head hung heavily upon his breast and he made no effort to raise it. All ambition and desire had left him, all desire but one, and that was to drop upon the ground and lie there for endless, restful years. What consciousness was left in him was ebbing swiftly; he saw black, fathomless night about him and the earth seemed slipping from under his feet.

A voice dragged him back into life—a voice that boomed in his ears like rolling thunder and set every fiber in him quivering with emotion. He drew himself erect with the involuntary strength of one mastering the last spasm of death and as they dragged him through the door he saw there within an arm's reach of him

The great voice rumbled in his ears again.

"Take that man to the dungeon!"

CHAPTER X.

Winnsome's Verdict of Death.

The voice—the condemning words—followed Nathaniel as he staggered on between his two guards; it haunted him still as the cold chill of the rotting dungeon walls struck in his face; it remained with him as he stood swaying in the thick gloom—the voice rumbling in his ears, the words beating against his brain until the shock of them sickened him, and he stretched out his arms and there fell from him such a cry as had never tortured his lips before.

Strang was alive! He had left the spark of life in him, and the woman who loved him had fanned it back into full flame.

Strang was alive! And Marion—Marion was his wife!

The voice of the king taunted him from the black chaos that hid the dungeon walls. The words struck at him, filling his head with shooting pain, and he tottered back and sank to the ground to get away from them. They followed, and that vengeful leer of the king was behind them, urging them on, until they beat his face into the sticky earth, and smothered him into what he thought was death.

There came rest after that, a long silent rest. When Nathaniel slowly climbed up out of the ebon shadows again the first consciousness that came to him was that the word-demons had stopped their beating against his brain and that he no longer heard the voice of the king. His relief was so great that he breathed a restful sigh. Something touched him then. Great God! were they coming back? Were they still there—waiting—waiting—

It was a wonderfully familiar voice that spoke to him.

"Hello there, Nat! Want a drink?"

He gulped eagerly at the cool liquid that touched his lips.

"Neil," he whispered.

"It's me, Nat. They chucked me in with you. Hell's hole, isn't it?"

Nathaniel sat up, Neil's strong arm at his back. There was a light in the room now and he could see his companion's face, smiling at him encouragingly. The sight of it was like an elixir to him. He drank again and new life coursed through him.

"Yes—hell of a hole!" he repeated drowsily. "Sorry for you—Neil—" and he seemed to sleep again.

Neil laughed as he wiped his companion's face with a wet cloth.

"I'm used to it, Nat. Been here before," he said. "Can you get up? There's a bench over here—not long enough to stretch you out on or I would have made you a bed of it, but it's better than this mud to sit on."

He put his arms about Nathaniel and helped him to his feet. For a few moments the wounded man stood without moving.

"I'm not very bad, I guess," he said, taking a slow step. "Where is the seat, Neil? I'm going to walk to it. What sort of a bump have I got on the head?"

HUMOROUS QUIPS.

The Small Town Lochinvar.

Oh, young Lochinvar has come back from the east!
His hat is turned up, and his trousers are creased.
Like the stars of the morning his shoes are resplendent,
And his coat from his trousers is quite independent.
No matinee idol or vaudeville star
Was e'er decorated like young Lochinvar.

We sent him to school in a ready made suit,
The girls of the village pronounced him quite cute.
But now he is wearing a horse blanket vest,
And a barber pole shirt is surrounding his chest.
He frightened the team when he stepped from the car,
For the town had seen nothing like young Lochinvar.

He's wearing the pin of the Alpha Phi Delt.
Twelve colors run riot the length of his belt.
His hair is brushed back in a doormat design,
And a pair of near diamonds effulgently shine.
Of this town's attractions the greatest by far
Is the sis-boom-ah raiment of young Lochinvar.

—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Former Charge.

A darky was brought before Judge Hynds recently for vagrancy. The judge recognized his face as one he had seen before.

"What is your name?" asked the judge.

"Moses Quick," answered the darky.

"You have been up here before, haven't you, Moses?"

"Yas, sah."

"What was the charge?"

Moses stopped and reflected. Then, without fear or hesitation, he answered, "Seben dollahs an' six bits, yo honoh, as neah as I can recollec'."

Sentence has been suspended.—Laramie (Wyo.) Boomerang.

The Absentminded Scotchman.

The Scotchman could not find his ticket. On the conductor's second round it was still missing. "What's that in your mouth?" he asked. Sure enough, there was the missing ticket. The conductor punched it and went his way. "Ah, weel," said Sandy in reply to his fellow passengers' banter, "I'm nae sae absentminded as ye wad think. Yon was a vera auld ticket, an' I was jist suckin' aff the date."—Success Magazine.

The Killers.

Brady (referring to increased cost of living)—Faith, it's hard to live nowadays, Stephen.

Grady—'Tis that, Jawn, an' I read somewhere that the manyfacturers ixpect to sell twice as many this year as they did lasht.

Brady (bewildered)—What are ye talkin' about, anyway?

Grady—Auttymobiles, iv coorse!—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Southern Travel.

"Does that mark on the time table that looks like a horn denote a flag station?" asked the man at the railway ticket office window.

"No," replied the ticket seller; "that means that the train usually stops there because there is a cow on the track!"—Yonkers Statesman.

An Unusual Occurrence.

Owlett—I had an awful time thinking up an excuse to give my wife when I got home from the club last night.

Ascum—Did she demand one?

Owlett—Of course. I got home so early it piqued her curiosity.—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Question of Pronunciation.

Two little girls were discussing the pronunciation of a certain word. One of them quoted "Webster on the bridge" as her authority.

The other scornfully replied:

"On the bridge! H'm! It's Webster under the bridge."—Harper's Weekly.

Mercenary.

Elsie (aged seven)—Ma, I want a nickel.

Mother—What for, dear?

Elsie—I asked Willie Jones to play we're getting married, and he says he won't do it unless I have a dowry.—Boston Transcript.

The Tourist's Method.

"Brown is like the rest of the tourists."

"Why so?"

"He spent three weeks in Europe and three years boasting about it afterward."—Detroit Free Press.

Then He'd Get His.

Mrs. Peckem—Henry, what punishment should be meted out to a man who proposes to a woman and then refuses to marry her?

Peckem—He should be compelled to marry her.—Chicago News.

A Great Event.

Frost—Did you have a hard time getting theater seats?

Snow—Yes, indeed. When I finally secured two I had it announced in all the society columns.—New York Times.

Her Estimate of Books.

"What books have helped you most?"

"I don't rely on any books," replied Mrs. Trumper. "There are some good bridge whist manuals, but experience is the best teacher."—Washington Star.

Cruel Comeback.

"I'm doing my best to get ahead."

"Well, heaven knows you need one," assented Dollie.—Toledo Blade.

AN ORDINANCE

To License, Regulate and Prohibit Shows and Exhibitions.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That no person of corporation shall, for any price, gain, or reward, exhibit or cause to be exhibited in the City of Plainfield any traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, or give or have or cause to be given or had any theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or have or make, or cause to be had or made, any exhibition of whatsoever nature, or maintain or conduct or cause to be maintained or conducted any theatre, opera house, music hall, or other place of public entertainment, without first obtaining a license therefor, to be granted by the Mayor, as herein prescribed; provided, however, that the provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to a concert or entertainment given for charitable or benevolent purposes.

Sec. 2. That no owner, occupant or other person or persons having the possession or care of any house, building or room or any lot of land within the City of Plainfield, shall suffer or permit any such traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or any exhibition of whatsoever nature such as are mentioned in the preceding section of this ordinance, to be exhibited, acted, shown forth or performed for any price, gain or reward, in or upon his, her or their said house, building or room or lot of land, unless the party or parties so causing such traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or any exhibition of whatsoever nature as aforesaid, shall first obtain such license in the manner herein prescribed.

Sec. 3. That the license fees to be charged for such licenses respectively shall be as follows, to-wit:

For a license for a circus with or without a menagerie the sum of not exceeding Two Hundred Dollars for each day;

For a license for a concert the sum of not exceeding Ten Dollars for each concert;

For a license for a theatre, opera house, or music hall, the sum of One Hundred Dollars a year; and for a license for any other place or public entertainment, the sum of not exceeding Twenty-five Dollars a year; and each such license for a theatre, opera house, music hall, or other place of public entertainment, shall expire on the first day of January following the date of the granting of such license;

For any moving picture show or entertainment, the sum of not exceeding Ten Dollars for each day;

For any exhibition or entertainment for which the amount of the license fee is not herein specifically fixed, the fee to be charged for such license shall not exceed the sum of Twenty-five Dollars for each such exhibition or entertainment.

Sec. 4. That the Mayor shall have the authority to determine the amount of any license fee within the limits aforesaid, and to decide whether a license is required under the terms of the preceding section when there is doubt upon application, and also authority to grant or withold a license. Upon the Mayor deciding to grant any license, and the payment of the license fee to the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield or the Chief of Police, and the production of his receipt therefor to the Mayor, there shall be given to the applicant a license which shall state the name of the person licensed and the purpose and length of time or number of exhibitions or entertainments for which the license is granted. The Mayor shall also have authority to revoke any such license upon proof to his satisfaction after reasonable notice to the person or corporation holding such license and reasonable opportunity for him or it to be heard, that such licensed person or corporation, or any person acting on his or its behalf has given or caused to be given any exhibition of any nature whatever of an immoral nature or tendency, or in violation of any law of the State or any ordinance of the City, and after such revocation such person or corporation shall be deemed to be not licensed and be and remain liable under this ordinance in the same manner as if such license had never been granted.

Sec. 5. No moving picture show shall be given at any time or in any place within the said City without the written permission first obtained by the Mayor, in which shall be set forth the time and place at which such moving picture show may be given.

Sec. 6. That any person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall on conviction be subject to a fine not exceeding One Hundred Dollars or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days or both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 7. That the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance relating to shows and exhibitions," approved July 9, 1869; the ordinance to amend said ordinance, approved November 10, 1884; the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license, regulate and prohibit shows and exhibitions," approved December 8, 1897; the ordinance entitled "A Supplement to an ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance to license, regulate and prohibit shows and exhibitions,' approved December 8, 1897," approved July 12, 1898; and all other ordinances and parts of ordinances which conflict with any of the provisions of this ordinance be and the same are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor, July 19, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.
Attest: J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

FAVOR WOODROW WILSON

Democratic Club's Resolution Endorses Him for Governor's Chair.

WOULD BE IDEAL CANDIDATE.

Republican Administrations, Both Federal and State, Are the Object of Their Censure.

Condemning the Republican party for its administration of affairs in both the State and the nation, the Plainfield Democratic Club last night passed a set of resolutions which concluded with an endorsement of Dr. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, as a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. A. H. Atterbury, a former mayoralty nominee of the party, in introducing the resolutions attacked Bryan and Bryanism and spoke of the many qualities possessed by Dr. Wilson that make him an ideal candidate for the governor's chair.

After eulogizing Doctor Wilson, Mr. Atterbury said: "While we are about it we might just as well have done with Bryan and Bryanism. Bryan is a dead cock politically and must be eliminated from further consideration. It is therefore best to let the past be buried in oblivion and begin anew the struggle for the people's rights and maintain them when we have attained this object."

In speaking of Dr. Wilson, Mr. Atterbury said that "the Doctor is an ideal man, head and shoulders above any candidate of any party nominated in the past twenty years. His election to the executive chair will appease the disgruntled Republicans as well as the recalcitrant Democrats. A victory for Wilson will put an entirely new aspect on the political affairs of the State and will satisfy everybody. He will make the best Governor New Jersey has ever had," he concluded.

William Taggart was the only new member elected at last night's meeting and the attendance was small, but seven members being present. President Leroy J. Ellis was in the chair. Following is the resolution adopted:

"Whereas, the Payne Tariff Bill and other acts passed by the Republican Congress show that the Republican party is controlled by special interests and has little consideration for the welfare of the whole people; and

"Whereas, public expenditure in our own State has run into wild extravagance and the party in power has no desire to restrict; and

"Whereas, we believe that these conditions are recognized by thousands of independent voters who feel the effect of Republican extravagance in heavier taxes and increased cost of living, and that these men would be glad to vote for a Democratic candidate of unquestioned character and ability;

"Resolved, That we endorse the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson for Governor of New Jersey.

"Mr. Wilson is an ideal man for the position; a scholar of world-wide reputation, an administrator of great experience, a man of absolute integrity, of unquestioned courage, and of energy, skill and wisdom in the administration of practical affairs.

"As a candidate he would appeal strongly to the voters and if elected he would administer the office in a way to bring honor to himself, and credit to our party, and great gain to the whole community."

To Settle Bird Estate.

Twenty-five Westfield business men have received subpoenas to appear in the Hunterdon County Orphans' Court in Flemington, on July 25 for the purpose of giving information in connection with the accounting in the Bird estate. SIR. DAVID T. KENNEY VISITS POPE PIUS X.

Sir David T. Kenney of this city, had a private audience with Pope Pius X, yesterday, according to a dispatch from Rome. He thanked the holy father for appointing him as a papal chamberlain, which honor was conferred on the Plainfielder several months ago in recognition of his good works for the Roman Catholic Church. Among his benevolences was the gift of the site of Mt. St. Mary's College on the slope of the Watchung mountain back of Scotch Plains.

Monsignor Kennedy introduced the papal knight to the Pope.

The Pope also gave private audiences to the Right Rev. Cornelius van de Ven, bishop of Natchitoches, La.; the Right Rev. Patrick James Donahue, bishop of Wheeling, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenney are making a trip through Europe and will not return until late in September.

JUSTICES CAN'T HEAR LANDLORD-TENANT CASES

Justices of the peace throughout Union County are sorely vexed over the enactment of a law at the last session of the Legislature which deprives them of the authority of disposing of landlord and tenant cases. The peace justices formerly derived considerable in the way of costs of court in the disposition of such cases, but which, in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 137 of the laws of 1910, must now be heard in the District Court of the county.

The justices of the peace declare that the removal of landlord and tenant cases to the District Court for disposition has added a hardship to the householders. The expense, which the justices say never amounted to more than $3 or $4 when they had authority to act, will now be more than $10, as it is necessary to have a lawyer in such cases, besides the time and expense of making a trip to Elizabeth.

FAREWELL SERVICES FOR SWEDISH PASTOR

A large crowd was on hand at the Salvation Army tent last night to participate in the farewell services to the Rev. Theodore Englund, of the Swedish Evangelical church. He has been more or less interested in the army's work ever since he came to Plainfield eight years ago and during that time he has made a host of friends, all of whom were present last night.

Assisting Mr. Englund in conducting the services was the Swedish church string band and choir, whose singing and string music was well rendered and received much applause. A number of their selctions were rendered in Swedish, while the rest of them were rendered in English. Mr. Englund's farewell address was made in English. He leaves to accept a similar position in Fitchburg, Mass.

Miss Anna Johansen sang a solo in Swedish. Captain Hewitt introduced the departing minister.

UNION GAMBLING DEN CLOSED, SAYS SHERIFF.

Sheriff Kirkland, of Union County, said a reporter yesterday that the first intimation he had of gambling in the county was when he read the story in a newspaper. The matter had never been brought to his notice and he was surprised when he read the account.

He could not see that anything could be done by him now in the matter, as he was informed that since the newspaper expose, the gamblers had disappeared. The place where they held forth had three times been refused a license by Judge Atwater.

GOTHAM--JERSEY BRIDGE

Engineers Begin Boring for Proposed Inter-State Structure.

THE SITE IS NOT SELECTED.

Bergen, Passaic and Hudson Counties Contending for the Much Needed Span Across North River.

Borings were started Wednesday in the bed of the North river by the Phoenix Construction Company to determine the site of the proposed bridge between New York and New Jersey. The Phoenix company has the contract, but just where the bridge is to be has to be decided.

They began the borings at a point opposite West Seventy-ninth street, New York, and about one mile north of Fort Lee. This is one of the two sites decided upon by the commissioners for boring investigation, the other being at 109th street. Data have already been obtained at Fifty-ninth street and the choice lies among three sites.

The factors that will enter into a decision are the width of the river at the various points, the cost of condemnation proceedings, engineering facilities of approaches, traffic facilities beyond the approaches and the condition of the river bed. Rough estimates of the cost at the proposed sites, exclusive of approach condemnations, are $10,000,000 for the 179th street site, $14,000,000 for the 109th street site, and $21,000,000 for a bridge at Fifty-seventh street, New York.

In the counties of Bergen, Passaic and Hudson they have begun to get worked up over what may happen to real estate values as the bridge gets under way and to guess upon the site that will be chosen. If 109th street is chosen all three counties will be reached and share about alike in benefits. If the 179th street site is adopted Bergen and Passaic will divide most of the benefits, while if Fifty-seventh street site is chosen, residents of those two counties say they will be frozen out and that Hudson will hog most of the good the bridge will do. Bergen awoke early last April and its chosen freeholders voted $5,000 toward defraying the expenses of the commission in making the necesary boring. Then Hudson hurried around through some of her prominent citizens, and got the commission to investigate the 109th street location as a sort of compromise.

At the present time the interstate commerce commission is inclined to favor the 179th street site. It is pointed out that the land on both sides of the river at this point presents a sharp drop at tide water; that this is the narowest part of the river in the vicinity of New York city and that the land damages would be small on either side. The approaches would be short on New York side, reaching the terminus over Fort Washington Park, and from New Jersey reaching the terminus over the proposed limits of Paradise Park. The rock at Fort Washington is at the surface and after it had been leveled, no other foundation work would be needed at this point. The northern limit of anchorage ground for large vessels is below 179th street so that, in the opinion of consulting Engineers Boller and Hodge, the channel span would not have to be more than 1,400 feet to give abundant room for the river traffic.

Besides it is argued that it would be easy to make connections with transportation facilities on both sides of the river. Nothing will be decided until after the borings are made. The New Jersey commission would like to have the bridge constructed as far down as possible. As to the form of bridge, it is said that in the event of the 179th street site being chosen, it will be of a cantilever type, while if fifty-seventh street site is chosen there will be a suspension bridge, with a centre span of 3,200 feet.

Slevin Case Again Put Over.

As Tony Martin, the complainant in the case, is not as yet out of the hospital, the case against John Slevin, which was to have come up in the borough court tonight has been put over until Wednesday morning. Martin was run down by Slevin's automobile on the night of July 2 and has been in the hospital ever since. Slevin is out on bonds of $1,000 furnished by David Carney.

LAWN FETE AT SUNBRIGHT

Brilliant Gathering on Handsome Lawn of Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton Last Night.

IN AID OF MEMORIAL CHAPEL.

Fancy Booths, Punch Table, Cake and Other Good Things Sold —Goodly Sum Realized for Repairs.

More than a hundred and fifty people attended the lawn fete held on the handsome grounds of Sunbright, the home of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, on Valley road last night. Many Plainfielders were present, but the majority came from over the mountains at Washingtonville and other villages. The lawn was beautifully illuminated with Japanese lanterns, but the moon soon put these dim lights out of business so far as romantic surroundings are concerned. The night was perfect for the fete which was held for the benefit of Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung and netted the sum of $125, which will be used for making repairs to the chapel.

All the tables and booths were well patronized as the sum realized will show and it was hard to choose between the attractions. The fancy goods table in charge of the girls' club did a rushing business. This was presided over by the Misses May Kelderling, Florence McWade, Theresa E. Schmidt and Margaret E. Eaton.

The other booths and tables were looked after by the following: Punch, Miss Elsie Schmidt; cake, Mrs. Melvin H. Cleaves and Miss Sadie H. Bodenheimer; fruit, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Serer; watermelon stand, Lawrence K. Vail.

A fish pond was a source of much amusement and was in charge of Clarence B. Schmidt. Besides all these attractions the Hindoo fortune teller, in the person of Elias H. Featherstone, kept everybody guessing as to whether they would get home with any money in their pockets, besides predicting all sorts of dire things to them if they did. This was under the auspices of the Boys' Club. Helen M. Schmidt made an efficient and pretty flower girl.

WANT IRISH HISTORY TAUGHT IN R.C. SCHOOLS

With a lively manifestation of enthusiasm, the national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, now in session at Portland, Oregon, yesterday sanctioned a resolution making Irish history a compulsory study in all parochial schools and colleges. The stamp of convention approval was impressed through the medium of a report of the committee of resolutions, of which Monsigneur Arthur J. Teelig is chairman.

Among the messages read to the convention yesterday morning by Secretary McGinnis was one from President Ferguson, of the Belfast, Ireland, section of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The applause which greeted the reading showed clearly that the members of the convention realized to the fullest significance that the missionaries sent to the "old country" to enedavor to weld together the factions there and to cause a more harmonious feeling toward the order in America did not fail to get results.

Election of officers is scheduled for today. The four candidates for president are Matthew Cummings, of Neponsett, Mass., the incumbent; James J. Regan, of St. Paul, now the vice president; J. M. McLaughlin, of Philadelphia, and Professor M. G. Rohan, of Marquete university.

"England is in a tottering condition. England fears Germany. For this reason the Ancient Order of Hibernians are affiliated with German-American. If there shall be a war between Germany and England every red-blooded Irishman in America will fight with Germany. The price of our aid will be the freedom of Ireland."

This expression from Matthew Cummings, national president of the A. O. H., provoked tremendous applause from 1,400 Hibernians at the annual banquet.

Preparatory Service Tonight.

There will be a preparatory service for the communion on next Sunday morning at the Netherwood Reformed church tonight beginning at 8 o'clock.

Miss Maggie Fitzgerald, of Lakewood, has returned home after visiting Mrs. Alice Pryor, of 605 West Third street for two weeks.

LODGE BENEFITS RULING

Important Decision as to Sick Benefits of Interest to Plainfielders.

WHAT A LODGE CAN'T DO.

Right of Beneficial Society to Declare Member off Sick List is Finally Decided.

After a legal fight lasting several years the right of a beneficial society to declare a member off its sick list without a hearing and deprive him of benefits has been decided by Judge Jones in the Camden District Court in favor of the member. The decision is of interest to Plainfield fraternal organizations.

The case is that of Charles W. Aspden against Lincoln Council, Junior Order of American Mechanics, of Camden. Aspden, who was a member of the council, became ill of appendicitis in January, 1904, and was removed to a hospital in Philadelphia, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. He continued ill until August 27 of that year. Somewhere about June 13, however, a relief committee of the council, to the members of which Aspden had been talking and to whom he declared he hoped he would soon be able to go to work, construed his language to mean that he was working and declared him off the sick list.

He appealed to the State body and the latter reversed the action of the council. Lincoln Council then refused to abide by the action of the State body and pay Aspden his benefits. For this the council was declared guilty of insubordination and in 1904 its charter was withdrawn, so that the council is now no longer connected with the State body.

Lincoln Council appealed from that action of the State body by certiorari to the Supreme Court. The latter tribunal declared the State body within the rights in disciplining the council for refusing to comply with the State body's order.

After Lincoln Council's application for certiorari was dismissed the council still refused to pay Aspden his benefits. With the sanction of the State body the services of Patrick H. Harding were engaged. He brought suit in the District Court in Camden for the sum of $54, the amount due Aspden. The council claimed a set-off of $15, which was allowed.

The case has already cost Lincoln Council nearly $1,000 in legal fees, but it is announced that before the amount of the benefits is paid the verdict will be carried to the Supreme Court.

CHAIR BARONS IN COURT.

Forced to Pay Fines and Back License Fees.

Angry rolling chair barons, at Atlantic City, who refused to pay $100 license fees for every stand they use for the storing or hiring of their chairs, were escorted to the City Hall in Atlantic City, by details of policemen and arraigned before Recorder Keer. They were forced to pay fines and back license fees aggregating $4,410 before they were given their freedom.

Incensed at the court's action, they have formed an organization and hired lawyers who will attempt to have the mercantile ordinance, under which the tax is levied, declared unconstitutional.

The fight has been in progress between the "barons" and the city for years.

Caught 275 Weak Fish.

John H. Schenck, George Schlereth, Andy Lutkin, and John P. Case took a fall out of the weakfish on Tuesday and Wednesday and returned home last night after shipping a barrel containing 275 of the finny tribe to Debele & Stahl whence the fish were distributed among their friends. This is what you would call a corking good catch.

Jr. O. U. A. M. to Build.

Sherman Council No. 61, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Roselle, is to build a $10,000 three-story structure in Second avenue, adjoining the bank building in that place.

Mrs. Joseph Sutphen, who has been spending some time with Mrs. P. I. Minton, of 119 East Fifth street, has returned to her home at Long Branch.

R. N. CRANE NOT IN RACE FOR THE CITY JUDGESHIP

One name was eliminated today from the list of those mentioned for the Republican nomination for the city judgeship. It was that of Robert Newton Crane, whose friends say he had a fine chance of getting the nomination.

"I am not a candidate," said Mr. Crane today. "I could not afford to spare the time away from my increasing practice to enter into the campaign. My time is fully occupied and I think it would be a mistake for me to use it in seeking a nomination. I thank my friends for their good work for me, but really I could not go into the fight."

At 2.30 this afternoon, the entry list was composed of Francis J. Blatz, William G. De Meza, V. W. Nash, Jr., Harry C. Runyon and J. Henry Crane, R. N. Crane being scratched. The list doesn't close until late in August.

FUND FOR BABY CAMP NOW AMOUNTS TO $99

Another contribution was received today for the baby camp fund being raised by this paper to aid the City Union of the King's Daughters in their worthy undertaking on the Watchung mountain. The subscription, two dollars, is made by Mollie Timpson. This brings the total amount received $99.

Any donation sent to this paper will be promptly acknowledged and immediately turned over to the camp authorities.

FUNDS NEEDED NOW FOR PUSHING S.P.C.A. WORK

"The complaint voiced in one of the Elizabeth papers regarding the apathy with which the residents of that city view the work of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has an echoing sound in this city. So many of the people who really love animals, but who scarcely give their care a thought could help the society by simply joining and paying their dues and thus give besides their money a moral support which would go a long way toward alleviating the suffering of animals, particularly horses, in the torrid weather."

The above are the words of a member of the society in this city and are worthy of consideration. Conditions in certain stables of the city, according to reports are such as could be much improved and better facilities had for detecting sore backs and other horse troubles if a sufficient sum of money could be obtained to push the work.

It costs but a dollar a year to join the society and once a member interest is sure to develop. This being the case cruelty will in a measure cease when those practicing it know that instead of ten pairs of eyes are watching them a hundred pairs are on the job, care will be taken to prevent trouble to the offenders by themselves.

Heirs Want Estate Settled.

Andy La Rosa, the veteran expressman, who died at Westfield last week, did not leave a will. It is estimated that Mr. La Rosa was worth between $15,000 and $20,000. He was unmarried. The heirs, comprising brothers, half-brothers and sisters, have decided to settle the estate and have engaged counsel to bring about this result.

Fort at Sea Girt.

Governor Fort was at the Governor's cottage, Sea Girt, yesterday. There was a meeting of the State House Commission, at which the Governor, State Treasurer Voorhees and State Comptroller West were present. After transacting routine business the members made a tour of the camp grounds.

Miss A. Martin, of East Sixth street, is visiting relatives at Chautauqua Lake and at Titusville, Pa.

DUNLOP COMMITS SUICIDE

Aged Sick Man Ends His Troubles in Green Brook at Clinton Avenue Bridge.

LEAVES EXPLANATORY LETTER.

Says "I am Tired of Life"—Had Worked in Street Department for Twenty Years—Quit Last Saturday.

Despairing of ever getting better from an illness which had gradually worn down his strength, Theodore Dunlop, one of the city's oldest employes, committed suicide by drowning in Green Brook at the Clinton avenue bridge this morning early. His body was found by Leo B. Olick, of Manson place, who notified John Abbott at the store of W. W. Wilson, who in turn notified police headquarters.

The patrol went to the scene and removed the body to Cole's undertaking establishment where it will be viewed by County Physician F. W. Westcott this afternoon. Dunlop left a letter addressed to Alonzo Brokaw, in which he gave his reasons for taking his own life. Following is a copy of the letter: "Dear Lony Brokaw—I am tired of life, I am getting weaker every day. I do not want to be any trouble to anyone. I have never done harm to anyone only myself so I will end it all at Clinton avenue bridge. On my table in the room is Dime book for $26, give it to Mr. Gavett as there is a little coming from him. I enclose bill for Mr. Bowden. Perhaps Mr. Gavett can get something from him. I do not owe anything, perhaps there will be enough to put me under ground. Good-bye, say good-bye to all friends."

Included with the letter was an account with David Bowden to which Dunlop referred.

The last time Dunlop was seen alive was last evening at about 7 o'clock when he is supposed to have gone out for a walk from his room at the home of Mrs. William Bowman, 319 West Front street. It was known then that Dunlop was feeling badly.

From the condition of the body it is believed that it could not have been in the water more than three or four hours so that Dunlop must have committed the act early this morning. He had lived with the Bowman family for upward of twenty-five years, taking his meals at the home of Mrs. Edward Bowman, 313 West Second street and rooming at Mrs. William Bowman's house on West Front street.

Dunlop has been in the employ of the Street Department for many years and had always rendered a good account of himself and up to last Saturday was in charge of a gang of men cleaning the streets. On Saturday he told Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett that he was too ill to continue working and went to his room to rest. He was seventy-one years old and had lived here most of his life. The only relative he had was Thomas Osment, a painter, living at 318 New street. Dunlop refers to Mr. Osment in his letter this way, "Tell my cousin Thomas Osment, painter, lives in New street."

TOO GREAT A TEMPTATION FOR THESE YOUTHS.

A carload of lucious watermelons was too strong a temptation for Lawrence Somerset, 11; Irving Johnson, 12, and Howard Kreff, 12, all colored boys, living at the West End, so they broke the seal on the car and helped themselves to the fruit. Word was sent to police headquarters and Patrolman McDonald was sent to investigate.

The boys evidently saw the officer coming for they ran and hid themselves in Kreff's home locking the door. Kreff's father came home about that time and hearing of the trouble made an entry into the house and the boys were nabbed.

This morning the boys were held for the probation officer who will interview them tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

Caught Riding a Freight.

For riding on freight cars of the Central Railroad Edward Hamilton, 13, of 149 North avenue, and James Daley, 17, of 454 West Fourth street, were told to appear before Judge Runyon tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. They were caught by Special Policeman Doody, of the railroad.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Garwood baseball team will find the local nine well prepared to do battle with them, when the two clash on the Madison avenue field, Saturday afternoon at 3.30. Seery, the former Elizabeth catcher, is the latest requisition to Dunellen.

John H. Conklin and family moved last week from their residence on Front street to the George Huff house, formerly the property of Asa Bush, on Lincoln avenue.

Isaac J. Stites has installed a novel fire fighting apparatus on the roof of his shop on Front street. It is so constructed as to be of valuable service to nearby houses.

The Dewey Park lunch stand has passed into a new ownership. W. Vanderveer, a former employe of the Public Service Corporation, is the latest proprietor.

J. Y. Young, the local butcher, had an electric lighting system installed in his shop last week. The Public Service Corporation did the work.

Dr. Thomas J. Hogan has returned from an extended visit with friends in New York.

Mrs. Mary N. Runyon and Mrs. A. N. Randolph were visitors in Newark Wednesday.

Mrs. William L. Corriell, of New Market, is on the sick list.

SOMERVILLE.

Mrs. Tunison, Mrs. Galpin, Miss Elizabeth Galpin, Miss Nan Taylor and Miss Blanche Van Fleet are spending two weeks in Virginia.

Mrs. Walter Durling and daughter Sarah, of East Cliff street, have gone to Penmar, Pa., for the balance of the summer.

Mrs. Frelinghuysen returned to Spring Lake yesterday, after spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Southwicke.

Carl Pfanstiehl, of Chicago, is a guest of his father, Rev. A. A. Pfanstiehl, on West High street.

Miss Emily and Leving Schwed, of West High street, are spending a month at Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vickery, of Trenton, are spending a week with Mrs. G. V. H. Weaver.

William D. Messler, of Newark, is visiting his son, D. N. Messler, of West End avenue.

Pianos & Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually.

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

Acquitted, Convicts Self.

Chicago, July 22.—Benjamin Bisno watched the clock in Judge Barne's court room for an hour and a half Tuesday, imagining every minute that the jury was getting nearer and nearer a verdict in his trial on a charge of stealing $1,600 worth of clothing. And then just as the first juror made his appearance in the doorway Bisno leaped to his feet and told the judge he was guilty. He was sentenced to five months in the Bridewell. When Bisno had been led from the courtroom, the verdict was opened, just for curiosity, and it read, "Not guilty," but it was too late to help Bisno. Bisno's partner had turned State's evidence against him at the trial.

Says He Was Shoved Off Train.

Pushed off a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad, as he declared, by a detective, George McGuire was brought yesterday to the Elizabeth General Hospital. He was found to have sustained a fractured wrist, a badly lacerated face and body bruises. He says he was shoved off as the train was passing over a bridge in Elizabeth. He was stealing a ride to Jersey City and said he was twenty-seven years old, single and belonged in Cincinnati, O.

WON'T PERMIT JOHNSON TO APPEAR IN RACES

The story emanating from Indianapolis to the effect that Jack Johnson, the negro who recently won the heavyweight championship battle with Jim Jeffries at Reno, Nevada, would appear in an exhibtion auto drive at the Motor Speedway during the September race meeting has created a stir in motor racing circles that bids fair to bring on a boycott by white drivers against that famous course.

It has been announced by Carl G. Fisher, president of the Speedway, that Johnson was refused entry to the September races but that he probably would be allowed to drive an exhibtion as a feature of the meeting.

Protests have arisen from all parts of the country and more than one famous auto pilot will refuse to ride over the brick track at Indianapolis in September if Johnson is allowed to appear on the course in his machine. Among others who have signified their intention of refusing to drive there, are Louis Chevrolet and "Wild Bob" Burman of the Buick Racing Team. These two drivers have said in forceful terms that if Johnson is allowed to drive his car over the track at the September meeting or at any future time, they will not be willing to start again on the famous course. In speaking of his attitude, Chevrolet said:

"Jack Johnson is a prize fighter and has become notorious in that particular field. There are no negro automobile race drivers at the present time and if I understand correctly, there is a ban against it. I am not willing to allow my name to be used in the same race program as that of Jack Johnson, and if the Indianapolis Motor Speedway management cannot confine itself to automobile racing without bringing a negro barn-storming pugilist, I believe it is time for the white drivers to quit the game on that track."

Burman seconded the sentiments of Chevrolet and added:

"Never before has such a condition arisen, and I believe that the automobile drivers should feel that President Fisher and other officials of the speedway, in even giving publicity to such a project should be the objects of censure at the hands of white men who make a business of automobile racing. I have heard several others say that they will not appear at Indianapolis in September if Johnson is allowed on the track, and although I won many victories at the last Indianapolis meeting and am confident that the Buick would make another sweep there in September, I shall refuse to be a party to any meeting in which Jack Johnson or any other colored driver is allowed to participate."

Two objecting pilots maintain that the only virtue in Johnson's automobile driving is the fact that he puts money in circulation by paying fines for speeding. They assert that it would be foolhardiness itself to race against Johnson who has no knowledge of the mechanical end of an automobile. They feel it would place him on a par with them—a position which they do not choose to occupy.

WIFE WANTS DIVORCE.

Husband Claims He Got a Decree in Reno.

Max Kahn, said to be one of the wealthiest junk dealers in Hudson county, was served yesterday with papers in a suit for divorce instituted against him by his wife, Bessie Kahn, in Jersey City. Mrs. Kahn in numerous charges alleges desertion.

Kahn was arrested recently on a desertion charge made by his wife. He is now out on bail awaiting the termination of that case. He returned from Reno, Nev., where he claimed to have secured a divorce. He says he is being persecuted. He married again after getting his Reno decree.

GUARDING THE RAILROADS

Well Organized Force Always at Work All Along the Lines.

WATCH OUT FOR CROOKS.

Keep an Eye on Pickpockets and Other Undersirables—What the R. R. Police Duties Are.

But few people realize the efforts which a large railroad corporation makes to protect its passengers and the shippers from thieves and annoyance. In order to do this it is necessary to establish a well-organized police department which guards the property of the railroad and its patrons.

Both the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Pennsylvania Railroad employ a large number of railroad police and detectives, whose identity is seldom known, although they are usually among the crowds on holiday and other occasions.

An instance of their watchfulness occurred on Memorial Day, when President Taft went to New York on a Jersey Central train. On the way across the North River not an officer was in sight. He appeared absolutely unprotected. A man nearby remarked to a companion how easy it would be to throw a bomb at the Executive. No less than three railroad detectives stood close enough to hear the remark, yet they were not recognized.

The head of the police department of one of the large railroads recently said: "To successfully conduct a railroad police department and patrol on a large road, it is necessary, of course, to have thoroughly reliable, courageous and intelligent men as railroad policemen, and men who are always resourceful and cool in the face of danger. This last requisite is a very necessary adjunct to a railroad police officer, because he is often called upon to face danger single-handed, and, unlike the city officer, cannot obtain assistance by rapping on a nearby lamp post or firing his revolver in the air.

"In the discharge of his duty, the railroad policeman encounters every class of criminal and desperate character. These embrace not only murderers, train robbers and yeggmen, but countless other felons too numerous to mention. We frequently receive requests from chiefs of police and others to be on the lookout for murderers and persons escaped from penitentiaries and jails, and these requests often bear the postscript that the culprit in question effected his escape on one of our freight trains, by riding the trucks or as 'blind baggage' on an express train. These requests are usually accompanied by a description of the criminal wanted, and are at once communicated to the railroad policemen on all divisions. Very often the fugitive is apprehended hiding on the trucks of a train, and then it is that the officer's courage is tested to its limit. Not infrequently does it happen that murderers are run down in this way and great care must be exercised in making the arrest, because these men are, as a rule, in a state of desperation, and will probably shoot to kill.

"Another class that causes the railroads great annoyance is the tramp. When hungry they do not hesitate to break into a freight car containing merchandise with a view of getting something to eat and a change of clothing. If they are in need of funds to defray their incidental expenses to help them along to the next stopping place (they seldom have a destination), possibly a yeggman will make his appearance with a bottle of 'soup' (nitroglycerine) and suggest blowing open a safe. Many of the depredations committed against the railroads have been by this class of people.

"Understand me," said the official recently, "there are a number of different kind of tramps; for instance, the confirmed tramp, who travels for the love of tramping, and with whom we experience very little trouble, this fellow being satisfied to exist by begging something to eat and sufficient clothing to hide his nakedness. When 'en route' he is satisfied to board a train and conceal himself until he reaches his objective point, and rarely does he do damage to railroad property. There is also the tramp who beats his way from one station to another—the intercity 'bum'—and he also causes us much trouble.

"Another class of crook that causes us no end of trouble is the expert pickpocket. Usually dressed in the height of fashion," said the official, "with a neatly cut tailor-made suit, polished of manner, these persons are perhaps the most expert of criminals. They are often well educated, are versatile conversationalists and possess an unusual decree of intelligence. These people are found bobbing up in a town upon special occasions, such as circus day. Then, too, they often infest excursion trains and will loiter around crowded railroad stations watching for a chance to make off with the pocketbook of some unsuspecting individual, and our men have to be constantly on a close watch for them. Probably few excursionists who enjoy a day's outing at some point on our line are aware that a special railroad officer is on board, constantly on the lookout for pickpockets, confidence men, etc." The official devoted careful attention to an inspection of his Rogues' Gallery, and prides himself that he has the photograph of every crook of prominence in the country. "You know everybody likes to have pictures of as many of his acquaintances as possible," he said, 'and in this respect my collection is quite complete. My 'album' (meaning his gallery) contains the photograph of a number of my acquaintances that I have met at various times in my career as a detective. Unlike other 'albums,' a sketch is kept of the most important events of their career that have made them famous, and in it are included men of all walks of life."

In substantiation of this last assertion he pointed out the picture of an elderly looking man whose face bore every stamp of refinement in the lines of its well-shaped features and whose gray hair bore evidence of advanced years at the time of the "sitting." "This man," it was explained, "started life right and was a banker in the earlier years of his business career. Today he enjoys National distinction as one of the shrewdest of confidence men and pickpockets, and his diary, could it be gotten at, would probably be somewhat similar for long periods because he has served terms—'done time'—in a number of prisons throughout the country."

The next man to this in the "album" was entirely different, having a coarse, rough face, depicting a criminal of the lowest type of yeggman. He also has a National reputation. Women's pictures are likewise seen in the gallery.

WESTFIELD.

In order to meet the expenses of the extensive improvements that are being made at Fairview Cemetery, the association is considering the issuing of bonds. The bonds are to be offered to the members of the association.

A night operator has been placed in charge of the ticket office at the railroad station. It is again possible to send messages by telegraph at night. Westfield has been without a night telegraph service for nearly a year.

Mayor A. L. Alpers has announced that he is not a candidate for re-election, and will go out of office and politics on January 1.

The Board of Health has been assigned office room on the second floor of the town hall.

The Genius.

"I've been chumming with a genius lately, in the hope of hearing some brilliant conversation."

"And has he emitted any epigrams?"

"Naw; he's always wanting to eat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ACCUSED OF MURDER; ARREST CHARZANOWSKI

Following a conference between Detective Tuite of Newark Police Headquarters, and Assistant Prosecutor Andrew Van Blarcom, in Newark Wednesday, Alexander Charzanowski, of Jersey City, was charged with the murder of the Rev. Erazn Anson, who was shot down in the rectory of St. Stanislaus' church in March of last year. The prisoner was arraigned before Judge Hahn, in the First Criminal Court, and committed to the Essex county jail without bail.

Charzanowski was arrested at his home in Jersey City a week ago, a few hours after he had been paroled from the State prison at Trenton. He had served part of a two-year sentence for sending threatening letters to a priest in Passaic.

With Charzanowski charged as being one of the assassins, the detectives started work along other lines and said that within seventy-two hours another man would be similarly accused. Much of the information obtained by the detectives in the case has been furnished by John Lantis, who is awaiting death at Sing Sing for the murder of Selig Korn, a brother of a private banker in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn who was shot down when a raid was made on the bank by bandits.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS OPPOSE PRIZE FIGHTS

A stand against prize-fighting was taken yesterday afternoon by the Women's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey at its annual session at Ocean Grove. The resolution stated that the society desired to place itself on record as opposed to prize fights as brutal and corrupt, and against the exhibition of moving pictures of the recent fight at Reno, which the society considers demoralizing to the youth of the country. An appeal was made to all the Mayors of the State of New Jersey to prevent such exhibitions.

Mrs. Emma Bourne, of Newark, presiding officer, is evidently not a suffragette, as she stated to the delegates yesterday that "it is idle clamor for universal suffrage when the privileges now here are not used." The remark was made in connection with a plea to have women in this State use their right to vote for all appropriations for school purposes.

Miss E. H. Goodwin spoke on work of temperance in the schools, and the same subject was discussed by Mrs. John Leeds, of Morristown; Mrs. Neiderhuhl, of Newark and Mrs. George Hipple, of Asbury Park.

CLUB HOUSE AND BARN BURNED TO GROUND

Fire destroyed the Whippany River Country Club house and stables yesterday morning. The loss is placed at $50,000. The flames were discovered at 4:30 o'clock by John Lane, coachman at the club. The fire was then burning fiercely in the large dining-room. Lane, who lives in the clubhouse cottage, rushed to the clubhouse to awaken its occupants. Matthew J. Flattery, the superintendent, aroused the other employes, and then went to the office and carried out all the books and papers. Lane ran to the stables to lead the horses out. There were forty-one in the barns and Lane got thirty of them out alone. With the rest he was assisted by Flattery, who then was forced to beat a retreat from the clubhouse. The fire swept through the building rapidly, and nothing of any consequence was saved. The stables adjoin the clubhouse on the right and were soon ablaze.

Just how the fire started has not been ascertained. When discovered it was sweeping the side wall of the dining-room. It is thought the electric light wires might have had something to do with it. Although the clubhouse is out of the city limits, the Morristown Fire Department responded to a call at 5 o'clock. There is only one hydrant near the clubhouse, and this was not sufficient to furnish any sort of stream to check the blaze. The fire was well under way when the firemen arrived, and the men were unable to give any effective assistance.

The building was burned to the ground. The clubhouse was one of the most attractive buildings of its kind in the country. It was formerly a barn used by Eugene Higgins. Mr. Higgins' house was destroyed by fire several years ago, and he then rented his barn and property to the club. The club remodeled it, and stables were then put up nearby. The clubhouse has been the scene of many fashionable functions, and some of the best amateur races have been held on the club track. The late Dr. Leslie D. Ward was president of the club.

MASSACHUSETTS NABS MORE N. J. AUTOISTS.

Determined to prosecute every New Jersey autoist riding through the city without a Massachusetts registration, two more victims fell into the clutches of the local police Tuesday and paid fines of $15 each Wednesday before Judge Bosworth in the police court.

The arrests are the result of the continuation of activities in retaliation for the New Jersey statute which requires all autoists living elsewhere than that State to have a New Jersey registration when passing through the State.

The latest victims are Alexander McL. Rowland, of Westfield, N. J. and W. H. Roberts, of Summit. The former proceeded on his way home after paying his fine.

Roberts is a chauffeur and was bringing the car to the Chicopee factory for repairs. No sympathy was shown by the court in his case and he reluctantly paid the fine.

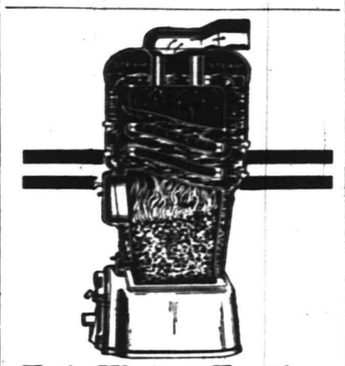
Do You Weigh Too Much?
The Real Remedy and the Recipe.
There are some stout people whom the above question does not seem to trouble very much. They are, however, wrong to be so careless, for obesity is a complaint which brings many evils in its train. There are others who have sought long and earnestly for a really reliable remedy for obesity, and to these the following prescription will be of absorbing interest, because it presents in a simple and harmless form and sure relief—a remedy which is rapidly gaining a world-wide reputation. The reader may make up the prescription for himself (or herself) on getting the ingredients from the druggist—or the latter will do so willingly.
This is the full recipe: ½-oz. Marmola, ½-oz. Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 3½ oz. Peppermint Water. Take a dose of one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.
This admirable and quite harmless remedy will soon take off pounds of the offending fatty excess; and as, day by day, the weight decreases, strength and vigor will return in equal ratio; for, be it observed, there is no fasting or exercise required. Rest, good food, regular doses—these are all that is necessary to reduce weight to normal, increase the supply of pure blood, clear the skin, beautify the complexion, and restore energy and excellent spirits.



Hot Water Heating Perfected
Study a moment this detailed sectional cut of a BOYNTON "Square-pot" boiler.
Note how all interior surfaces tend upward toward the front connection. This means quick water circulation and lively steaming. A slow fire under a does more to kill the chill in a cold house than a roaring, red hot blaze in the ordinary round pot type of boiler. This is because the BOYNTON has most fire surface and best draft.
BOYNTON "Square Pot" PATENTED BOILER

BOYNTON "Square-pot" boilers are easily cleaned. They have the same quick cleaning grate and capacious ashpit as the famous BOYNTON hot air furnaces.
A dozen other strong features that we can't mention here—get the BOYNTON man to show you.

SCOPE OF R.R. VALUATION INCLUDES ABUTTING LINES

One of the features of the work of reappraising the railroad and canal property of New Jersey now being conducted under the direction of Charles Hansel, is the collection of the assessed valuation of all land directly adjoining railroad main stem property. This information will be specific. That is the assessed value of every acre and every foot of land owned by others than railroad companies, along both sides of the main stem, is being gathered on forms provided by the expert in charge. It is impossible to say at present just what part these records will have in determining the value of railroad main stem, as the formula for this purpose has not been prepared, but they promise to be an important factor in the work.

This information is being gathered through the different county tax boards, they in turn getting it from the assessors, and the results so far attained have been highly satisfactory. In asking the county tax boards to furnish him with this information Mr. Hansel is acting under joint resolution No. 3, which gives him power to call on any State board or officer for any information that he deems necessary for a complete reappraisal of railroad and canal property, but thus far he has not had to assert his authority in any way as the work has been entered into with enthusiasm by all concerned, nearly every one being anxious to have the vexatious question of railroad taxation settled for all time.

There are in New Jersey at the present time 120 different railroad companies operating in 400 different taxing districts, and they have 2,365 miles of main stem, so that when the collection of the assessments of land adjoining the main stem of the different railroads is completed the State will have at its disposal a record of valuations of 4,730 miles of property.

The engineering feature of the work of reappraisal is interesting. Forty-eight engineers, in gangs of six, are now scattered through the State, engaged in measuring and surveying tracks, bridges and other equipment of the different railroads. In addition, there is a machinery expert, and in Elizabeth half a dozen draftsmen are busily engaged in making drawings of railroad property, while another force is computing from the figures sent to the office by the engineers in the field. All of this information is being gathered under Mr. Hansel's direction, and it will be turned in to the State when the work is completed.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

"Nothing much," assured Neil. "Suspicious, though," he grinned cheerfully. "Looks as though you were running and somebody came up and tapped you from behind!"

Nathaniel's strength returned to him quickly. The pain had gone from his head and his eyes no longer hurt him. In the dim candle-light he could distinguish the four walls of the dungeon, glistening with the water and mold that reeked from between their rotting logs. The floor was of wet, sticky earth which clung to his boots, and the air that he breathed filled his nostrils and throat with the uncomfortable thickness of a night fog at sea. Through it the candle burned in a misty halo. Near the candle, which stood on a shelf-like table against one of the walls, was a big dish which caught Nathaniel's eyes.

"What's that?" he asked, pointing toward it.

"Grub," replied Neil. "Hungry?"

He went to the table and got the plate of food. There were chunks of boiled meat, unbuttered bread and cold potatoes. For several minutes they ate in silence. Now that Nathaniel was himself again Neil could no longer keep up his forced spirits. Both realized that they had played their game and that it had ended in defeat. And each believed that it was his individual power to alleviate to some extent the other's misery. To Neil what was ahead of them held no mystery. A few hours more and then—death. It was only the form in which it would come that troubled him, that made him think. Usually the victims of this dungeon cell were shot. Sometimes they were hanged. But why tell Nathaniel? So he ate his meat and bread without words, waiting for the other to speak, as the other waited for him. And Nathaniel, on his part, kept to himself the secret of Marion's fate. After they had done with the meat and the bread and the cold potatoes he pulled out his beloved pipe and filled it with the last scraps of his tobacco, and as the fumes of it clouded round his head, soothing him in its old friendship, he told of his fight with Strang and his killing of Arbor Croche.

"I'm glad for Winnsome's sake," said Neil, after a moment. "Oh, if you'd only killed Strang!"

Nathaniel thought of what Marion had said to him in the forest.

"Neil," he said quietly, "do you know that Winnsome loves you—not as the little girl whom you toted about on your shoulders—but as a woman? Do you know that?" In the other's silence he added: "When I last saw Marion she sent this message to you—'Tell Neil that he must go, for Winnsome's sake. Tell him that her fate is shortly to be as cruel as mine—tell him that Winnsome loves him and that she will escape and come to him on the mainland.'" Like words of fire they had burned themselves in his brain and as Nathaniel repeated them he thought of that other broken heart that had sobbed out its anguish to him in the castle chamber. "Neil, a man can die easier when he knows that a woman loves him!"

He had risen to his feet and was walking back and forth through the thick gloom.

"I'm glad!" Neil's voice came to him softly, as though he scarcely dared to speak the words aloud. After a moment he added: "Have you got a pencil, Nat? I would like to leave a little note for Winnsome."

Nathaniel found both pencil and paper in one of his pockets and Neil dropped upon his knees in the mud beside the table. Ten minutes later he turned to Nathaniel and a great change had come into his face.

"Winnsome Croche Demands the Death of Her Father's Murderer."

"She always seemed like such a little child to me that I never dared—to—tell her," he faltered. "I've done it in this."

"How will you get the note to her?"

"I know the jailer. Perhaps when he comes to bring us our dinner I can persuade him to send it to her."

Nathaniel thrust his hands into his pockets. His fingers dug into Obadiah's gold.

"Would this help?" he asked.

He brought out a shimmering handful of it and counted the pieces upon the table.

"Two hundred dollars—if he will deliver that note," he said.

Neil stared at him in amazement.

"If he won't take it for that—I've got more. I'll go a thousand."

Neil stood silent, wondering if his companion was mad. Nathaniel saw the look in his face and his own flushed with sudden excitement.

"Don't you understand?" he cried. "That note means heaven or hell for Winnsome—it means life—her whole future! And you know what this cell means for us," he said more calmly. "It means that we're at the end of our rope, that the game is up, that neither of us will ever see Marion or Winnsome again. That note is the last word in life from us—from you. It's a dying prayer. Tell Winnsome your love, tell her that it is your last wish that she go out into the big, free world—away from this hell-hole, away from Strang, away from the Mormons, and live as other women live! And commanded by your love—she will go!"

"I've told her that!" breathed Neil. "I knew you would!"

Nathaniel threw another handful of gold on the table.

"Five hundred!" he exclaimed. "It's cheap enough for a woman's soul!"

He motioned for Neil to put the money in his pocket. The pain was coming back into his head, he grew dizzy, and hastened to the bench. Neil came and sat beside him.

"So you think it's the end?" he asked. He was glad that his companion had guessed the truth.

"Don't you?"

"Yes"

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Nearly 2,000 names are on the petition asking Lee T. Hallock, of Clayton, to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Assembly in Gloucester county.

Burlington councilmen having assured Isaac Timbers, dog catcher, that he will be paid $1 for each unlicensed dog captured and killed, he has resumed the task of netting unclaimed canines.

The South Jersey glass workers are elated over capturing the next annual Flint Glass Workers' convention for Sea Isle City. The Board of Trade has already started a fund to entertain the delegates.

Thfough a system he expects to inaugurate in Camden the first of next month in the collection of waste paper, Street Commissioner Sayre said Tuesday that sufficient funds would be realized in the sale of the paper to probably more than pay his salary.

A man giving the name Walter Burrows, who claims he came from Wilmington, Del., is in the lock-up at Vineland, charged with desertion. The story as told by a girl who made the complaint, but whose name Recorder Lyons refuses to divulge, is that she was enticed from home on a promise of marriage by Burrows. The promise was not kept and then the girl learned that Burrows was already married.

It took the Camden County Grand Jury but a short time Tuesday to present indictments against Joseph Schley, colored, for the murder of Peter Sykes, of 77 Brewster avenue, Philadelphia, and a dozen other colored men on charges of rioting. During a riot between whites and blacks over a baseball game on July 9 Schley is alleged to have stabbed Sykes in the abdomen. He disappeared, but was captured last Sunday in Washington, D. C. Sykes died in Cooper Hospital.

BASEBALL.

The Shamrock A. C. again defeated the Front street A. C. this morning on the Delacy avenue grounds by a score of 15 to 12. This is the second time this week that the Shamrocks have triumphed over the Front street aggregation. Mullen and Kyle were the winning battery and Luthman and Dodd did the work for the Front street A. C.

Fast Game Expected.

An interesting game is looked for at Crescent Oval, tomorrow afternoon, when the Somerville B. A. nine lines up against the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. team. These two aggregations have met once before, that on July 4, when the local boys captured a 2-1 victory. Hence tomorrow's contest will be the more exciting. Plainfield will take the field in the following order: Hand, c.; Frederickson, p.; Adams, 1b.; Marsh, 2b.; Taylor, 3b.; Fritts, ss.; Peacock, l.f.; Wilcox, c. f.; Dumont, r. f. Play will be called at 3.30.

3-CENT FARE AIM OF THE PROGRESSIVES

The principal business transacted last night by the Republican Progressive League at Hoboken was the adoption, after considerable argument, of the platform. There was a discussion over possible nominees, but no decision was reached, the league deciding to wait to hear from its ward committees at the next meeting of the league, when candidates may be named.

The platform adopted was as follows:

"The Progressive Republican League of Hoboken is committed to the enactment of certain laws, to wit:

"A law for the application of the same standard of assessment and the same rates of taxation to the property and franchises of all corporations as is applied to the property of private taxpayers.

"A law extending the direct primary system to the choice of all candidates of political parties for Governor and Congressmen and providing for the impartial selection of the officials who conduct primary elections.

"A law providing for the Massachusetts, or blanket form of ballot, and for the distribution by mail at public expense of all primary and election ballots.

"An employers' liability law.

"A legislative rule compelling committees to report all bills upon petition of a reasonable minority of either House.

"A law providing for municipal home rule.

"A law authorizing the Public Utilities Commission to fix just and reasonable rates for light, water, trolley, railroad, telephone and telegraph service.

"The election of United States Senators by direct popular vote.

"The conservation of the natural resources in both State and nation.

"The abolition of all telegraph and telephone poles and placing of all wires in underground conduits.

HE ORDERED A MOUNTAIN

And J. B. Duke is Getting One Made That Will Be 100 Feet High.

TRANSFORMING HIS ESTATE.

The Made-to-order Hill Will Cover Twenty-five Acres—To Spend $15,000,000 on Duke's Farm.

"I want a mountain," said James B. Duke. "And I want it here at Somerville, not in Colorado or the Adirondacks."

A mountain at Somerville will be a landmark. For any one who knows Somerville knows that it stands in a plain which is as flat as a pancake.

James B. Duke ordered a mountain just as he would have ordered a cock-tail or waistcoat, with simple, trusting faith that his order would be obeyed, and with that sublime faith which the Holy Scriptures assures us will move mountains. As a stimulus to faith millions are more potent than any magic power old Mahomet could command.

"I want a mountain."

Thus James B. Duke. And, as if some modern Aladdin had rubbed his lamp, thraightway the plain of Somerville began to rise. First a molehill, then a little mound, then a bigger mound, then a small hill, and so on. In a few weeks Mr. Duke will have his mountain, and he is not going to be selfish about it, either, for all Somerville will share his mountain, all the Alpine climbers of New Jersey will have a right to scale its dizzy heights and all the small boys to bellywhop down it on their bob sleds.

Oh, the compelling power of money is a great thing, and Mr. Duke's mountain on the plains of Somerville will bear eternal testimony to it, as the compelling power of the multitude of slaves that Cheops was able to put to work.

James B. Duke's mountain will be more than 100 feet high and more than 25 acres in area. Several million cubic yards of earth are required to build it. Steam shovels are loading thousands of cars with earth every day, pushing them up the mountain side and dumping them at the summit. At the present time the summit is 80 feet above the neighboring plain. Twenty feet higher it must go before Mr. Duke's wish will be realized.

While the erection of the mountain is the most spectacular feature of the improvements that James B Duke is making on his 2,200-acre estate at Somerville, it is really one of the least important. The Tobacco King is trying to make the finest country estate in America, a park which he hopes will excel in beauty and grandeur the palace grounds at Versailles or Fountainbleau.

Accordingly the landscape gardeners draw up plans for transforming the flat plain into a rolling country and for endowing it with every feature that would make it a beautiful park. The transformation is now going on. And it is probably the most extraordinary attempt to build scenery the world has ever known.

The making of the estate, which is three times the size of Central Park, has become Mr. Duke's hobby, his recreation. When he first bought the big tract of land at Somerville he had a trotting farm on it. Tiring of this, he turned his attention to dairy farming. Recently he discarded that fad to give his entire leisure time to making Duke's Park—as his estate is to be called—the most beautiful spot in America. He has planned to spend $15,000,000 on his hobby—if necessary, $10,000,000 more. Thus, out of smoke—your smoke, my smoke, everybody's smoke—will arise a park which may some day vie with the most famous parks in the world.

Thirty-two miles of drives have already been laid out. Millions of trees have already been planted. More than 100,000 imported trees were planted last summer in addition to some 500,000 rhododendrons. Half a dozen lakes, a score of fountains, innumerable bridges and several waterfalls have been completed for some time, but the greater part of the work is yet to be done. When the estate is finished there will be no less than 17 artificial lakes, covering together an area of several hundred acres. There will be 24 fountains—one of them costing $200,000—and a score of waterfalls or cascades, one of them no less than 37 feet high. It is hoped to make the fountain—Mr. Duke's particular fad—more beautiful than even those at Versailles. Twenty million cubic feet of water will be required every day to play them. The lakes will be spanned by 15 stone bridges, several of them with 90-foot spans.

There will scarcely be a level strip of ground on the entire estate. Mr. Duke's new house, a million dollar palace of 70 rooms, for which the foundations are already laid, will occupy the crest of a 60-foot artificial hill. The sides of the hill will be transformed into a series of Italian gardens terraced in Marble, and at its base will be a fountain 150 feet long and 50 feet wide.

There will be a half-dozen other hills besides "The Mountain," as the highest eminence is called. The mountain will be surmounted by a watch tower 150 feet high, from which the surrounding country for miles will be visible.

All the barns, implement and power houses and cottages of the employes will be hidden from view by forests of trees and thick shrubbery. There will be nothing to shock the aesthetic eye. The vista from every side will show nothing but grassy lawns dotted with statuary, gigantic flower beds, crystal lakes and sparkling fountains, balustrades and temples, graceful drives and artistic gardens set with shimmering Italian marble.

In the middle of it all will rise the white marble palace. Its foundations are 45 feet deep. A tunnel will enter its basement from the foot of the hill, so that the servants and provisions may enter the house without driving through the gardens. One end of the basement will contain a swimming pool 120 feet long.

Within three years the landscape work will be finished, and only time's touch will be needed to perfect the estate.

Nearly 500 men will be required to keep this place in order. Mr. Duke calculates that its maintenance will cost in the neighborhood of $300,000 a year. What is of more importance to the public is this: The park will be open to all. The poorest citizen will not be barred from enjoying the beauties of the estate of this great industrial monarch, and the raggedest boy will have a right to slide his bob-sled down the sides of the mountain.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Masters and mistresses of the lariat, who can make a coil of slender rope act as if enchanted, are coming to town with the 101 Ranch Wild West on next Tuesday. They are keen-eyed and clean-hearted cowboys and cowgirls, grown brown and strong on the tremendous stretches of Oklahoma rangeland owned by Miller Brothers. This is their annual "lark."

No cowboy is eligible to ride the prairie for Miller Brothers unless he be practically proficient with the lariat, whose utility is required in almost every sphere of cowboy work. Branding, "cutting out," the capture and subduing of horses and cattle, and the round-up would be impossible of accomplishment without its twisting aid. Constant daily resort to it makes the galloping cowboy's aim unerringly accurate.

Soon his restless vitality will not permit him to be satisfied with the sole ability to make his lariat perform prosaic duties. He experiments with knots and loops and fantastic turns. The possibilities fascinate him. With the grazing cattle as his audience, he spins and teats and practices hour after hour. The repertoire of the rope becomes his pride.

A hundred of these lariat magicians, fresh from the plains, are with the 101 Ranch Wild West. Rivalry among them is keen. Few of their tricks are alike.

The infection of the rope lures, too, the cowgirls to learn its wonders. The 101 Ranch girl wants action and stir and movements. No ping-pong or hide-and-seek for her. Her brother's skill piques her and stimulates her jealousy. She tries to outdo him—and sometimes succeeds.

In all the long, joy-giving program of Indian and ranch life and history which comprises the 101 Ranch show entertainment, none is a greater source of amazed interest, it is promised, than the exploits of the men and women who whirl the lariat.

TUBERCULOSIS AND TEETH DISCUSSED BY DENTISTS

The prevention of tuberculosis and the spread of that disease through imperfect teeth was the subject of a paper read at the night session of the New Jersey Dental Association in the Casino at Asbury Park on Wednesday night. The paper was by Dr. David J. Lyman and created a lengthy discussion. Some objection was raised to parts of the thesis because no mention was made of the manner or method of safety from innoculation to the dentist while working on a tuberculosis patient. However, the paper was well received and opened up ideas which had hitherto been disregarded.

Some of the paper's merits in part follow: "The disease of tuberculosis is to a great extent brought to this country by the many thousands of immigrants in whom the germs have a foundation and by their uncleanliness and lack of knowledge in combating with the conditions which predispose it, the disease thrives and spreads. The only remedy for the conditions is to battle with it through the public schools and through the children the public must be enlightened to the necessity of caring for the teeth. Statistics prepared by Dr. A. Irwin, of Camden, showed that out of 1,000 children in Ann Arbor, Mich., there were 2,025 carious or diseased teeth and other obnormal conditions which had a tendency for the lodgement of the disease or which might cause the breaking down of the system, the beginning of the ravages of tuberculosis.

"Give us the school children and we will solve the question and economically prevent the spread of this disease and educate the public to the proper standard of oral prophylaxis or mouth cleanliness. A case in the New York schools was cited, where one dentist established in two of the metropolis' schools dental clinics for the care of the children's teeth. The record of each child showed on one side of the card and one other side was a record of the medical and dental examination of the child. The child will not heed the instructions of the professions, unless forced to do so and we should do it. In the lower tenement section of New York and other cities, the parents are helped from the instructions given the child regarding the care of the body and foods.

"Tuberculosis is the commonest of all diseases and it is imperative that the body, the body cells and fluids of the body be kept in perfect condition. This fact lies first in the condition of the mouth being perfect and the oral prophylaxis is in your hands and it is up to the dental profession to teach the children how to do this, and thus prevent the spread of the disease. Establish clinics in your schools and go on with the work."

COUNTERFEITING PLANT IN MASSACHUSETTS JAIL

That a counterfeiting plant turning out half dollars, has been discovered in a cell in the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown was admitted yesterday by Warden B. E. Bridges, who added that a thorough search of the prison is being conducted to ascertain whether any more of the "queer" is concealed about the penitentiary.

The discovery of the plant followed a quarrel between two prisoners. The quarrel resulted from a bet made on the regular Sunday afternoon baseball game played in the prison yard.

One of the prisoners won a half dollar from another. The winner objected to the coin because it was counterfeit. A guard overheard the quarrel and investigation revealed in one of the cells a complete molding outfit.

How many of the coins have gotten out of the prison is unknown. In addition to the molds, the guards have found a box full of tin zinc used in making the alloy for the coins. All the prisoners deny complicity in the plot.

Carnival Plans Ready.

The Long Branch carnival plans are now about complete. G. M. L. Sachs, of New York, with a cottage in the Elberon section of the city, has accepted the chairmanship of the athletic committee, while Henry Solomon, who is spending the summer at South Elberon, will have charge of the automobile floral parade. Prizes aggregating $250 will be distributed in the half dozen automobile classes —Georgia peaches are coming in fine and Neuman Bros. is the place to get them.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Burns, of South avenue, are spending their vacation at Albany, N. Y., and will take a trip to Niagara Falls and Toronto, Canada.

AMBASSADORS OF CHRIST

Impressive Sermon by Rev. John Y. Broek at First Baptist Church.

LOYALTY TO CHRIST ESSENTIAL

"Put the Cross of Christ Ahead of the Flag at the Ballot Box or Endanger the Welfare of the Country."

The third of the series of union services was held in the First Baptist church last night. As usual there was a goodly sized congregation despite the warm weather. There were several beautiful anthems rendered by the choir of the First Baptist church, the solo work being well taken by Miss Harris and Miss Hatfield, the new soprano and alto of the choir.

An invocation was made by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist church. The sermon of the evening was preached by Rev. John Y. Broek, of the Trinity Reformed church.

Mr. Broek took for his text the combination of First Corinthians 1-23, and Second Corinthians 4-5: "But we preach not ourselves but Christ Jesus the Lord Crucified." The sermon was in part as follows:

"Paul was an all around man but he was a man of one definite idea—glory in the Christ, his Saviour, and hence comes his determination to preach Christ crucified. The 'but' in the text suggests that the Corinthians had not always heard about Christ and this was so. They would only listen to preachers who came to them with the words of a religion, which was steeped in heathen paganism, and to preachers who could cover these thoughts with the most beautiful declamation. And so Paul feared lest he would not have an audience for he was no orator and the word which he brought was the simple gospel of Jesus Christ. Like Lincoln's Gettysburgh address, the gospel is great because it is simple.

"And then Paul feared that he would be refused a hearing by these people on account of the narrowness of the gospel, which is simply God in Christ. A minister is a sort of an ambassador of Christ but every Christian can be a preacher of Christ by his conversation and the example which he or she sets. But in preaching this Christ, the Christian should guard against self-glorification and remember that he is preaching only for the sake of focussing more light upon his Saviour.

"In the coming political campaign, the man who does not stand by Christ and put the Cross of Christ ahead of the flag of his country at the ballot box, is endangering the welfare of this country and its people. Paul's great message was loyalty to Christ at all times. But why should a Christian be loyal? The reasons are just these:

"In an age of religious upheavel, when men are thinking far more about themselves then they are about religion, and when education is attempting to substitute itself for the gospel, then it is that the Christian should stand firm and loyal for all other isms are broken by the simple message of the cross.

"The Christian should be loyal to Christ because he is the highest ideal of manhood that we have. Christ touches the blest as well as the unblest. Then again the influence of Christ is another reason for the Christian being loyal for Christ is the impulse of every life. That Christ is the remedy for sin and that the love which saves is the love which keeps, should make the Christian loyal.

"And then the last reason is that Christ brought reconciliation between God and man in the atonement, which is simply the sinner's hand and the hand of God clasped together through Christ. And so we can all preach Christ crucified by a life that's loyal."

Her Twelfth Birthday.

A party was tendered Miss Sophia Wicht, at her home, 124 North ave., Saturday afternoon, in honor of her twelfth birthday. Twenty of her young friends were present to congratulate her upon her anniversary. The afternoon was spent in playing games and refreshments were served. Miss Wicht was the recipient of many beautiful presents, among them a handsome diamond ring.

Alonzo Terry Cleared.

A decision was given in the borough court this morning in the case of Alonzo Terry against Carl Ebel. The defendant was accused of using profane language toward Terry on the night of July 4. The case was dismissed.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MELVIN L. VAN DERBEEK

The funeral services of the late Melvin Le Roy Vanderbeek, who died on Friday afternoon, were held last evening at 7 o'clock at his late home on Verdon street, North Plainfield, and were private. The remains were taken to Cherryville, Hunterdon county, this morning, accompanied by Rev. Ora M. Shoop, the pall bearers and a number of friends, the nurse and housekeeper. The body will be interred in the family plot at Cherryville.

The service last evening was conducted by Rev. O. M. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church. The service was simple, consisting of scripture reading and a most fervent prayer. Mr. Shoop will make the commitment at the grave.

The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous. Among them, a set piece from the official board of the church, of which the young man's father was a member; a wreath from the Epworth League, another from his classmates of the class of '09 of the North Plainfield High School, and a handsome pillow from neighbors with whom Mr. VanDerbeek was intimate.

The following schoolmates of Mr. VanDerbeek acted as pallbearers: Preston Dunning, Leslie Powlison, William Taylor, George Webster, Carleton Smith and Pierson Bailey. The remains were taken on the 9:43 train to Cherryville.

AN UNUSUAL PRIVILEGE GRANTED BY POPE PIUS

Because this year marks the seventh century of the foundation of the order of Friars Minor, or the Franciscan Fathers, the Pope has granted a privilege to Catholics throughout the world, which has never been granted before. This is in connection with the well known plenary indulgence of the Portiuncula and it will be granted Monday and Tuesday, August 1 and 2, and Saturday and Sunday, August 6 and 7.

August 2 is the anniversary of the dedication of the little Church of Our Lady of Angels, near Assisi, Italy, the parish church of St. Francis of Assisi, the founder of the Franciscan Community. St. Francis himself obtained from the Holy See in the year 1223, the concession of the plenary indulgence. For many years this indulgence could only be obtained by a visit to the church at Assisi.

At St. Joseph's church this privilege will be extended from the afternoon of August 1 to sunset on the following day.

TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS FOR ONE CIGAR IS TOO MUCH.

While it is a fact that the buying of a cigar cost J. V. F. Dilts twenty-five dollars on Saturday afternoon, it is also true that it was not exactly losing the money but that the money was deliberately taken from the table where Mr. Dilts had been writing.

Mr. Dilts is sure that he left the money on the table, but in the event of his having lost it while on his way from the hotel to the office of Samuel S. Swackhamer, he has advertised a reward for its return. At any rate, someone is twenty-five dollars to the good, no matter how his conscience may feel. It would be a splendid thing for the person who got the little roll of bills to return it and get a reward, and at the same time clear his conscience.

Here's hoping he will see it that way!

From the Police Blotter.

William and Adam Dunham, who were arrested for being drunk and fighting on the corner of Front and Somerset street at 10:30 Saturday night, were fined $8 apiece this morning, with the alternative of spending the next twenty days in jail. John Gillen, colored, had to pay a fine of five dollars for being drunk Saturday night. He was arrested by Patrolman Nolan. George Brown got off with a suspended sentence for the same offense, it being his first transgression.

In Borough Court.

William Hackett, colored, of Phillipsburg, Pa., was arraigned in the borough court this morning for being drunk and disorderly on Saturday night. He was arrested by Marshal Culver. After a hearing, Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence

Off for Ocean Grove.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Herring left this afternoon for Ocean Grove, where they expect to spend the next two weeks.

TO SUCCEED MR. LISTMAN

Thomas Whittaker, of Reading, Pa., Will Be Physical Director at Y.M.C.A.

HAS FINE ATHLETIC RECORD.

New Incumbent Is Great Swimmer and Teacher — Will Assume Duties Here About September 1.

The board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. received an acceptance of the position of physical director this morning from Thomas Whittaker, of Reading, Pa. Of all the applicants for the position, Mr. Whittaker appeared to be the best qualified for the work here. The board decided upon Mr. Whittaker last Wednesday night, when the new man made a visit to this city to meet the members of the board, but his acceptance was not received until today.

Mr. Whittaker is twenty-six years old and possesses a splendid athletic developement. He is exactly suited for the position of physical director since he has several years of experience in gymnasium work, is a good organizer, is a champion swimmer, and a good all around track athlete.

Mr. Whittaker has been connected in the Y. M. C. A. work for the past twelve years. He has always been a valuable representative of the Y. M. C. A. in track meets, in which he has proved his athletic ability bepond a doubt. In the gymnasium he has worked as a leader in the association classes for several years besides being an assistant physical director at Germantown, Pa. In this capacity he was connected with W. J. Cromie, the present physical director at the University of Pennsylvania Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. Mr. Cromie endorses Mr. Whittaker without reservation.

At Germantown, Mr. Whittaker coached the strong track and football teams of that association. He is also a football player of note.

Mr. Whittaker is engaged at present as director of the large municipal playgrounds in Reading, Pa., and he is also city instructor in swimming. In the natatorial art, Mr. degree of efficiency. For several degree of fficiency. For several years he was champion of the Philadelphia Swimming club at a hundred yards, having a record of fifty-eight and two-fifths seconds for this distance. In the fifty yard event, he has a mark of twenty-six and one-fifth seconds. His speed swimming career has been a broad one with such men as Daniels and "Bud" Goodwin as opponents. Plainfield is fortunate in securing such a noted swimmer.

Besides his record in the water Mr. Whittaker claimes a mark of ten and two-fifths seconds in the hundred-yard dash as well as twenty-one feet, five inches in the running broad jump. He has also participated in many other events, being a consistant point winner for the Y. M. C. A. teams.

Mr. Whittaker is married and has a young son. He will remove here with his family from Reading about September first, when George L. Listman, the present physical director leaves for Montclair.

COLLISION OF AUTOMOBILES AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

A collision between two automobiles was narrowly averted at the corner of Front street and Park avenue in Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon. The two machines came together, but at reduced speed so that the resulting damage was slight.

Escapes at this corner are frequent owing to the hotel property which prevents clear vision until the corner is reached. This puts the careful driver at a disadvantage when joy riders are so numerous.

Convention at Shiloh Baptist.

The closing sessions of the fourth annual convention of the Middlesex Central Baptist Association were held in the Shiloh Baptist Church on West Fourth Street yesterday. There was preaching in the morning and evening with a meeting of the women's department in the afternoon. The convention closes this evening with a supper and social time at the church.

Memorial Service at Grace M. E.

A memorial service for the late Melvin LeRoy VanDerbeek will be held tomorrow evening in Grace M. E. church, conducted by Rev. Ora M. Shoop, assisted by Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll. There will be special music and both Dr. Carroll and Mr. Shoop will speak.

L. A. Hummer has sold his Somerset street butcher shop business to Harry Page.

TALKED ON 23RD PSALM

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring's Address at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp.

IMPLEMENTS FROM PALESTINE.

Fine Music and Singing at Service Yesterday Afternoon—Four-Year-Old Astonishes Audience.

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring was the speaker at the service in the auditorium at the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp yesterday afternoon and he made such a plain and convincing illustration of the meaning of the twenty-third Psalm that the children to whom the discourse was especially directed became absorbed in the simple story of the Shepherd. Dr. Herring used the native Staff and Rod to explain the actual duties of the shepherd, telling the children that he had brought the implements from Palestine last year.

The statement of the source of the staff and rod caused the youngsters to open their eyes wide and wonder. Dr. Herring told how the shepherd on the plains about the Far Eastern country knew the names of all his sheep and how they would answer the shepherd's call. He likened it to Jesus who knows every soul by name and expects an answer when He calls. A knife of peculiar shape, which Dr. Herring explained the use of, also delighted the children and the pastor was so struck by the attention given to him that he turned to the little ones and thanked them. They, in turn, sang a little song of thanks not only for Dr. Herring, but for all those who had assisted in the service.

Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, of East Seventh street, sang two solos and Chester Chamberlain sang just before the offering. During the taking of the collection Martin A. Korff played a violin solo with much expression. Miss Evelyn Berg was the pianist. Meetings will be held every evening this week except Saturday.

A feature of the afternoon was little Margaret Withen, a four-year-old girl who repeated the twenty-third Psalm without a break. The tiny voice could be heard to the remotest part of the building. The meeting was led by J. F. Parker.

EDDIE M'NIE WINNER OF A BICYCLE RACE

The regular Sunday morning bicycle race was held by the Plainfield Cycle Club on the Park avenue course yesterday morning at ten o'clock. There was a large bunch of entrants and the race was a keen one. The course was laid from the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks at South Plainfield out to Metuchen and back. Slow time was made on account of the poor condition of the road.

Eddie McNie, of Madison avenue, starting from the one minute mark, was the victor. He was closely pushed by E. S. Bird, of East Front street, who was allowed a fifteen second handicap. Raymond Mantz, of Pearl street, came in third but carried off the time prize, doing the distance in fourteen minutes and five seconds. He and George Simon were the only scratch men.

"Dippie" Jones, with a minute allowance, came in fourth, while Eddie Simon and Willie Drake, both half-minute men, were fifth and sixth respectively.

First place at these races counts five points, second place three points, and third place one point toward the medal to be given to the winner of the greatest number of points at the end of the season. The time prize also counts as one point.

Fruit Store Burglarized.

Some time between 12:30 Saturday night and 2:30 Sunday morning the fruit store of Toyfon Zacarapoulos, on Park avenue near Front street, was entered and the cash register rifled. Forty-seven dollars was the booty secured by the burglar, and he left no clue. Entrance was effected through a rear window.

The Next Excursion.

The Methodist Sunday schools of this city and Dunellen and Wilson Memorial Chapel, will go to Asbury Park on their annual excursion on Thursday, July 28. The special train will leave Dunellen station at 8 o'clock, Clinton avenue at 8:06, Grant avenue at 8:08 and Plainfield at 8:15. Returning will leave the grove at 7:10.

WON BENCH SHOW PRIZES

A. G. Hooley Captures Gold Medal fof Best Setter Bred by Him.

ALSO THE McALEENAN CUP.

Fred Moore Scores Twice—Gets Blue Ribbons in Toy Poodle Class—Mr. Minturn Loses $3,000 Bull Dog.

The famous Meadowbrook team of English setters, owned by A. G. Hooley, of Rockview terrace, again proved themselves to be invincible at the annual dog show of the Monmouth County Kennel Club, which was held in the Long Branch Casino, Saturday. Mr. Hooley's dogs not only won both championships in their breed, taking every first, but in the competition open to all, which brought together over three hundred champions as well as many famous European winners, they scored complete victories.

The prizes won by the Meadowbrook Kennels include the President's cup for the best of all breeds; the Henry McAleenan cup for the best setter of all varieties; the champion gold medal for the best setter bred by exhibitor; the Harry Content cup for the best American bred champion; the James Smith trophy for the best team; the Robert Guggenheim cup for the largest and best exhibit; and the Alexander cup for the best bred setter in New Jersey.

Fred Moore, of Park avenue, also won prizes in the toy poodle classes with his Sunny Lad and Little Elk. Both of these dogs received a blue ribbon. This makes three blue ribbons and two reserves for Sunny Lad this season, and two blues and one reserve for Little Elk.

Mrs. J. D. Anderson, also of this city, obtained two blue ribbons in the toy poodle class with her bitch Maidie. In the limit class, Maidie received winner over Champion Dainty Lady. She also took blue ribbon in the open class.

The Long Branch show is one of the finest in the country and the exhibition on Saturday was attended by the most prominent people of New York and Philadelphia society. The entry list included over nine hundred dogs from the leading kennels of the country and the competition in the judging was keen.

On his way to the show John W. Minturn, of Great Neck, lost his $3,000 bull dog, Lord Fife. Mr. Minturn had brought the bull dog to the show in a case, strapped to the rear of his automobile. When the case was opened at Long Branch the valuable bull dog was found to be dead. It is thought that poor ventilation and gasoline fumes were the causes of the dog's death.

SMITH DEFENDS STATE'S AUTOMOBILE REGULATIONS.

In an interview between J. B. Smith, commissioner of motor vehicles in this state and Francis Hurtubis, Jr., secretary of the National Automobile association in Boston, Mass., on Saturday the former defended the New Jersey motor laws against the retaliatory movement toward New Jersey automobilists by the states of Massachusetts, New York, and Pennsylvania. Mr. Smith said that he believed the trouble was due to a dissimilarity in the motoring conditions between New Jersey and the other states. This state, he declared, was more liberal in its motor laws than the other states, even in spite of its excellent roads and beautiful drives. Although there is far more auto traffic in New Jersey than in those other states, the number of arrests and accidents in this state are actually less, according to Mr. Smith.

To Get a Legacy.

Mrs. Lawrence Kirwin and daughter, of Rock avenue and West Fourth street, leave on Saturday on the White Star Line for an extended trip to Europe. Mrs. Kirwin is the heir of an estate which is to be settled in Ireland. The couple expect to be gone several months.

Robert Bellows, of Woodland avenue, has returned from Brighton Beach.

Miss Ethel Skillman, of Watchung avenue, is doing settlement work in New York city.

Carl Wilson, of East Second street, has returned from a week's vacation on Lake George.

William V. Rafferty, of Sandford avenue, has returned from a visit with Walter Caldwell, formerly of this city but now of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. George O. Packer, of East Sixth street, are spending the summer in Grand Rapids, Michigan. They expect to return to this city about the last week in August.

FISHERMAN OVERBOARD BUT MADE GOOD CATCH

Notwithstanding an accident in which three of their number were nearly drowned the Social Fishing Club, of Westfield, brought home about 150 weakfish on Saturday which averaged about two pounds each.

The accident referred to occurred about 4:30 in the afternoon when the schooner Minnie H., with nine passengers aboard, ran into the power launch Dick, which with the fishing club aboard was anchored off Sea Breeze, S. I. The collision threw Captain Donaldson, J. Sell and H. F. Johnson overboard and they were rescued with difficulty.

Among the passengers of the Minnie H. were four women, three men and two children. The mainsail of the schooner fouled and the vessel turned turtle, throwing the whole bunch into the drink. After an hour's work the whole party were safely put ashore and the Minnie H. towed to Perth Amboy, where she will be righted and repaired.

Those who were on the Dick were Captain G. H. Donaldson, of Garwood; Chester Moffatt, pilot; C. Sell, J. Sell, R. C. Miller, J. H. Wells and S. Knapp, all of Westfield, and H. F. Johnson, of this city.

POLITICS STILL DULL IN NORTH PLAINFIELD

Politics and politicians in the borough are quiescent just now, in fact none of the officials whose terms expire this year seem to have given any thought to the coming election in November, and if they have thought about it at all it has been in the way of a passing interest and not with any sense of impending change.

When asked this morning whether he would again be a candidate for councilmanic honors, L. B. Woolston declared that he had not even thought about the matter, and was not sure whether he cared to run. "When I did take the chance," he said, "I thought I would be able to do something for the borough, but, well, I don't know. It depends altogether on circumstances whether I am again a candidate this fall."

The terms of Andrew Lutkins as a Freeholder, and of Mr. Woolston and George Rogers as councilmen, expire this year. Mr. Rogers was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles L. Nichols this spring.

TRAVERS AND BREMNER DEFEATED CRANFORD PAIR

Golf enthusiasts of the Cranford Golf Club were out in largen umbers yesterday following the contestants in the 36-hole foursome between Edward Wild and Max Marston, representing the local club, and Jerome D. Travers and William B. Bremner, of the Montclair Golf Club. The Montclair pair won the match 6 up and 4 to go. It was a hard fought match, in which the Cranford players though severely handicapped played a good consistent game.

Max Marston was unable to continue the second round of 18 holes and Joseph I'Anson, the club professional, was substituted.

The driving and approaching were perfect, but it was on the putting greens that the match was won.

The scores for the 36 holes were Jerome D. Travers, 156; W. B. Bremner, 178; Max Marston, 18 holes, 86; Joseph I'Anson, 18 holes, 84; Edward Wild, 158.

Another foursome will be played in September between the same players. William B. Bremner, of the Montclair Golf Club, extended an invitation yesterday for a six-man team match between the Montclair and Cranford Golf Clubs.

Bills Against City.

People having claims against the city of Plainfield must have their bills in the hands of the city clerk before tomorrow night in order that they be considered at the next meeting of the Common Council.

Tom Hanna Says—

"If Fred Dunn can get that same fellow to write a few more such letters, Judge Runyon won't have to do any work to get elected."

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bininger, of Westervelt avenue, are registered at the Warrington Hotel, Ocean Grove.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Conover, of this city, are included among recent arrivals at Nassau Hall, Asbury Park.

DIED WHILE ON A VISIT

Miss Byrne, of Chicago, Succumbs Following Appendicitis Operation.

GUEST OF MRS. J. E. MARTINE.

Taken Ill Yesterday She Passed Away at Hospital This Morning—Leaves No Relatives.

Failing to rally from an operation for appendicitis which was performed yesterday evening at Muhlenberg hospital, Miss Mary Byrne, of Chicago, Ill., died this morning at 7:30. The funeral will be held from the residence of James E. Martine on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Miss Byrne was visiting Mr. and Mrs. Martine and on Saturday accompanied Mrs. Martine on a shopping tour to New York. In the evening they, with Mr. Martine, took dinner on the roof of the Waldorf-Astoria and returned to this city at about 11 o'clock at night.

Yesterday morning Miss Byrne complained of feeling ill and could eat no breakfast, later she became the victim of excruciating abdominal pains. Dr. Thomas C. Blair was hastily summoned and diagnosed the case as one of acute appendicitis. Dr. Blair suggested a consultation and Dr. W. T. Hellmuth, Jr., a specialist from New York, was telegraphed for. He immediately confirmed Dr. Blair's diagnosis and suggested an immediate operation. Miss Byrne consented to this and the ambulance conveyed her to the hospital, where the operation was performed at 5:15 o'clock, with the above noted result.

Miss Byrne leaves no relatives. Her sudden death has prostrated Mrs. Martine, who was a life-long friend. Miss Byrne was about thirty-eight years old. The funeral service will be private.

GESANG AND T. V. WIN TWO MORE GAMES

The Gesang and Turn Verein added two more victories to their credit on Saturday. The Wayside F. C. fell by the wayside by the score of 8 to 1; the Finderne A. C. were slaughtered on Sunday by the score of 15 to 6. With the score of 6 to 2 against them, the Turners went to the bat in the eighth inning and drove Frolick from the box, tying the score. Porter, the Raritan Jrs. star pitcher, went in the box and the Turners scored two more runs on Harsen's double and Montross' home run over the left field fence. In the ninth inning Porter was hammered all over the lot, twelve men facing Porter in this inning, for ten hits and seven runs all earned. Montross, the Turners' pitcher, retired in the fifth inning and N. Luthman took his place, with Dixon behind the bat. The lineup for the Finderne game was as follows:

G. T. V.—E. Luthman, c; B. Hansen, 2b; Ayers, 3b; Hann, ss; Thorn, lf; Montross, p-1b; Stagard, cf; Lennox, rf; N. Luthman, 1b-p; Dixon, c. Finderne A. C.—Smith, 3b; Nessler, c; E. Meyer, lf; H. Meyer, rf; Galvin, 1b; Porter, cf-p; Austin, 2b; Frolick, p-cf; Hardgrove, ss.

Baseball at Netherwood Camp.

Henry McIlreavy, who is in charge of the boys' department of the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp, has organized a baseball team among the youngsters and on Saturday they played their first game with the Roselle Stars, winning by the score of 14 to 5. A game will be played every Saturday during the camp season, weather permitting.

Skidded and Struck Pole.

On account of skidding on the slippery pavement on Front street Saturday night, U. B. Crane's automobile crashed into a pole in front of Wiliams' grocery store. Except for a bad dent in the radiator of the auto, there were no injuries in the mishap.

The Shamrocks Won.

The Shamrocks defeated the Plainfield Juniors this morning on Hyde Field by the unusual score of 6—2. Mullen and Kyle were the battery for the winners, while C. Hayser and Smith were in the points for the Juniors.

Owl Club Meets.

The Owl Club of Plainfield met Saturday evening to discuss plans for its summer encampment at Belmar. The club had a fine time on the coast last summer, and is looking forward with pleasure to this summer's trip.

SOMERVILLE.

The young men of the First Baptist church have formed a club to be known as "The Brotherhood League" Its purpose is to be three-fold. First, to promote a fraternal spirit by monthly meetings, the field to be held in the chaped on July 29, when Rev. Geo. Allison, of Rutherford, will lecture. Second, to afford athletic recreation. A tennis court is under consturction on the church grounds. Third, to offer training along religious, economic and civic lines by means of a man's forum, which will meet each Sunday morning after church service, beginning with to-church service.

M. N. Porter, who has been agent for the United States Express Company in Somerville for many years, has resigned his position and taken a traveling position with the company. Mr. Porter is succeeded by his son-in-law, J. B. Carhart, who took charge of the business on Thursday.

Money Refunded For Any Unsatisfactory Purchase

Two young women—one from Westfield and one from Glen Ridge—were conversing within earshot of the writer the other evening, and this is what he heard:

"We do every bit of our buying in Newark at Bamberger's", said the Westfield miss. "We've been trading there ever since I can remember, and everything we've bought has been satisfactory. We haven't had to take a thing back."

"That's all right about not having to take anything back," declared Miss Glen Ridge, "but the way to really appreciate Bamberger's is to TAKE SOMETHING BACK some time. Why, it isn't a bit of trouble and they never urge you to take other goods in place of the ones you return. It's true we don't have to take things back very often, but when we do we know we won't have any difficulty."

Honestly now, don't YOU feel pretty much the same way about this store?

We think the majority of people do.

DUNELLEN.

The Sunday-school of the Methodist church is looking forward to the excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on Thursday of this week. The school will go in union with the First Methodist Sunday-school of Plainfield.

The catching of Seary in Saturday's game was a big help to the local team. The Elizabeth man's playing strengthened the Dunellen boys at least ten per cent.

William Giles, who is employed by the American Agricultural Chemical Co., is spending his vacation at home, taking short trips about this vicinity.

The Marathon A. C., of Newark, will be the opponents of the local team on the Madison avenue grounds next Saturday afternoon.

J. A. Bogardus is making an extended tour through Canada. He reports that he is enjoying his trip to the fullest.

The condition of Cornelius Huff, who has been away for some time, is reported as much better.

Manager Bogardus has obtained Montross and Seary as the battery in next Saturday's game.

Harry Giddes is enjoying his vacation this week. He will take a trip in Northern Jersey.

Councilman Churchill has gone up in Connecticut for a two weeks' vacation.

Bernard Siriski has accepted a position in Plainfield.

Samuel B. Merrel is seriously ill at his home.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

A woman from out of town, who had been refused drink at a local hotel Saturday night on account of her condition, started to make a scene on Park avenue and insisted on cleaning up the town. Policeman Albert MacCauley was called and the woman and her companion were hustled out of town.

Owing to lack of support Manager Alberts has been obliged to cancel all the games arranged for the season on the home grounds. This upset his schedule and the locals were unable to fill in a game for Saturday afternoon.

A number from Fanwood and the 'Plains held a strawride to Boynton Beach Saturday night. Arriving at the Beach dancing was enjoyed until near the midnight hour.

The weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held last night in the parlors of the church. Miss Ruth Hatfield was the leader of the meeting.

Harry Wade led a well attended meeting of the Epworth League held last night in the Methodist church.

A number from Plainfield and here held an all day outing yesterday on the mountains near Glenside.

An Impractical Disturber.

"You look terribly worried this morning."

"I am," replied the man who gets up the 'Answers to Curious Questions' columns. "Here's a silly letter from a man who wants historic information."

"Isn't that in your line?"

"Not at all. I've done enough when I have looked through the encyclopedia for quaint facts and fitted them out with suitable inquiries."—Washington Evening Star.

A Reverse Process.

"They are talk'ng about transmutation of metals again."

"Well," replied Farmer Corntossel, "after what happened to the gold brick I once bought, I dunno but the idea has something in it."—Washington Evening Star.

The Proper Way.

"I don't know how to make conversation when I get into society,"

"You have the wrong idea. You don't want to make conversation. Get your self a good monologue."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Set a High Mark.

"Your novel is evidently the result of inspiration."

"Yes; I didn't start it until after reading the advertising notices my publishers got up."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Spring Observation.

Still at mankind the cynic rails
And vows with grim regretfulness
The peach crop nearly always fails;
The lemon crop is a success.

Pianos & Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually.

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

Renovating a Carpet.

A soiled, faded carpet may be made into quite a different-looking thing. To a pailful of cold water add five cents' worth of ox gall. Rub this mixture into the carpet with a soft brush. It makes a fine lather, which must be washed off with clear, cold water. The carpet should then be rubbed dry with clean cloths. The green and red figures should be gone over with a weak solution of alum. The colors will come out almost as bright as when new. In tacking down a carpet that has been treated in this manner be careful that the floor is quite dry or the tacks will rust and injure the carpet.

Dressing for Slaw.

This dressing is good for cooked vegetable salads as well as for slaw. Mix in the top of a double boiler one-half level tablespoon each of mustard and salt, a scant level tablespoon of sugar and one egg slightly beaten. Add two and one-half cups of sweet cream and cook uuntil the mixture thickens; then add one-quarter cup of hot vinegar and cook a little longer. Strain and cool before using. Milk may be used instead of cream, and the melted butter increased to three tablespoons.

Beaten Biscuits.

For lovers of beaten biscuits I would suggest that they try my way. I make the dough as usual, and when made I run it through a small clothes wringer which I keep for this purpose. I screw the wringer to the table and run the dough through about twelve or fifteen times Try this and you will be delighted with ease with which you make excellent biscuits.

LOWEL LEVEL FOWLER.

"Representative Fowler put his campaign on the lowest possible level when he attacked Senator Kean on May 23 in a letter which he estranged many who had been the Congressman's friends. Mr. Fowler's backers are attempting to continue the campaign in the same spirit. The letter of one, Dunn, of Plainfield, is a fair example of the quality of the fight which is being carried on. It is almost needless to say that citizens of character and intelligence are not impressed by the methods which are being pursued. But Dunn is not so much to blame as Fowler, who set the lowest possible political ideal for his supporters to follow."

This man Dunn, to whom the Elizabeth Journal refers, in the foregoing editorial paragraph clipped from that paper, is a member of the local Board of Health; a mild, inoffensive little man whom nobody would accuse of knowing anything about politics much less would give him the credit of possessing the ability to compose the letter he so foolishly signed. Dunn, the scapegoat, has paid a big price for his dealings with the man who induced him to commit such a low act, but he has learned a good lesson. The question is, has he the manhood to make a clean breast of the whole diabolical machination; redeem what reputation he has lost and let the real rascal be held up to public scorn?

George J. Whelan Returns.

George J. Whelan, of East Front street, president of the United Cigar Stores Company, returned Saturday from Europe on board the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, of the Hamburg-American line. ASBESTOS SAD IRONS
AN IRON FOR EVERY PURPOSE.

The Cause of the Commotion

East Front Street in front of our store was litterly jammed with people on Saturday night, the crowd numbering at least a thousand. The cause of the commotion was the demonstration in our window of

"Asbestos Sad Irons"

By Miss A. S. Bestos, who notwithstanding the extreme heat, smilingly ironed away and showed the crowd the many advantages these famous irons posseses over the ordinary kind. It's a pleasure to iron with them particularly in Summer, the absence of heat in the handle makes them the most comfortable and sanitary irons a woman can use, for all of the heat is confined to the face of the iron and kept away from the hand of the ironer, and as the demonstrator says, "You always have a hot iron and a cold handle."

Briefly speaking the principal features of "Asbestos Sad Irons" are the heat-retaining hood, Asbestos lining, cool handle, highly polished ironing surface, nicely rounded edges, economy in heating. An iron for every purpose. Here's what they sell for:

Complete Laundry Sets $1.75 and $2.00

FREDDIE IS BREVETTED IN FOWLER MUD BATTERY

Emulating the example of the New York Journal, which picked Charley Murphy's interesting political letters out of a waste paper basket at a sanitarium in Michigan for the edification of New Yorkers, the Plainfield Village Buzzard by such methods has procured the correspondence of F. Willingly Done. These letters are just as genuine as that purported to have been written by the unwilling recruit of the Fowler Mud Battery, and are no more genuine.

Here is the first of the communications he has received:

Fred Willingly Done,
Down in the storm cellar.

Our dear Fred:—

For meritorious service in the campaign we have brevetted you major satastrap of the Fowler Mud Battery.

My boy, my boy, you have nerve if nothing else except gray hairs. You did fine to keep up the bluff that you were the author of the letter we gave you to sign, but you must not walk up again and offer that man Runyon your hand. If you do w won't have you appointed a census enumerator again.

That incident on North avenue, the morning following the publication of our letter, has become known all over. When you walked up to the judge as he was talking with Amos Andrews, one little urchin shouted to his pal: "Come on Jimmy, here'e where de jedge gives that bloke a Jack Johnson cut dat will land him down dat storm sewer."

Last night I had a horrible dream and I woke up all in a perspiration. I dreamt as you reached out to shake the hand of a man that less than twenty-four hours previously we got you to fib about, you said:

"Judge, you know I never meant those things; you know I know they're not true, but I simply had to do it. They put the paper in my hands and said 'sign there,' and I did. You know I was given that job as a census enumerator and they didn't do that for nothing. Judge, I am not a coward nor a rogue, mere an ordinary little inoffensive man, and I've been used as a tool. It was a pretty mean piece of business. Judge, here' my hand!"

Freddy, I'm glad it was only a dream, for if you had owned up that way, you would have exposed us. Another thing, Freddy, don't be seen in the company of Amos Andrews. You know we have been handing it out that we are for municipal ownership; that was our dodge to get the New Idea to smile on us. Keep a stiff upper lip and don't let on anything about how we got you to sign your name to the letter. Then some people will believe that you are a student of politics and a writer. Carry a copy of Cicero under your arm and Emerson's Essays in your hip pocket. In other words throw out a bluff—that's our game.

PERSONAL.

Charles Barlow and family, of Grove street, have gone to New York State for their summer vacation.

Horace B. Earle, of Watchung avenue, goes to Holesite, L. I., this week to visit Alan Overton at his summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Dickerson and family, of East Second street, are on a two weeks' vacation in Asbury Park.

John VanWinkle and son, of Duer street, leave this week for Ocean Grove, where they will spend the month of August at the "New Arberton" Hotel.

William J. R. Thiers, of St. Michaels, Md., accompanied by two of his children, Marjorie and Dorothy, is enjoying a visit with their grandfather, Charles R. Thiers, of Craig place.

"101 RANCH" SHOW AT GRANT AVE. TOMORROW

"Real wild west" may be seen at the West Front street show grounds tomorrow when the big show of the famous 101 Ranch, of Bliss, Oklahoma, will be on view at performances in the afternoon and at night. The organization comes here from Jersey City, where, advance agents report, it is exhibiting today to great crowds. The tour has been a record-breaking one in patronage and popularity ever since departure was taken from the Oklahoma prairies.

The forenoon street parade is a feature of the daily life of the show. Every person and part, it is promised, is of and from the land of cattle, corrals and coyotes. Every person is a figure of unquestioned repute in the western world of study and physical endeavor. Every cow boy is an admitted champion with lariat, horse or firearms, or in other departments of ranch routine. Every girl is a sun-tanned product of the rangeland, whose beauty and youth seem to cry out against her hazardus exploits.

Tickets for both performances may be purchased in advance at the 101 Ranch ticket office, which will be located all day tomorrow in Schreiner Bros.' pharmacy. Merchants are gleefully expecting a large attendance from the surrounding country and have arranged to handle the extra patronage. Hotels and restaurants have laid in extra supplies, and the liverymen have every available stall and hitching-post in readiness. The show has made a tremendously favorable impression in other cities visited this season.

The parade route will be as follows: Grounds down West Front to Richmond, to East Fifth, to Watchung avenue, to North avenue, to Park avenue, to West Fourth, to Grant avenue, to grounds.

Lewis B. Skillman and family, of Watchung avenue, leave this week for Block Island, where they will spend their vacation.

—Miss Beulah VanWinkle and Miss Helen MacCallum, graduates of the Plainfield High School, class 1910, have accepted positions in New York.

TRUNKS! TRUNKS!

In our large and complete line we can surely please you, as we buy the best made goods---always neat in appearance, extra well made, very desirable, in fact the very best Trunks, Cases and Bags at the lowest prices just now.

Mr and Mrs. H. C. Van Emburgh, of East Second stret, have completed the happiness of their daughter, Marjorie, by presenting her with a handsome new bicycle.

L. A. Hummer, of East Fifth street, started for Accoguan, Virginia, this morning to take charge of the Plainfield Mining Company's iron pyrites mine at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Curtis and daughter, of Newark, Delaware, have returned home after a visit with Mrs. Curtis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, of Park avenue.

Miss Alice Doane, of Sanford avenue, is spending some time in South Carolina. From here she goes to Indiana, to look over Earlham College, which she expects to enter in the fall.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

A member of Trinity Reformed has presented Rev. John Y. Brook with a chair for his study. The pastor appreciates the gift.

"Solomon's Wise Choice" will be the topic at the weekly praise and prayer service of Trinity Reformed Church on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. At 9 o'clock the same evening there will be a meeting of the consistory of the church.

A Preference.

I like a novel that is stout,
The kind that gauges
Say eighty chapters, or about
Four hundred pages.

I like to get my money's worth;
I like a story
That takes the hero from his birth
Until he's hoary.

The skimpy novel I abhor
For I am thrifty,
And want a lot of reading for
My dollar fifty.

UNREALIZED BLESSING.

Consolation by the Court to an Applicant For Divorce.

"Well," the judge asked, "what is the matter? You say your wife has not proved unfaithful to you, and you admit that she is as sweet tempered as she was before you were married. You will have to give some good reason for wishing a divorce or the case will be dismissed."

"Your honor, I was deceived."

"In what way?"

"My wife seemed beautiful before I married her."

"Most men's wives seem beautiful to them before they are married."

"But my wife is not what I thought her to be."

"Come. You must be explicit. Did you find that she padded her figure or made use of an artificial complexion?"

"It wasn't exactly that, judge, and yet it was something in that line. She had always worn a big braid of purchased hair fastened over her ears in accordance with the prevailing style. Before we were married I never saw her ears. Oh, it was awful!"

"What was awful?"

"Her face when she let her ears loose. They spoiled her looks altogether. I claim that she married me under false pretenses, and I want a divorce."

"You can't get a divorce on any such plea as that. Go back to her and try to be happy."

"But I can't, judge. My nerves won't stand it."

"Pshaw! What have your nerves got to do with it?"

"You'd understand if you could see her with her false braids off. Every time I see her when she lets her ears loose I can't keep from expecting her to give a flap or two with them and then fly away."

"Go back to her. You don't know how you are blessed. Few men ever have any reason to entertain that fond expectation."—Chicago Record-Herald.

How It Can Be Done.

Suddenly the lecturer's voice failed him.

"Gentlemen," he asked huskily, "does any person in the audience happen to have a box of *Blank's throat tablets about him?"

"Yes, sir," instantly responded a tall, thin man in a suit of faded black, rising and making his way to the platform. "Here you are."

"Thanks," wheezed the orator, taking the box, extracting a tablet and placing it in his mouth. "I carelessly left mine at home."

Half a minute later he resumed his lecture with a voice as clear as a bell.

There is more than one way to bring a thing before the public.

Sure Enough Kid.

Bob was telling about his visit to the country. While there he had acquired some rustic idioms, and his mother was correcting these as he proceeded:

"Well, we goes up"—

"Went up."

"Went up on the farm"—

"To the farm."

"To the farm, and there we see—

"We saw."

"We saw a little kid"—

"Little child. Now, begin again and tell it properly."

"Well, we went up to the farm, and there we saw a goat's little child." (Further narration suspended.)—Judge.

Suitable For Sunday.

Lady Customer—Have you any Sunday toys that I could give to my little grandson?

Shopman—Yes. Here is our sixpenny box of soldiers.

Lady Customer—But I couldn't let him play with the soldiers on Sunday!

Shopman—Of course not, madam. But these are Salvation Army soldiers. —Christian Life.

He Did.

Said the lady: "Here's a rug to beat;
Also some pumpkin pie to eat
When you complete it."
The hobo cast a greedy eye
Upon that wholesome homemade pie
And longed to eat it;
Then thoughtfully he eyed the rug,
And, with a silent shoulder shrug,
He straightway beat it.

Stone Roads
ELIZABETH, N. J.

Proposals are asked for the construction of a Macadam Road in Union County, New Jersey, known as Springfield Avenue and Shunpike Road, begining at Turkey Road and extending northerly to Westfield Avenue, all in the Township of Springfield.

The length of the work to be done is 1.131 miles.

The width of the macadam is to be made 16 feet. The widths between the gutters will be 33 feet.

Bids may be presented on the following different types of work.

1. Macadam, with asphaltum binder.
2. Macadam, with Amiesite surface coating.
3. Macadam, with Warrenite surface coating.
4. Macadam, with Filbertine surface coating.
5. Macadam, with Healley Good Roads Company's surface coating.
6. Macadam, with Tarvia surface coating.

Plans, profiles, specifications and cross-sections of the work may be examined at the office of Jacob L. Bauer, county engineer, 130 Broad Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Bidders must enclose with their bids a certified check for $1,000.00, made payable to the order of John N. Cady, Director of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, as a guarantee that should the work be awarded to such bidder, the said bidder will enter into an agreement within the stated time, with the Board of Chosen Freeholders, for the carrying out of this work.

Bids for the above described work will be received by the County Road Committee of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, at the Court House, Elizabeth, New Jersey, at 2:30 p. m., on Wednesday, August 10, 1910.

Each bid must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, with the name of the bidder written plianly upon the outside of the envelope. The certified check must also be enclosed with the bid.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids, as they may deem best for the interests of the County of Union.

Bidders must be prepared to satisfy the Committee that they have had experience in doing the class of work bid upon, and that they have the necessary plant and means to carry out the work, in case the same should be awarded to them.

MINT COIN COUNTER.

New Weighing Apparatus an Interesting Piece of Mechanism.

A most interesting machine recently installed in the United States mint is the automatic weigher for coins of all denominations. Last year the government coined nearly 8,500,000 pieces of gold and 36,000,000 pieces of silver. Formerly each piece was weighed by hand. Seated at long tables, each with a balance in front of her, were from thirty to sixty women "adjusters." It was their duty to weigh each piece. Pieces which were too heavy were reduced with a file. Those that were too light were thrown aside to be put again into the melting pot. Gold pieces were weighed twice, once in blank and once after coinage.

The new weighing machines have each ten balances, which are set according to the required weight of the coin which is being tested. Then they work automatically, each machine taking ten coins at a time. The movement of the beams of the scales determines into which of several chutes the weighed coin shall drop. If it is too light the scale beam moves up and the coin is dropped into the "lights." If it is too heavy the scale beam drops and the coin falls into the "heavies." If it just balances the coin drops among the coins which are of the proper weight. The work is very rapid and very accurate.

There are eight of the weighing machines now in the mint, and they have displaced thirty-four women who earned $2 a day. Even with the weighing machines in operation the entire requirements of the law are not complied with mechanically. The law limits the deviation of coins in bulk as well as in weight. They must therefore be divided into four groups, which are, in the language of the mint, "acceptable heavies," "acceptable lights," "too heavies" and "too lights." A bag of coins, therefore, must not be made up altogether of coins which possess the highest degree of "tolerance" nor of coins having the lowest degree of "tolerance." If a bag were filled with 500 "acceptable heavy" half dollars it might weigh from 500 to 1,000 grains more than a bag filled with 500 "acceptable lights" of the same denomination. Therefore the coins have to be mixed in proper proportion to bring the weight of the bag to the legal requirements.—Philadelphia Record.

Largest Ships Tie Up at New Orleans.

New Orleans is the only city in the United States at which battleships tie up at the wharf. The battleship Mississippi was the first to do so, tying up at the Jackson avenue wharf on her trip up the Mississippi river to Natchez. The battleship Wisconsin followed her example. Many cruisers have done the same thing, including the German cruiser Bremen. This simply illustrates the depth of the harbor. Any ship afloat can come into New Orleans when the southwest pass is thrown open to navigation. Every ship, with a few exceptions, can come in now through south pass, in which is maintained an average depth of thirty-five feet. Southwest pass will have forty-five feet and now nears completion. The harbor averages a hundred feet in depth at low water.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bold, Bad Elephants.

The destructiveness of elephants is shown in a British blue book on the preservation of wild animals in Africa. An official report from Uganda says that "the elephants seem to have become more bold than they were two years ago. I came across flourishing gardens and plantations that had been absolutely wiped out by the herds of wild elephants roaming through the country. The complete destruction wreaked by these beasts is hardly credible, and the natives are getting desperate." The governor of Uganda reported that the elephants "have become so bold that they not only feed at night in the native maize gardens, but actually enter the villages, remove the roofs of the corn stores and help themselves."

Cup Defender Has Become Oil Barge.

The Pilgrim, a former palatial ninety foot yacht built to defend the America's cup in 1893, but which did not go against the Valkyrie II., as the Defender won the trial races, started recently on what will probably be the last chapter of her career, that of a gasoline supply boat to be located in Marblehead harbor. The craft, on which no money was spared when being built and on which thousands have been spent, was stripped of all her machinery and finery at the Atlantic works, East Boston, and in place of her former mahogany fittings of its pit there now lies a huge gasoline tank that will hold hundreds of gallons.—Boston Post.

The Lake of Blood.

The "Lake of Blood," the Roth-See, near Lucerne, has assumed its sanguinary color again, after many years, owing to the presence of a seaweed which is rarely found in the Alps. The peasants will not visit the lake and have ordered their children not to look at it, as they believe misfortune is sure to follow. Whenever this lake becomes red the peasants believe that wars are sure to come, and therefore it is predicted that before the end of this year a war will break out somewhere in the world.

To Exterminate Flies.

Prepare a solution containing a teaspoonful of formaldehyde to a cup of water, add a little sugar and place around the room in saucers. A quarter of an inch deep is sufficient. Flies, attracted to this mixture, drink. Some die in the water, others fall dead near the place. The solution is not dangerous.

Too Common.

"What's this clause here in fine print?" asked the man who was taking out the accident insurance policy.

"That's a notification that we decline to be held responsible in cases of alleged plantitis."

"Plantitis! What the blue blazes is that?"

"That's the general name for a very common line of accidents that happen to men who are forced to move their wives' rubber plants about the house."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Human Interest.

I don't pretend to know the ways
Of baseball men. I'm baffled quite
By writers who describe the plays
In language weirdly erudite,
And yet I cheer and cheer again,
I love the pastime, truth to tell,
Because it gives me now and then
A chance to get outdoors and yell.

Not the Same Spelling.

A stout man had recourse to a doctor to see whether something could not be done to reduce his size. "It's a disgrace, doctor!" he cried. "Just look at this bay window of mine! Now, what would you advise?"

"Well," replied the physician, eying his waist line, "all I can suggest is to diet."

"All right, doctor; I'm willing. What color would you suggest?"—Philadelphia Press.

Application Refused.

Upon a bet the damsel wed.
Ere many weeks, of course,
She went before a judge and said
She wanted a divorce.

The judge evinced but slight regret
And told her, with a snort,
That one who married on a bet
Should be a gamer sport.
—Kansas City Journal.

A Dirge.

She laid the still white form beside those which had gone before. No sob, no sigh, forced its way from her heart, throbbing as though it would burst. Suddenly a cry broke the stillness of the place—one single heartbreaking shriek; then silence, another cry, more silence, then all silent but for a guttural murmur, which seemed to well up from her very soul. She left the place. She would lay another egg tomorrow.—Princeton Tiger.

Trouble Ahead.

We do not care a rap
About this liquid fuss.
A milk and water scrap
Has no regrets for us.
But later we expect
A riot or a raid.
How will the strike affect
The ice cream soda maid?
—Boston Herald.

In Search of a Boon.

"I have been trying for twenty years," said the poverty stricken scientist, "to find some use for thistles."

"Why do you waste your time in such a foolish way?"

"Foolish? Don't say that. Think of the boon it will be to mankind if I succeed! As soon as any kind of use can be found for them they will quit growing without being tenderly cared for."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Fraternal Feeling.

There was a young fellow named Wister,
Who was seen with a girl when he kissed her,
And belief people feigned
When it was explained
'Twas his sister. That's why Wister kissed her.
—Baltimore American.

Real Modern.

Foreman (of the Webfoot Weekly Chronicle)—Well, we're all ready to go to press, Si.

The Editor (looking out of window)—Just hold yer hosses fer a few minutes longer, Ezry. I see Dr. Crosby comin' down the road from the direction uv Hiram Badgley's, and I want to publish in this here edition whether it's a boy or a girl or more.—Sunday Illustrated Magazine.

"Bohemian Girl."

I dreamed that I dwelt in marble halls
With furniture mounted in gold.
I walked on those marble floors with the kid,
And my bare feet got mighty cold!
—Cleveland Leader.

Natural Enough.

"Mrs. Nervey wasn't invited to Mrs. Swellman's tea at all," Miss Gaddie was saying, "but she came, and when she entered the room the silence was positively painful."

"Naturally," remarked the hateful Mr. Knox. "Silence is always painful among women."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Explained.

I was shaving myself
When my wife butted in,
Which clearly accounts
For the gash in my chin.
—Detroit Free Press.

Striking Proof.

"That storm scene in the second act was the acme of realism."

"So it was."

"Why, a dozen women in the house jumped up and started to rush home to see if all the windows were down."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Fixed Habit.

He always makes a hit
With all the lovely misses.
The reason? This is it:
He stutters when he kisses.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

In New York.

Up to Date Gladys—Is it really such an improper play?

Up to Date Doris—Oh, it isn't just the play I'd want my father or brother to see, but it's all right for us girls.—Puck.

Invisible.

"Mary, Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?"
"I can't tell, because—oh, well,
A chicken swallowed it, you know."
—Chicago News

PEN PORTRAITS OF NOTED PEOPLE

Representative Butler Ames, Who Would Be a Senator.

Representative Butler Ames, who recently announced his candidacy to succeed Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, is serving his fourth term as a member of the lower house of congress.

In his announcement he says that he offers himself as a candidate, "having tried in vain to induce some one else to lead the fight against Boss Lodge and his political machine." Continuing, Mr. Ames says of the senator:

"With all his gifts and opportunities he has made such use of them that his continuance in public life depends not upon his service to the people of his state, but to a political machine. This machine is used as a club for the individual of independent thought and action, while it serves as a willing tool to those of wealth or influence and power seeking undue favors."

Congressman Ames is a native of Massachusetts, thirty-nine years old, and is a grandson of the late Benjamin F. Butler. He has won distinction in the varied fields of politics, warfare, engineering and as an inventor. A couple of years ago he tried his wings as an aviator, but apparently with no great success. He was educated at West Point, but resigned on graduation to take an engineering course at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On the outbreak of the Spanish war he enlisted and took part in the invasion of Porto Rico. For his services there he was promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Governor Harmon of Ohio.

The renomination of Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio to succeed himself has given much impetus to the movement to make him the presidential candidate of the Democratic party in 1912. If he wins in November, his friends say, he will be a hard man to beat in the national Democratic convention. Governor Harmon carried Ohio in the last presidential year, when Mr. Taft was the nominee for the office he now holds, both winning at the polls by pronounced majorities. The Buckeye State in that election presented the somewhat anomalous attitude of favoring the Republican candidate for the presidency and the Democratic candidate for governor.

Governor Harmon is a native of Ohio and is sixty-four years old. He was graduated from Denison college in 1866 and from the old Cincinnati Law school three years later. Twice elected judge of the superior court of Hamilton county, he resigned from the bench in 1887 before the expiration of his second term.

In June, 1895, Mr. Harmon was appointed attorney general of the United States by President Cleveland. William H. Taft, then a judge, was toastmaster at a banquet tendered Mr. Harmon by the Hamilton County Bar association and paid him this tribute:

"We are here because we know that he is eminently qualified to discharge the duties of his office with unbounded credit to his country, the administration, to us, his friends, and to himself."

CHAPTER XI.

"The Straight Death."

Hands were fumbling with the chain at the dungeon door.

It opened and Jeekum's ashen face shone in the candle-light. For a moment his frightened eyes rested on the two men still standing in their last embrace of friendship. A word of betrayal from them and he knew that his own doom was sealed.

He came in, followed by four men. One of them was MacDougall, the king's whipper. In the corridor were other faces, like ghostly shadows in the darkness. Only MacDougall's face was uncovered. The others were hidden behind white masks. The men uttered no sound, but ranged themselves like specters in front of the door, their cocked rifles swung into the crooks of their arms. There was a triumphant leer on MacDougall's lips as he and the jailer approached. As the whipper bound Neil's hands behind his back he hissed in his ear:

"This will be a better job than the whipping, damn you!"

Neil laughed.

"Hear that, Nat?" he asked, loud enough for all in the cell to hear. "MacDougall says this will be a better job than the whipping. He remembers how I thrashed him once when he said something to Marion one day."

Neil was as cool as though acting his part in a play. His face was flushed, his eyes gleamed fearlessly defiant. And Nathaniel, looking upon the courage of this man, from under whose feet had been swept all hope of life, felt a twinge of shame at his own nervousness. MacDougall grew black with passion at the taunting reminder of his humiliation and tightened the thongs about Neil's wrists until they cut into the flesh.

"That's enough, you coward!" exclaimed Nathaniel, as he saw the blood start. "Here—take this!"

Like lightning he struck out and his fist fell with crushing force against the side of the man's head. MacDougall toppled back with a hollow groan, blood spurting from his mouth and nose. Nathaniel turned coolly to the four rifles leveled at his breast.

"A pretty puppet to do the king's commands!" he cried. "If there's a man among you let him finish the work!"

Jeekum had fallen upon his knees beside the whipper.

"Great God!" he shrieked. "You've killed him! You've stove in the side of his head!"

There was a sudden commotion in the corridor. A terrible voice boomed forth in a roar.

"Let me in!"

Strang stood in the door. He gave a single glance at the man gasping and bleeding in the mud. Then he looked at Nathaniel. The eyes of the two men met unflinching. There was no hatred now in the prophet's face.

"Captain Plum, I would give a tenth of my kingdom for a brother like you!" he said calmly. "Here—I will finish the work." He went boldly to the task, and as he tied Nathaniel's arms behind him he added "The vicissitudes of war, Captain Plum. You are a man—and can appreciate what they sometimes mean!"

A few minutes later, gagged and bound, the prisoners fell behind two of the [illegible] as the command from the king, given in a low tone to Jeekum, marched through the corridor and up the short flight of steps that led out of the jail. To Nathaniel's astonishment there was no light to guide them. Candles and lights had been extinguished. What words he heard were spoken in whispers. In the deep shadow of the prison wall a third guard joined the two ahead and like automatons they strode through the gloom with slow, measured step, their rifles held with soldierly precision. Nathaniel glanced over his shoulder and saw three other white masked faces a dozen feet away. The king remained behind.

He shuddered and looked at Neil. His companion's appearance was almost startling. He seemed half a head taller than himself, yet he knew that he was shorter by an inch or two; his shoulders were thrown back, his chin held high, he kept step with the guards ahead. He was marching to his death as coolly as though on parade.

Nathaniel's heart beat excitedly as they came to where the scrub of the forest met the plain. They were taking the path that led to Marion's. Again he looked at Neil. There was no change in the fearless attitude of Marion's brother, no lowering of his head, no faltering in his step. They passed the graves and entered the opening in the forest where lay Marion's home, and as once more the sweet odor of lilac came to him, awakening within his soul all those things that he had tried to stifle that he might meet death like a man, he felt himself weakening, until only the cloth about his mouth restrained the moaning cry that forced itself to his lips. If he had possessed a life to give he would have sacrificed it gladly then for a word with the Mormon king, a last prayer that death might be meted to him here, where eternity would come to him with his glazing eyes fixed to the end upon the home of his beloved, and where the sweetness of the flower that had become a part of Marion herself might soothe the pain of his final moment on earth.

His heart leaped with a hope as a sharp voice from the rear commanded a halt. It was Jeekum. He came up out of the darkness from behind the rear guard, his face still unmasked, and for a few moments was in whispered consultation with the guards ahead. Had Strang, in the virulence of that hatred which he concealed so well, conceived of this spot to give added torment to death? It was the poetry of vengeance! For the first time Neil turned toward his companion. Each read what the other had guessed. Neil, who was nearest to the whispering four, turned suddenly toward them and listened. When he looked at Nathaniel again it was with a slow negative shake of his head.

Jeekum returned quickly and placed himself between them, seizing each by an arm, and the forward guards, pivoting to the left, set off at their steady pace across the clearing. As they entered the denser gloom of the forest on the farther side Nathaniel felt the jailer's fingers tighten about his arm, then relax—and tighten again. A gentle pressure held him back and the guards in front gained half a dozen feet. In a low voice Jeekum called for those behind to fall a few paces to the rear.

Then came again the mysterious working of the man's fingers on Nathaniel's arm.

Was Jeekum signaling to him?

He could see Neil's white face still turned stoically to the front. Evidently nothing had occurred to arouse his suspicions. If the maneuvering of Jeekum's fingers meant anything it was intended for him alone. Action had been the manna of his life. The possibility of new adventure, even in the face of death, thrilled him. He waited, breathless—and the strange pressure came again, so hard that it hurt his flesh.

There was no longer a doubt in his mind. The king's sheriff wanted to speak to him.

And he was afraid of the eyes and ears behind.

The fingers were cautioning him to be ready—when the opportunity came.

The path widened and through the thin treetops above their heads the starlight filtered down upon them. The leading guards were 20 feet away. How far behind were the others?

A moment more and they plunged into deep night again. The figures ahead were mere shadows. Again the fingers dug into Nathaniel's arm, and pressing close to the sheriff he bent down his head.

A low, quick whisper fell in his ear.

"Don't give up hope! Marion—Winnsome—"

The sheriff jerked himself erect without finishing. Hurried footsteps had come close to their heels. The rear guards were so near that they could have touched them with their guns. Had some spot of lesser gloom ahead betrayed the prisoner's bowed head and Jeekum's white face turned to it? There was a steady pressure on Nathaniel's arm now, a warning, frightened pressure, and the hand that made it trembled. Jeekum feared the worst—but his fear was not greater than the chill of disappointment that came to smother the excited beating of Nathaniel's heart. What had the jailer meant to say? What did he know about Marion and Winnsome, and why had he given birth to new hope in the same breath that he mentioned their names?

His words carried at least one conviction. Marion was alive despite her brother's somber prophecies. If she had killed herself the sheriff would not have coupled her name with Winnsome's in the way he had.

Nathaniel's nerves were breaking with suspense. He stifled his breath to listen, to catch the faintest whisper that might come to him from the white faced man at his side. Each passing moment of silence added to his desperation. He squeezed the sheriff's hand in his arm, but there was no responding signal; in a patch of thick gloom that almost concealed the figures ahead he pressed near to him and lowered his head again—and Jeekum pushed him back fiercely, with a low curse.

They emerged from the forest and the clear starlight shone down upon them. A little distance off lay the lake in shimmering stillness. Nathaniel looked boldly at the sheriff now, and as his glance passed beyond him he was amazed at the change that had come over Neil. The young man's head was bowed heavily upon his breast, his shoulders were hunched forward, and he walked with a listless, uneven step. Was it possible that his magnificent courage had at last given way?

A hundred steps farther they came to the beach and Nathaniel saw a boat at the water's edge with a single figure guarding it. Straight to this Jeekum led his prisoners. For the first time he spoke to them aloud.

"One in front, the other in back," he said.

Tens of Thousands of Dollars' Worth in Our Annual Advance Sale

Beginning Tomorrow, Continuing Thruout August Prices That Baffle Competition

As long ago as last Febraruy, our fur experts were selecting skins and having makers fashion them into coats, scarfs and muffs the best way they knew how—one in competition with the other. Thruout February, March and April fur garments of all kinds, shapes, sizes and qualities were being assembled in our New York buying headquarters. All told 135 makers sent us stuff for comparison.

Our fur chief, ably assisted, compared and tested, sorted and selected, over and over again, until, after weeks of conscientious work and no little worry, the product of 28 makers was accepted as fit for representation in the stocks of this store and the stores all over the country allied with us.

Then came a congress of buyers—trained representatives from every important store—North, South, West and East—working in unison with us, each selecting such garments as would best meet the demands of his trade, and the quantities likely to be required. Can you imagine what these gigantic combined orders meant to the makers of furs? No such fur buying has ever been known. It ought to be clear to the dullest mind that in anticipation of these orders and knowing what competition had to be met, the prices quoted our buyers would be the very lowest it was possible to name under any conditions—and we know that in many instances the price of pelts had advanced most decidedly before deliveries were made, and many of the makers would have been glad to have us cancel our orders.

We own the furs gathered for this Advance Sale at positively lower prices than they can be secured by any house seeking to compete with us.

More than that—we are going to sell them at prices as low as most makers must ask our fellow storekeepers to-day at wholesale!

Two manufacturing furriers looking over our samples of coats admited, only three days ago, that they couldn't sell us as cheaply as we will sell to our patrons.

One maker offered us an advance of $5 apiece for a lot of 200 Pony Coats we had secured.

Knowing just where we stand in a quality and price way, we can state emphatically that We will sell Fur Coats, Scarfs and Muffs for less than any other store in Jersey.

Important Features of the Advance Fur Sale

A Notable Feature—During this sale we will offer

52-inch Elegant Persian Lamb Coats of fine lustrous skins, superbly lined with brocaded satin, for only.....$285

Scarfs and Muffs at Notably Low Prices

This advance Fur Sale will bring to you the greatest collection of scarfs and muffs ever shown in Newark at prices so low as to tempt the dollars from your purses as never before. We will not go into detail, simply giving you the price range, anticipating that you will be eager to see these furs, and that when you do see them you will appreciate the unapproachable values we offer.

Mink Scarfs $15 to $125.

Skunk Scarfs $16.50 to $75.

Sable Raccoon Scarfs $7.50 to $39.50.

Black or Blue Wolf Scarfs $15 to $35.

Gray or Blended Squirrel Scarfs $3.98 to $15

Australian Opossum Scarfs $10.50 to $45.

Black Lynx Scarfs $15 to $89.

Black Fox Scarfs $8.50 to $65.

Persian Lamb Scarfs $16.50 to $49.

Sitka Wolf, Pointed Scarfs $39.50 to $59.50.

Muffs to Match in all the new shapes, including barrel, half barrel and pillow.

Note—Furs bought during July or August will be stored free of charge in our Cold Storage Vaults until you wish to wear them in the Fall.

A reasonable deposit will secure any fur coat, scarf or muff for delivery in the Fall.

Pony Coats—Immensely popular last season, will be in far greater demand this season, and we thank our lucky stars that we have secured the most beautifully marked pony coats it has ever been our pleasure to present. The very best sample garments entered in competition by the many furriers have been retained and will be featured in this great sale, which begins Monday and runs thru the month of August.

Conspicuous in the collection of Pony Coats this season will be those with collars and cuffs and edged trimmings of contrasting furs, such as Adelaide Chinchilla, Sable Raccoon, Black Fox and other furs.

The advances in the prices of pony skins have been enormous, approximating almost double last year's cost, yet, amazing as it may seem, we will, despite the advance, sell the most beautifully marked pony skin coats in such fashionable lengths as 36-inch, 40-inch, 42-inch, 50-inch, 52-inch and 54-inch at last year's prices, beginning at $29.50 and going to $125.

The variety of pony skin coats in this collection is immense and is sure to satisfy every taste.

Electric and Hudson Seal Coats will also be in much greater demand than heretofore. These superb garments, rich and elegant looking, have also advanced most decidedly in cost over last year, but we will be able to sell them as cheaply as they have been bought heretofore, actually matching manufacturers' wholesale prices in many instances, making it immensely profitable for you to buy during this advance sale.

Electric and Hudson Seal Coats are here with collars and cuffs of Alaska Sable, Natural Raccoon, Adelaide Chinchilla, Sable Raccoon, Natural Beaver and Seal at remarkably low prices.

Atlantic Seal Coats, trimmed with Adelaide Chinchilla, $98.

Atlantic Seal Coats, trimmed with beaver, $98.

Nearseal Coats, trimmed with raccoon, $98.

Nearseal Coats, trimmed with skunk, $125.

Hudson Seal Coats, very beautiful indeed, $189.

Fine Caracul Coats, $65.

36-in. Blended Squirrel Coats, $95.

42-in. Blended Squirrel Coats, $115.

52-in. Blended Seal Coats, $145.

SOMERVILLE 'DEAD EASY'

Frederickson Pitches in Fine Form for the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Nine.

THE SCORE WAS 6 TO 2.

Wilcox and Marsh Show Up In Good Shape As Batters and Hand Also Shines.

In a slow, listless game, which was void of anything like excitement, the Plainfield Y. M. C. baseball team took the scalps of the Somerville B. A. nine by a score of 6—2 on the Oval Saturday afternoon. The locals pinched the game in the first inning and, try as the Somerville team would, it could not get a look in to even make the contest an interesting one. It was simply a question of opportune hitting and steady playing in the pinches that scored a victory for the Plainfield team, although the pitching of Frederickson, a new man from the "Netherwoods", played an important part with the scarcity of Somerville runs. Only three measly hits were secured off his delivery and he sent thirteen of the opposing batsmen to the bench via the strike-out route.

Brunt started in to pitch for the Somerville team and the locals got after him with a rush. Wilcox, the first Plainfield man up, singled, reached second on Taylor's sacrifice fly, and came home with the first run on Peacock's sharp hit to second base. Fritts then laced out a beautiful three bagger, bringing in Peacock. Platt Adams, of Olympic fame, then sent a hard grounder down the third base line, but the third baseman in his haste and anxiety did the sky-rocket stunt with the ball over the catcher's head and Fritts and Adams jogged home.

Plainfield added another in the second on a couple of hits and an error. Then in the third, Dumont sent a shudder through the Somerville delegation by banging out a neat three sacker. Hand kept up the cannonade with a single and Mr. Brunt took a walk out into left field, Henderson replacing him. From then on the scoring ceased for the Y. M. C. A. boys, who could not seem to bunch their hits off Henderson's delivery.

Somerville never looked dangerous although two runs were scored by them on errors and a hit. For the visitors Henderson was the whole show with his steady box work and clever fielding. Van Pelt on third base also did good work for Somerville. Wilcox and Marsh carried off the honors for the Plainfield boys in the batting line but for a good steady game, Frederickson and Hand deserve credit.

EASY WIN FOR AARON B. AT SATURDAY MATINEE

A good sized crowd watched the races of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club at the matinee held Saturda afternoon on the track of the Plainfield Riding and Driving Club. While the finishes were not close in any of the events the card of four races furnished some excellent sport.

In the free for all event, second on the card, Lady May, belonging to Sam Kelly, declined the issue which was fought out between Adam Blair's Aaron B. and H. Brantingham's Dick Walsh. The latter was not in it, Aaron B. winning in straight heats, the last one in the fast time of 2:16¾. Following are the summaries:

First Race—2:21 trot and 2:24 pace—mixed.

Ben Dat (C. J. Farr) 1 1 2 1
Foxy Todd (W. Hutchings) . 2 2 1 2
Time 2:21¾, 2:25, 2:26¾, 2:23¾.

Second Race—Free For All.

Aaron B. (Adam Blair) 1 1 1
Dick Walsh (H. Brantingham) . 2 2 2
Time 2:34, 2.30, 2:16¾.

Third Race—2:30 mixed.

Helen Nelson (Ed. Ellis) 1 1 1
Brother Prince (C. B. Smith) . 2 3 2
Red (C. H. McKay) 3 2 3
Time 2:28¼, 2:25½, 2:28.

Fourth Race—Three minute mixed.

Midnight Herr (John Case) ... 3 3
Time 2:40, 2:38½.

SATURDAY'S RESULTS ON THE GOLF COURSES

In the fourball handicap for Classes A and B at the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday in which the best ball counted, Messrs. Kauffman and Erickson turned in the lowest score, their net being 62 for the course.

The intense heat kept many others in single matches from the course. The following cards were turned in:

W. T. Kauffman and J. E. Erickson, 76, 14—62; Dudley H. Barrows and W. L. Glenney, 73, 4—69; E. T. Willson and E. A. Cruikshank, 79, 10—69; Clifton Wharton, Jr., and Stewart H. Patterson, 83, 14—69; O. Wilson Gott and T. C. Langdon, 81, 10—71; H. V. Hibbard and W. T. Glenney, 79, 7—72.

Some good scores were made in the continuation of the match for the President's Cup. W. V. Byard again leading with a net score of 70. Following were the cards returned:

W. V. Byard, 92, 22—70; W. E. Lough, 100, 24—76; Miss Loizeaux, 100, 23—77; R. B. Titsworth, 99, 22—77; W. R. Faber, 101, 22—79; U. G. Tingley, 106, 27—79; Dr. R. K. Carroll, 95, 16—79; C. B. Morse, 108, 19—89.

Saturday's scores:

H. J. Cochran defeated W. Barlow, 6—0; 7—5. A. D. Beers defeated C. L. Daniels 2d, 6—3; 6—0. Semi-final, H. J. Cochran defeated D. W. Mulford, 7—5; 11—9.

PLAINFIELD LEFT FIELD

Kicked Over Finishing Contest After Rain and Rahway is Given Game.

THE UMPIRE SAID 9 TO 9.

Plainfield Was Ahead When Downpour Came—McLaughlin and Knoth Were Batted Freely.

The Plainfield Baseball Club journeyed over to Rahway Saturday afternoon and came back a disgusted lot of men. Disgusted at themselves? Not at all but thoroughly provoked at the Rahway baseball justice. It was the same old story of the Rahway pitcher having lots of speed and the umpire having excellent control that dissatisfied the Plainfielders. The Rahway A. C. team was out for blood and so was the sporting public of that quiet little town, and the umpire was out to lunch when it came to giving a square deal.

In other words Plainfield was ahead 7-6 when the floods descended and it was Rahway's turn at the bat. But the diamond soon became a lake and both teams started to leave the field. Then the rain held up a bit and the umpire realized that the game would count as a victory for Plainfield, so he called the teams back to play. Of course there was a strenuous kick but his nibs insisted and Rahway had it all their way with a slippery ball for the Plainfield boys to field. After enduring the free benefit for a while, the local team refused to be the goats any longer and so they stopped. The game was then forfeited to Rahway, 9-0.

Both McLaughlin and Knoth were batted freely but the Rahway twirler was inclinded to be wild at times. Seven errors were charged against the Plainfield team, Emery being responsible for three of them. The popular third baseman certainly had an off day. Boyd was the star hitter of the game with three safeties to his credit, while Martin and Carlstrom registered two clean ones each.

For Rahway Armstrong, Boltz and Boyne were the shining lights, each of them getting two hits beside playing well in the field.

UNINTERESTING GAME IS WON BY GARWOOD

Dunellen defeated Garwood Saturday in a quickly played and very interesting game. Dunellen obtained a lead of one run in the third; Giles singled to left, stole second and kept on going to third when Bean threw wild and high to catch him stealing. The ball went to Centerfielder Wade, who allowed Giles to cross the rubber when he relayed the ball poorly to third.

Dunellen cinched the game in the fifth. Piddington, the first man up in that inning, singled through short, sole second, went to third on a passed ball and remained there while Clark and Dodwell were striking out. Giddes, the next man up, was equal to the occasion bringing Piddington home on a single to short right. Giddes stole second and Giles brought him home on a long two-base hit over Leftfielder Kein's head.

The nearest that Garwood came to scoring was in the second. One of Montross' fast inshoots cracked Linahan in the ribs; Brown, the next man up, struck out, then Kein knocked a beauty two base hit to deep left, but Linahan, who tried to score from first on the hit, was nailed at the plate, Nonamaker to Montross to Seery.

N.P.A.C. TOO STRONG FOR NORTH BRANCH A.C.

The N. P. A. C. won from North Branch A. A. at North Branch Saturday afternoon by the score of 4 to 1. It was a fast and well played game, the N. P. A. C. getting the needed runs in the eighth and ninth innings, the score being 1 to 1 up to this time. In the eighth inning, with Feiring and Coriell on first and second, Lambertson hit a hot liner to left field, Feiring scoring. Coriell tried to come home on the hit but was nailed at the plate, Skillman to Higgins.

Higgins then threw the ball wild when he tried to catch Lambertson stealing third, Lambertson scoring. North Branch tried hard to score in their half of the inning, but was prevented by Feiring, who caught Higgins' hot liner, doubling up Kline, who was on second at the time, unassisted. Just to make the game sure the N. P. A. C. added another run in the ninth inning. W. Perry pitched a fine game, getting nine strike-outs and issuing no passes. Haver got but three strike-outs. G. Perry caught a fine game. Baldwin put up a good game at short. Mr. Shaw, the umpire, did well, neither side having any kicks coming over his decisions. Next Saturday N. P. A. C. will play the Gillette A. C. at Gillette.

CONG. CONTEST COMMENT

Views Expressed by the Newspapers on Both Runyon and Fowler.

PLAINFIELDER IS FAVORED.

Some Hard Knocks and Convincing Arguments Against the Present Representative of the Fifth District.

Excepting a few Democratic and one or two so-called Republican papers which are advocating Charles N. Fowler's claims for the purpose of causing a disruption in the Republican party, the press of the state supports the candidacy of Judge William N. Runyon for the Republican congressional nomination in the Fifth district. In these columns have already been reproduced the comments of many of the leading dailies and weeklies on the congressional situation.

Here are some others:

Morristown News—With hardly an exception, the newspapers of this Congressional district are opposed to the renomination of Mr. Fowler, for Congress.

The general ground taken is that, as a national factor in his own party, his usefulness has ceased; for one who has so severely criticized the present administration of President Taft and bitterly opposed its policies, is not the man to represent such a hide-bound tariff district as the Fifth Congressional District has always shown itself to be.

An Exaggerated Ego has evidently gotten a stranglehold on our Congressman.

Iron Era—Congressman Charles N. Fowler has paid a couple of visits to ex-President Roosevelt and the latter was at the Roosevelt home. It is said he talked two hours and forty minutes with his host and left looking very much pleased—and said he was.

Some papers—partly Democratic and partly Independent, so-called—have said that the ex-President will either come into this district personally or by representative to take up the fight for Fowler's renomination.

The Republicans of the Fifth district would gladly welcome Mr. Roosevelt if he should come here to talk, but they do not need his assistance in choosing a candidate for Congress.

Mr. Fowler is a bright man and a very eloquent orator but a mighty poor letter writer if we take his recent tirade into consideration

* * * * * *

It has been argued that we need Mr. Fowler because of his great knowledge of finance and banking but what number of bills of his framing have passed Congress, notwithstanding his knowledge of the question?

The last time one great reason he was returned was because of the very important chairmanship he held. He went back and whether his personal fight with Speaker Cannon benefitted this district is not certain. He lost the chairmanship and did no more than a new official would and not so much as one could have done.

Now, Mr. Fowler is asking to be given another chance because of his fight against Cannon and bossism. He has been in the past very regular, but for office sake he becomes quickly an enthusiastic supporter of reform (?).

The affable and eloquent Congressman is really not so sure he wants to go back to Washington as Congressman, himself. He is working hard with one hand and oratory for that nomination, and laboring just as hard with the other hand and oratory for support for John Kean's senatorial toga.

Presumably he wants to cinch the smaller honor and resign it if the greater distinction can be captured.

Morristown Jerseyman—Without prejudice to the prospects of candidates from this county, we announce the candidacy of Judge Runyon, of Union county, for the Congressional nomination for this district. While the nomination of right belongs to Morris county, the men who would naturally be selected do not see their way clear to accept of the honor. Messrs. McGraw and Capstick have been urged to consent to the use of their names for the position and have given the matter careful consideration with the result that they have positively declined to be considered. The ideal candidate, Judge Alfred Elmer Mills, when approached, so emphatically declined to even consider the matter that he was reluctantly let alone. While it is rumored that Mr. Fowler has declared

CRANFORD CLUB'S CIRCUS

The Greatest Show on Earth to Be Outdone by Society People Tomorrow Night.

THEY CALL IT "SCREAMLAND."

The Work of a Committee of Nine Women For Worthy Object—Boxing Bout On Program.

To-morrow night at Cranford society will turn out in full force to witness the spectacles to be presented at the Cranford Golf club house and grounds provided by members of the club and their friends. It's going to be a circus in more than one way, as its name signifies. The performance has been christened "Screamland" and from all accounts of the preparations it will be a scream from start to finish.

It will undoubtedly be a more elaborate affair than that given by the club last year, many startling features having been prepared by the competent committee. Novelties are promised in every part of the program. As no circus is complete without the "museum of human freaks", this feature will be carried to the limit. Besides the regulation "fat lady" and the bearded woman, there will be the tatooed man, the human pin cushion, the wild man from Oshkosh and the midget twins.

A Coney Island Midway will probably attract a crowd. Here you will find a beer garden, hot dog and ice cream stands, a bat dance, fortune teller a (royal Gypsy queen), Monsieur Le Duc de Brissac, with his automatic French dolls, and many other things too numerous to mention.

A four-round boxing bout between two unknowns will attract the men folks, and a militant suffragette will keep everybody on the jump in an effort to avoid her search for sympathy and votes. The performance will begin promptly at 8:15 and the doors will open at 7:30.

The committee having Screamland in charge is composed of Mrs. Frank Sloan, chairman; Mrs. C. C. Ventries, Mrs. R. C. Vidal, Mrs. R. B. Wasson, Mrs. S. M. Yeaman, Mrs. S. Wetherill, Mrs. G. S. Veit, Mrs. Frank Harriott and Mrs. E. H. Miller. The proceeds of the circus will be devoted to the club building fund.

PREVENT FLY BREEDING; MOVE OF HEALTH BOARD

In connection with the posting of the abstract of the State law in regard to the protection of food products from dust and flies, it is the intention of the Board of Health to use all possible means to prevent the breeding of flies. As fully four-fifths of these pests are hatched in manure piles and like collections of filth, the board intends to see that the requirements of Article No. 5 of the Sanitary Code are fulfilled. This article relates to the keeping of barns and stables in a clean and wholesome condition, and to the proper storage of manure in covered vaults and its frequent removal. If we are to be rid of flies and the trail of annoyance, disease and filth which they leave in their wake, their breeding places must be abolished.

If owners of stables will see that the proper provisions are made for the storage and removal of manure, the Board of Health will be saved the necessity of serving legal notices to that effect, and the owners will also save themselves the annoyance of having such a notice served on them.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Keep Cool.

END OF VOTING MACHINE

Elections in Districts Where They are Used Decide Their Fate Today.

RESULT IS NOT IN DOUBT.

Probably Only Five Per Cent of the Vote Will Be Cast—Polls Close At 7 o'Clock Tonight.

Not more than five per cent. of the registered vote will be cast to-day, it is believed, at the special election to decide whether the voting machine shall remain or be abolished. There is no question as to the result. Neither the Republican organization nor the "Progressive" Republicans are at all interested in the agitation. The Democrats and a handful of Republicans are the only ones voting.

The district boards are having an easy time at the respective polling places, and it is not probable that the election officers will have to spend much time after the polls close counting up the votes. In the first district of the first ward at 1 o'clock this afternoon only twenty-seven votes had been cast. They were all against the voting machine. The total registration in that district is 615. It is about the same way in the first districts of each of the four wards. The verdict will be about unanimous among those who took the trouble tog o to the polls.

The polling places:

First ward, First district, No. 138 North avenue.

Second ward, First district, No. 319 Watchung avenue.

Third ward, First district, Charles J. Fisk's barn, on the southwesterly side of Arlington avenue, between West Seventh and West Eighth streets.

Fourth ward, First district, No. 204 West Second street.

The polls close at 7 o'clock tonight.

COMPANY TAKES STEPS TO STOP WATER WASTE.

"The attention of our consumers is especially called to the following rules governing the use of lawn sprinklers and hand hose supplied by the Plainfield-Union Water Co.:

"'LAWN SPRINKLERS and HAND HOSE must be used only between the hours of 6 and 9 a. m., and 5 and 8 p. m., from the 1st of April to the 15th of October, and if found out of order or leaking, or if converted into jets, or if used for the benefit of any person other than the one obtaining the permit, or suffered to run when not used, or if used at a time not stated above, THE SUPPLY WILL BE CUT OFF WITHOUT PREVIOUS NOTICE.

"'ALL PERSONS USING A HOSE, EITHER IN FRONT OR REAR OF PREMISES, FROM A HYDRANT OR FAUCET CONNECTION, MUST FIRST OBTAIN A PERMIT FOR USE ONLY AT HOURS PERMITTED BY THE RULES AND REGULATIONS. PERMIT TO USE LAWN SPRINKLERS DOES NOT INCLUDE THE USE OF WATER FOR STREET SPRINKLING.'

"Several patrons of the Company whose attention, probably, has not been called to the above regulations, are in the habit of using lawn sprinklers and hand hose at times not permitted. The Company desires to treat its patrons with liberality, but is constrained to insist upon strict compliance with these regulations.

"Respectfully,
"PLAINFIELD-UNION WATER COMPANY." [Adv.]

DURAR LIKES LIFE IN THE CANAL ZONE.

Paul R. Collier has received a letter from George Durar, of South avenue, who is now employed by the U. S. government in Panama, in which Mr. Durar tells of the delights of the canal zone. He says that the climate is far from being unbearable and that the "food" is excellent. There is plenty to do besides work, he writes. The men, employed by the government, are, according to him, a fine set.

Mr. Durar was a member of the Plainfield High School, class of 1909, and is now employed in the engineering department of the Panama canal.

MRS. CHARLOTTE GODWIN, AGED EIGHTY-FOUR, DEAD

Mrs. Charlotte Swan Godwin, widow of John R. Godwin, died yesterday afternoon at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. L. G. Beard, 810 Hillside avenue. Mrs. Godwin was in her eighty-fifth year. She had been a resident of this city for the past sixteen years, coming here from Brooklyn. In her young years she had been a prominent figure in Brooklyn society, where the Godwins are known as one of the old families of the place.

Besides her daughter, Mrs. L. G. Beard, Mrs. Godwin leaves a daughter-in-law, Margaret R. Beard, two grandsons, Godwin Beard, of this city, and Curtis Beard, of Westfield, and a great grand daughter, Charlotte Beard, of Westfield.

The funeral services will be held at the home of her daughter, 810 Hillside avenue, to-morrow morning. Interment will be made in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

EAGLES' CONVENTION AT ST. LOUIS, AUG. 22

Arrangements are completed for the twelfth annual convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which opens in St. Louis, Mo., on August 22, and will continue four days. The holding of this convention in the Middle West means that in addition to the 2,000 delegates in attendance, 10,000 Eagles from the cities of the Mississippi valley will take part in the social festivities.

The Fraternal Order of Eagles has had a remarkable growth. Founded in Seattle twelve years ago, during the past five years it has forged to the front as one of the active brotherhoods of the valley and the Pacific coast. To-day there are 1,900 subordinate aeries located throughout the United States and Canada, and the total membership exceeds 300,000. During the past ten years the subordinate bodies have invested $6,000,000 in fraternal temples and clubrooms. Six million dollars have been disbursed to members as sick benefits during this period, and more than $1,000,000 has been paid in funeral benefits. This places the Fraternal Order of Eagles among the first of those organizations which combine benefit features with social good fellowship.

The leaders of this order realize that the time has arrived to map out and enforce definite larger policies for the government of the National and subordinate bodies. This implies that, apart from the social entertainment arranged by the St. Louis brethren, the coming convention will be one of the most important in the history of the order.

The convention will bring together a large number of men who have achieved prominence in civic and business fields. Frank E. Herring, former candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of Indiana, who will call the convention to order, is grand worthy president; Theodore E. Bell, of San Francisco, mentioned as a possible United States Senator from California, will head the delegation from the Far West; Senator Thomas F. Grady, who succeeds to the presidency this year, and Past President Bernard J. Monaghan, of Philadelphia, will be leading figures from the East.

NOT AFRAID THAT AUTOS WILL END HIS EXISTENCE.

U. B. Crane is about convinced that automobiles will never kill him or be the cause of any serious damage to his healthy frame. Last Saturday Mr. Crane's automobile skidded on the wet pavement on West Front street and tried to climb a tree, but didn't succeed and neither he nor the other occupants of the machine was injured.

Yesterday afternoon while Mr. Crane was standing by his bicycle in front of 164 East Front street, an automobile driven by Robert Meeker, Jr., skidded across the street, striking Mr. Crane and smashing his wheel, but fortunately did not hurt him. It was an accident and it won't prevent Mr. Crane's carrying out his intention of bringing home a mess of weakfish on Thursday next. He thinks he stands a good chance to break the record for weakfish catching this season.

Good Time For Excursionists.

An enjoyable time is promised all those who join the excursion of the Methodist Sunday-schools of this city and Dunellen and Wilson Memorial chapel to Asbury Park on Thursday, July 28. The train leaves Dunellen at 8 o'clock Clinton avenue at 8:06, Grant avenue at 8:08 and Plainfield station at 8:15.

FUND IS WITHOUT OWNER

Balance of Odd Fellows Home Association After Transfer of Property $15,219.67.

MUST MAKE AN APPLICATION.

Decree of Vice Chancellor Garrison to Be Brought Before the Grand Lodge of the State For Proper Action.

A fund of $15,219.67, now in control of the board of directors of the Odd Fellows' Home of New Jersey, is without a legal owner, and Odd Fellows throughout the State are interested in its probable disposition. Steps to be taken to settle the ownership of the fund will doubtless be decided upon at the next meeting of the grand lodge to be held in November.

The fund represents the balance on hand to the credit of the Odd Fellows' Home Association after the transfer of its property to the grand lodge January 25, 1908. It includes the sum of $12,000 paid by the grand lodge as consideration for the transfer and $3,219.67, a balance on hand before the sale, which was in the nature of a trust fund, only the income being available.

In his recent decree in the case of Sumner Lodge, No. 180, of Jersey City, against the Odd Fellows' Home and the grand lodge, Vice Chancellor Garrison said that if the Odd Fellows' Home Association has the right to dissolve under the law, and is unable to dispose of the fund without the interposition of the aid of the court, it should make proper application, bringing the proper parties before it, and raising the issue in a proper manner to have the court then pass upon the questions which would then have to be considered. He said no such issue was raised in that case, and he dismissed the bill.

Amos B. Pierce, past grand representative of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., said yesterday that the question left undecided by the vice chancellor will be brought before the grand lodge of the State at its next meeting.

"The home, which was first known as the Home for Aged and Indigent Odd Feddows, was established near Trenton about twenty-five years ago," said Mr. Pierce. "About sixty lodges out of something like 272 in the State participated in the organization and became members of the corporation. The dues of one cent a day from each member of the lodges joining did not support the home and it was dependent upon donations and contributions from lodges and members.

"From time to time the grand lodge donated considerable sums of money for the purpose of paying off the mortgage on the home. Such records of the home as are in existence show that for a period from January 1, 1896, to June, 1908, these various donations amounted to $14,288.59, or but little less than the fund now in dispute.

"At the time of the sale to the grand lodge," continued Mr. Pierce, "the board of directors of the home passed a resolution providing for a payment of $1 per member for each member of the constituent lodges, as a payment on account of what would be due on final distribution. The Sumner lodge then filed the bill to prevent such a method of distribution. In March, 1908, there was a meeting of representatives of these constituent lodges and a resolution was adopted by them to the effect that the fund be distributed among the various lodges and Rebekah lodges according to the amount actually paid in as dues by the respective lodges.

"At a subsequent meeting they passed another resolution providing that owing to the divergent and seemingly irreconcilable views held concerning the distribution of the fund that it is deemed for the best interests of all concerned that a definite judicial determination of the questions be had. After this Sumner Lodge amended 'ts bill, and included this latter resolution. As I understand the vice chancellor's opinion, it means that if the various interests cannot agree, then they should bring the matter before the court in a proper way.

"Old members of the association, in my opinion, ought to take action to renounce any claims of the association to the fund in favor of the grand lodge of the State. I believe this is the sentiment of the majority, though sentiment throughout the State is divided. Unless some action is taken the grand lodge will have to take the initiative and authorize proceedings to settle all claims."

FATALLY HIT BY AUTO,

Frank Potockny, Polish, Instantly Killed by Machine at Bound Brook.

HE SAVED BROTHER'S LIFE.

Glaring Searchlights On Slow Moving Car Confuses Youth Who Steps Directly In Its Path to Death.

Becoming confused by the glare of the searchlights of an automobile driven by Ernest Wadley at the corner of Hamilton and High streets in Bound Brook at 9 o'clock last night, Frank Potockny, a Polish boy seventeen years old, stepped directly in the path of the car and was knocked down and instantly killed. Potockny's skull was fractured and his face and hands severely cut by the broken glass of one of the searchlights of the car.

According to the eyewitnesses of the accident, the dead youth and his brother Louis, six years old, had been on an errand for their mother and were on their way home with a basket of clothes destined for the washtub. When the two boys reached the corner of Hamilton and High streets they started across, apparently not hearing the tooting horn of Mr. Wadley's car. The basket of clothes was on a little express wagon, and when the elder boy noticed the machine bearing down upon him he gave the little wagon a shove, putting his brother out of danger, but stepping back himself directly in the path of the machine.

The machine was traveling slowly, and Mr. Wadley shouted to the lad to look out. Just as he shouted Potockny started to retrace his steps and deliberately walked into the automobile. The mud guard of the machine knocked him down and the car went over the body. Bystanders quickly removed the boy to the sidewalk, where it was found that he was dead.

No blame has been attached to Mr. Wadley for the occurrence and he was allowed to proceed on his way after it was ascertained that there was no help for the lad. In the car with Wadley was a chauffeur from the garage where his car had been repaired, and it was while trying out the repairs to the brakes that the accident happened.

"FOWLER A DEMOCRAT"— CONGRESSMAN KINKEAD

Congressman Eugene F. Kinkead yesterday at Jersey City would not go into any further discussion of the Woodrow Wilson boom, in which he has taken such a deep interest, but he switched off to Congressman Charles N. Fowler, the insurgent Republican candidate for United States Senator's Kean's place. Mr. Kinkead said:

"In his speech at Passaic the other evening my colleague, Congressman Fowler, credits Speaker Cannon with having declared that Fowler is a Democrat and a demagogue.

"In my judgment the speaker was right at least in one of these appellations. Congressman Fowler is a Democrat without individually realizing the fact, and he does not possess enough courage to come over where he belongs—to the party of the people.

"If 'Uncle Joe' Cannon had continued the gentleman from the Fifth District of this state in the chairmanship of the committee on currency we would be hearing but little insurgent talk from Congressman Fowler."

MARTI DESSAUX TO STAY

Patriotic Boy From France Will Not Be Deported After All.

MRS. JOS. CLEARY GIVES BOND.

The Boy Who Sang "America" and the Marsellaise Coming Up the Bay Will Be Adopted By Plainfield Family.

Master Marti Augustus Dessaux, whose patriotic entrance to the city of New York two weeks ago was heralded all over the country, will be allowed to remain and become a citizen of the United States after all.

Mrs. Joseph Cleary, who wanted the boy and who will eventually adopt him, has given to the government a bond of $500, which guarantees that the boy will not become a public charge, and Master Dessaux will soon be in Plainfield if he has not already arrived.

When Mrs. Cleary was informed that under the law the little Frenchman could not land (he is only eleven years old) she at once took steps to secure his release from Ellis Island where Immigration Commissioner Williams was keeping him with the intention of deporting him by the same steamer on which he came to this country.

Mrs. Cleary and her husband went to New York on Saturday morning, taking with them the necessary documents to prove that they could furnish the bond required by the government, and after the papers were executed they were forwarded to Washington where their acceptance means the release of Master Dessaux and the addition to Plainfield of an embryo citizen whose patriotic impulses led him to sing America when coming up the bay.

The boy's father is an employee of the steamship line at Cherbourg, and when little Marti Dessaux looked for the last time on his native land upward of two hundred of his schoolmates were on the wharf waving their goodbyes to him and wishing him success in the land of liberty. Young Dessaux is said to be unusually bright for one of his age, and Mrs. Cleary declares that his future in this country is assured. She will adopt the boy as soon as the legal part of the matter can be adjusted and in all likelihood within a few years as a man Marti Dessaux will be heard from in no uncertain way.

McCARDELL'S WEALTH AS OBTAINED IN COURT.

"Andrew McCardell denounced him (Runyon) in terms and names unfit to print."

This is a quotation, or part of a quotation from the now famous or infamous letter against Judge Runyon signed by F. Willingly Done, of the Health Board, probably at the bequest of a friend (?).

Within the memory of a man, the same Mr. McCardell recovered six cents damages in court for being slandered in an equally irresponsible and untrue letter.

Mr. McCardell won't say anything. Will it be six cents more?

To Be Apple Growers.

Robert Sharrotts, of West Seventh street, and Dudley Strong, of Watchung avenue, have left this city for Oregon. They will engage in the apple growing industry which is a lucrative business in that section of the country. Before starting an orchard of their own they will work in one of a friend to obtain experience. Enroute to Oregon, the young men will stop off at Chicago, and several other western cities.

Farmer Willard In High Bridge.

Farmer E. A. Willard has gone to High Bridge to arrange for the hay and straw and farm implements to be used in the Haymakers' convention to be held in this city on August 6. I was originally intended to empower Farmer Willard to arrange for the Corn Juice also, but it was found that enough of that commodity was to be had in this city.

Dinner Parties at Country Club.

Dinner parties at the Plainfield Country Club are beginning to become popular among the club members this hot weather. hTe cool breezes from the country make the spot popular as well as delightful for evening parties.

Fell From Scaffold.

Pasquale Colusso, an Italian laborer, fell from a scaffolding at No. 219 Plainfield avenue this morning and sustained injuries to his back. It has not yet been determined how seriously hurt the man is.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield housewives are glad to know that the work of sprinkling the streets with tar was completed for the season Saturday. There is the customary complaint of ruined carpets and waxed floors. In dozens of cases people have taken up their carpets or covered them while the work of tarring the streets has been going on.

Alexander Rowland, of this town, was arrested and fined $15 at Springfield, Mass., for running an automobile in that State without a Massachusetts license.

A large party from Orange had a dinner at the North Avenue Hotel last evening after going the rounds of the town in a sight-seeing automobile.

Westfield avenue, from Park street to Grove street, is practically closed on account of the sewer construction.

SOMERVILLE.

Rev. A. A. Pfansteihl, pastor of the Second Reformed church, left with his son this morning for his vacation. They traveled by boat to Albany, there taking the train to Chicago. Mr. Pfansteihl will be away until September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Faulk and children, of Newark, are visiting Mrs. Faulk's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ringleman, on West High street.

Misses Jane Messenger and Blanche Bascom are spending their vacation at Booth Bay Harbor, Me.

Mr. and Mrs. William Garretson, of West High street, are spending two weeks at Asbury Park.

The Fourth Reformed Sunday-school will picnic to Chimney Rock on Wednesday, August 3.

H. Dayton Heagland, of West Cliff street, is spending his vacation at Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Reger, of East Cliff street, have returned from Asbury Park.

Fred and Miss Martha Keller are spending a week at Asbury Park.

George R. Nolan and Charles Holcombe are at Lake Hopatcong.

RARITAN.

Miss Agnes Trimmer, of Newark, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Adair on Somerset street.

Miss Edna Nixon and Merrell Graham are spending three weeks in Philadelphia.

Miss Rose Becker returned on Saturday from western New York State.

Harry Larkin has been visiting friends in Royceficld for a week.

Benjamin Southerland spent last week with friends in Newark.

DUNELLEN.

Miss Meta Pennock has accepted a position as teacher in an Episcopal school in New York State, assuming her duties in the fall. Miss Pennock was graduated from the Plainfield High School, class 1910, of which she was valedictorian.

Mr. and Mrs. Alden Wilmot, of Washington avenue and Third street, are rejoicing over the arrival of a bouncing boy. He weighs nine pounds.

A. E. Hickman, of Lincoln, broke his bicycle while riding in Plainfield yesterday, and was detained there several hours awaiting repairs.

Harry Giddes has changed his vacation plans. Instead of going up in Northern Jersey, he will take a trip to Washington, D. C.

While working on the new Runyon building yesterday, George Apgar fell through the beams, injuring his right arm.

Miss Susan Lourie, of North avenue, is taking up kindergarten work in New York city for the summer.

Several local people attended the performance of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show in Plainfield today.

J. C. Dilts had a sick horse on his hands Sunday night. The animal had the colic.

The condition of Samuel Merrel, who is seriously ill, remains about the same.

Miss May Day has accepted a position in A. E. Force's store in Plainfield.

Organ P. Curl started his vacation this week. He will visit Middlebush.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Robert Cook, of Cook Brothers, Mountain avenue, is making his place one of the prettiest spots in this section of the country. Parks have been laid out, a regular menagerie is on the grounds and a lake is to be made that will be large enough to enjoy a sail on its waters with a motor boat. The place has become one of the show places hereabouts and is a favorite stopping place for automobile parties.

George Brick, a student at Georgetown University, who has been spending a vacation of several weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brick, has returned to Washington, D. C., where he is doing hospital work during his vacation.

It was one month Saturday since Scotch Plains had its last rain. Towns all about seem to get a little now and then but we seem to be out of the wet belt. Unless rain falls soon the garden truck and farm crops will be burnt up.

The center of the town and Front street has been in total darkness for the past two nights, not an electric light on the circuit working.

Mrs. Augusta Miller and daughter, Mrs. George L. Dunn and children left Saturday for a week's stay at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Joseph Schwalbach, of Westfield avenue, has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Ryno, of Haverstraw, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hollingsworth, of Stout avenue, are sojourning for several weeks at Asbury Park.

Mrs. Edward L. Hand, of Park avenue, is entertaining her niece, Miss Hazel Hand, of Sanford, Florida.

Frank C. Langhorne and family are spending their vacation in Newport, R. I.

Miss Edith Hanaford, of East Sixth street, is visiting relatives in Bound Brook.

Miss Gertrude Bolby, of Park avenue, has gone to Clinton, N. J., for a visit of a few weeks.

Miss Marguerite Ramsey, of Crescent avenue, left today for a two weeks' visit in Clinton, N. J.

Harry Woodland, of Grandview avenue, has returned to this city after a sojourn in Asbury Park.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, entertained Rev. Dr. Raven, of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, yesterday. The time was spent on the golf links.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these; not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

THREE HIGHWAYMEN DO UP DEWEY PARKER

Going to his home in Lincoln, late Saturday night Myles Cunningham was held up near Dewey Park by three men, who robbed him of a basket of meat and groceries, family's Sunday dinner; his gold watch and $6 in money. Cunningham was first accosted by one man, who demanded to know where he was going. He told the fellow to step aside and mind his own business. The highwayman grabbed at the basket and Cunningham dropped it and dealt his assailant a blow that knocked him down. Just then two others sprang from the side of the road and attacked Cunningham, who was taking good care of himself when one of the trio tripped him and he fell. Then the others pounced upon him and rifled his pockets.

One of them kicked him in the head, and when he was able to get up they had disappeared. This is the second time within a month that persons have been held up near Dewey Park and robbed. Cunningham thinks the men who beat and robbed him were tramps.

The Piscataway authorities will be asked by the citizens of Lincoln and Dewey Park to take some steps to prevent acts of robbery on the highway.

SHE STARVED TO DEATH WITH PLENTY AT HAND.

Affirming that she had received a "divine command" not to take nourishment, Miss Elizabeth Smallen died in St. James' Hospital, Newark, Sunday. For the last three months Miss Smallen had refused food and nourishment was given through a silver tube. The hospital authorities declare that the woman practically starved herself to death.

Miss Smallen lived with a sister at 54 Ferry street, but at that address no one could be found to-day who knew about the case. She was very religious and four months ago developed signs of mental derangement. It was about that time she began to fast. She finally became so weak that her sister called in Dr. Clement Morris, of 75 Washington avenue. He had her sent to the institution.

It was said at the hospital that plans had been under way to have the woman taken to the County Hospital at Overbrook. When it was found, however, that she was steadily growing weaker the physicians changed their plans and she remained at the institution.

Fire Wrecks Lumber Yard.

Fire yesterday afternoon wrought havoc at the extensive lumber yard of Jacob Jacobson, First street and Inslee place, Elizabethport. The flames spread rapidly. Assistant Chief Mahoney, realizing the danger sent out a second alarm and nearly all the Elizabeth department battled with the blaze. The firemen's efforts were chiefly directed to preventing the flames spreading to houses in the vicinity. The loss will reach several thousand dollars. The origin of the fire is yet unknown. This is the second time the plant has been on fire within a few months.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF THE LATE DR. WARD.

Funeral services for Dr. Leslie D. Ward, vice-president of the Prudential Insurance Company whose death occurred in London, July 13, were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the South Park Presbyterian church.

The services were simple and were conducted by Rev. Dr. J. N. Blanchard, of Grace Episcopal church, Madison, and Rev. Dr. Lyman Whitney Allen, of South Park church. Preceding the removal of the body from Dr. Ward's late home, a prayer was offered by Dr. Allen.

The casket, which is of solid bronze, covered with a blanket of orchids, was born by eight porters into the church while Chopin's funeral march was played. Its resting place at the foot of the pulpit yesterday morning was completely banked with floral offerings.

A standing cross of Easter lilies and orchids, standing more than ten feet high, was sent by the Prudential employees. There was also a wreath of lilies of the valley and orchids from former United States Senator John F. Dryden; a six-foot plaque of Easter lilies from Forrest F. Dryden, wreath of Easter lilies and orchids from the board of managers of the Babies' Hospital, wreath of American beauty roses from Colonel Anthony R. Kuser. A draped emblem of Alliance Francaise, of Newark, of which Dr. Ward was the president and founder, was placed just above the casket.

Among the guests registered at the Brunswick Hotel, Asbury Park, is W. E. Steele, of this city.

Mrs. M. C. Barkalew and daughter, Marguerite, of Duer street, have returned from Little Neck, L. I.

his intention of making a contest for the nomination, so far as we have seen, he has made no public declaration to that effect. Some of his friends are saying that it will be Fowler or a Democrat, but the good sense of the voters will settle that matter when the time comes Trenton Times—At the reception given to Congressman Fowler, at Hackensack, on Friday evening, a resolution was adopted naming him "as a logical candidate of the Republican party in New Jersey for United States Senator, and the reports of the meeting say that Mr. Fowler "began his campaign for the seat of Senator Kean," though there is nothing in the speech he made to indicate that he will make an appeal for popular support in the primaries, or even that he will enter the contest for the Senatorship. Assuming that the newspaper reports are correct, and based on "inside information," an interesting question is raised.

Mr. Fowler has already started a campaign for renomination to Congress. Can he be a candidate for the two offices at the same time? The general election law, section 42, provides for the filing of all "certificates of nomination and all petitions naming candidates for office to be filed by voters of the entire State, or of any Congressional district," with the Secretary of State; and says that "candidates nominated for any office in any certificate or petition shall manifest their acceptance of such nomination by a written acceptance thereof, signed by their own hand, upon or annexed to and filed with such certificate or petition."

An acceptance carries a promise to perform the duties of the office accepted. It is apparent that no man can fill the two offices of Senator and Representative at the same time. Further, it is a question whether the Secretary of State would be warranted in filing two certificates of nomination for different offices. However, that is a matter to be disposed of when the occasion requires action. Possibly Mr. Fowler has been frightened out of the Congressional race by the announcement of the candidacy of Judge Runyon, and has decided to yield to the solicitations of his friends that he make a fight for Senator Kean's seat.

Camden Courier—"Charley" Fowler, the Elizabeth Congressman, went over to Hackensack Thursday night, and, as announced, opened his campaign for the seat of John Kean, in the United States Senate. There is no explanation of why he should leave his own district and go over to the Sixth to lay his ropes for the retirement of Senator Kean, except it be that he wanted to unload himself of his bile against the Republican party and its properly qualified leaders, and not offend directly the Republicans who have hitherto honored him. He proclaimed himself an insurgent, a Roosevelt insurgent, and said he gloried in being one of that band of lickspittles. His opinion of New Jersey, which took him up after deserting his home in Illinois, twenty years ago, and made him all he is politically, he expressed Thursday night by saying the State is "a rotton borough and a cesspool of corruption." The expression is not original, but commonplace, the customary calumnious remark of disappointed partisans, but in his case it shows what base ingratitude will lead a wilfully vicious and distempered mind to indulge in. In all its history, New Jersey has never been denounced as "a cesspool of corruption" until Fowler ventured to do so, and as he is looking to the "cesspool" to send him to the Senate, the people will naturally permit him to continue to wallow in the mire he seems to have found.

ASBESTOS SAD IRONS
AN IRON FOR EVERY PURPOSE

The Cause of the Commotion

East Front Street in front of our store was litterly jammed with people on Saturday night, the crowd numbering at least a thousand. The cause of the commotion was the demonstration in our window of

"Asbestos Sad Irons"

By Miss A. S. Bestos, who notwithstanding the extreme heat, smilingly ironed away and showed the crowd the many advantages these famous irons posseses over the ordinary kind. It's a pleasure to iron with them particularly in Summer, the absence of heat in the handle makes them the most comfortable and sanitary irons a woman can use, for all of the heat is confined to the face of the iron and kept away from the hand of the ironer, and as the demonstrator says, "You always have a hot iron and a cold handle."

Briefly speaking the principal features of "Asbestos Sad Irons" are the heat-retaining hood, Asbestos lining, cool handle, highly polished ironing surface, nicely rounded edges, economy in heating. An iron for every purpose. Here's what they sell for:

LEHIGH VALLEY TO HAVE A SCHOOL FOR FIREMEN

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has inaugurated an educational movement among its firemen in order to develop efficiency. An important feature of the scheme is the series of examinations which firemen will have to stand—and which they will have to pass—before they can be promoted to the position of locomotive engineer. The idea of conservation appears to be the impelling motive of the plan. The wasting of fuel is an important matter with a railroad, and there are ways of saving fuel. The building and care of the fire under the boiler can be done intelligently and economically or without any thought. Every unit of heat that goes out through the smokestack or down into the ash pan, instead of going to turn water into steam, is money thrown away. The increase in the cost of fuel in the last few years has rendered still more urgent the necessity of getting out of coal all the energy there is in it.

According to the plan now put into effect by the Lehigh Valley, when a man is employed as fireman he receives a list of questions upon which he will be examined at the end of his first year of service. Later he will receive another series for mastery during his second year and then, finally, a third series for his third year. He is not expected, however, to work out all the problems for himself. Several aids have been established for him. A copy of a book on "Fuel and Steam Economy" is put into the hands of every fireman when he enters the service of the company, and regular instruction is given by assistant road foremen, who have been appointed for this special duty. On examination a high record is required. In the first two series of questions an average of seventy-five per cent. is necessary to pass, and in the last series an average of eighty per cent. The questions are of a practical character.

Monument For Jersey Firemen.

A monument to the volunteer firemen of Jersey City is provided for in the will of Frederick T. Farrier, which was admitted to probate yesterday. The fund for the monument will not be available for some years, as the income from the property that is to be sold for the purpose is to be used for the education of Mr. Farrier's ward, Mazie Japin, now five years old. The testator, who was a retired police captain, left a number of bequests to relatives and friends and $500 each to the widows and orphans' funds of the Union Veteran Legion and Lincoln Lodge, Knights of Pythias.

Woman's Body Found In Creek.

The body of Miss Anna Hill, who was drowned at Cheesequake Creek, near South Amboy, on Saturday, was recovered yesterday morning. It was removed to the camp of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hill, of Highland Park, near New Brunswick. The other victims of the triple drowning were Miss Edith Hill, sister of Anna, and Albert G. Silverthorne, of No. 185 Summer avenue, Newark. Their bodies were recovered at once.

OLD TIME MINSTREL DIES AT ELIZABETH

"Billy" Williams, old-time minstrel man, circus acrobat and equestrian, died yesterday at his home, 1091 East Jersey street, Elizabeth. Although he had been in poor health for more than a year, neither he nor his family had any fear of his immediate death. Sunday night he sat up talking to his wife until midnight and he retired apparently as well as he had been for some time.

Early yesterday morning he was taken violently ill and died at 7:30 o'clock. Death was caused by jaundice. His wife was with him when he died. His two children are away from home. His daughter, Mrs. James Thatcher, is playing with a stock company at Lowell, Mass., and his son Harold is spending his vacation at Greenwood Lake, N. Y. Both has been sent for.

"Billy" Williams was known in theatrical circles all over the country. He was born in New York city 56 years ago. At an early age he was left an orphan and went to live with his aunts in New York. His mother was Molly Williams, a well-known star thirty-five years ago. At the age of nine years he left his home and went with a circus. He joined the "Lee Family", famous company of acrobats. As he grew older he was billed as the star boy rider of the show.

At the age of fourteen he tired of circus life and decided to go on the stage. He joined the famous old-time Billy Manning minstrel troupe and toured the country with them. During all of the forty-two years he was on the stage he had done blackface acts. For five years he played with his daughter in vaudeville under the name of Williams and Williams. When the daughter married they separated. For a time Billy Williams did a monologue turn. Then he went back to the companies of blackface comedians.

Several years ago he played in "The Way of the Transgressor." He had signed a contract to go with the big new Williams and Walker show. The show was to open August 15 in Pittsburg. He was to begin rehearsals for the opening next week.

Williams was one of the charter members of the Cincinnati Lodge of Elks, No. 5. He was one of the organizers of the Newark Lodge of Elks. He was also a member of the Knights of Pythias and of the Actors' Union. No arrangements for the funeral have yet been made.

HERE AND THERE.

While Plainfielders were sweltering under a burning sky Sunday, the summer visitors in Asbury Park were shivering with the cold. It was simply a freak of the weather man for while it was cool along the shore, it was unbearably warm five miles inland.

William F. Arnold, of Third place, who has a summer cottage at Asbury Park, said this morning that the cold wave along the coast was no nature fake. He stated that while the early part of Sunday morning had been moderately warm, the wind changed at 11 o'clock and, fanned by a strong sea breeze, the pleasure-seekers were soon seeking their overcoats and wraps. Pople, who had been sitting on their porches, soon left for more cheery quarters, and the beach was deserted in a half hour. The temperature of the surf was down to fifty-eight degrees, and consequently, there was no rush on the bathing houses.

But at 9 o'clock at night the wind changed again and blew from the land. Wraps and overcoats were soon thrown aside and the boardwalk began to assume a summer look. But the cool breeze did not return and the sojourners came back to earth and sympathized with the old folks at home.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

While canoeing on Spring Lake yesterday a young man had the misfortune to capsize, and ruined a new serge suit. He had on a red necktie which was not fast colors, and when he struck the water the spectators thought he was badly hurt, but when he came ashore they saw the red necktie had done the damage, much to their amusement.

The crops in this vicinity are suffering for the want of rain—no rain has been had in this section for nearly six weeks—and the gardens will suffer greatly.

Mrs. Wm. H. Manning and Miss Nellie Manning have returned home from Freehold, after a pleasant visit with the Rev. and Mrs. Ernest Thompson.

The excursion yesterday to Bellwood Park went out in two sections of eleven cars each. The last section did not return till after nine o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Thorne and their daughter Gladys have returned from a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Winship, of New York city.

Mrs. Bachelor, of Brooklyn, has returned home after a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Paul Wilson.

Judge Smith, who has been ill a long time, visits a Newark sanitarium three times a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Van Arsdale, of East Front street, leave to-morrow for Mount Holly to visit Mrs. Van Arsdale's parents.

A boy and not another girl has been added to the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Burdick, at the State Hospital, Central Islip, L. I.

Miss Clara Denton and her niece, Miss Pauline Denton, of West Sixth street, have been stopping at the Sagamore Hotel, Belmar.

W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, entertained Mrs. Warnock's uncle, William Wood, of Newburgh, and his son, Harry, over the week-end.

Egbert Bogardus, Jr., of Putnam avenue, leaves this week with John R. Wallace, of New York city, on an automobile trip along the Atlantic coast. The party will make Norfolk, Va., its destination.

Adolph Steengraff, Jr., of South Plainfield, has announced himself again as candidate on the Republican ticket for the Assembly in the coming campaign. Mr. Steengraff says he will announce his platform within a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong Mulford, of North avenue, left this afternoon for Asbury Park, where they will spend the next ten days. Mr. Mulford has nearly recovered from his injuries received in an automobile accident received a couple of months ago.

EXPECT CONTEST OVER WATER.

Application of East Orange to Take Lands May Be Opposed.

The New Jersey State Board of Water Commissioners will have a hearing in the City Hall at East Orange to-day on the application of the city to obtain permission to "exercise the right of eminent domain" to acquire additional lands at Milburn, N. J., for driving wells for the water supply. The city has had a number of wells there for the last ten years and now has used about all the land available. It will need more wells within a comparatively short time.

The application of the city, which was filed in June under the new water act, calls for the purchase sooner or later of about two thousand acres, the cost of which will be at least $125,000. Some of the property is known to be desired by the Commonwealth Water and Light Company, which supplies Summit and a number of other municipalities with water, and opposition is expected to develop at the hearing.

Will Pray For Rain.

The dry and hot weather which is parching all vegetables growth and making life almost unbearable for the closely housed people of this city has aroused the feelings of some of the citizens and tonight in Mount Zion A. M. E. church a special prayer meeting will be held to invoke divine intercession and petitions for rain will be made.

LIE IS PASSED IN LAWYERS' QUARREL

The District Court at Elizabeth yesterday was the scene of an unusual proceeding when Attorney Aaron Jablow rushed into the courtroom and declared that Attorney Charles L. Mason, of Newark, had threatened to do him bodily harm and that he wanted the court's protection. Judge Clark McK. Whittemore assured Mr. Jablow that there was no need of fear, as Mr. Mason wouldn't harm him.

"He's bigger than I, Judge, and I'm afraid," said Jablow.

Mr. Mason was called and explained that it was all a misunderstanding. He said that he didn't want to strike Mr. Jablow and didn't intend doing so.

"Well, you called me a 'liar' and said you'd settle it right out in that corridor," responded Jablow.

"You two go into the other room and follow the instructions of the court," commanded Judge Whittemore.

The instructions were previously given to Mason to furnish Mr. Jablow with the names of several witnesses in a case that was adjourned until next Monday. Jablow represented Samuel Shilman, while Mason was attorney for a man named Reuff.

The case was on contract in which Reuff is endeavoring to collect $300 on a note given him by Shilman.

When the case was called Jablow asked for an adjournment because he had not been able to obtain the names of the other members of the company whom he wanted to produce as witnesses.

"Why, Mr. Mason has the names and he'll give them to you," said Judge Whittemore.

Mr. Jablow agreed and Mr. Mason apparently acquiesced. Both lawyers left the courtroom evidently to transfer the names. When they had reached the rotunda, Jablow said last night, Mason called him a liar. Mr. Jablow insisted that he wanted the names.

One word drew on another when Mr. Reuff exclaimed, according to Jablow:

"Don't give him any names."

Then Mason, it is alleged, said:

"Let's settle this thing right here," at the same time taking a hold of Jablow's hands. Jablow then broke away and dashed into the courtroom. The trouble was amicably settled.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The work of razing the old chapel of First M. E. church, Millville, began yesterday, and the erection of a $25,000 edifice will begin immediately.

Christ Episcopal Church, Palmyra, was entered by thieves Sunday night and the silver communion service was stolen, besides several other silver pieces.

The intense heat hastened the death in Camden Sunday of James Pippett, sixty-four years old, of 563 Ferry avenue. Coroner Wingender gave a certificate of death from heart disease.

His scalp badly torn, the result of being struck by a trolley car, Joseph Hopper, forty-four years old, of 1335 Giger street, Philadelphia was taken to the Cooper Hospital, Camden, Sunday.

Harry Kates, of Paulsboro, who advertised for a wife some weeks ago, is still receiving answers. He is almost afraid to go to the postoffice, as he is tired of receiving letters, not one of which has impressed him as yet.

School Trustee Edward H. Corson, of Millville, was notified by Governor Fort Saturday that he has been appointed a member of the Cumberland County Board of Elections. Mr. Corson was recommended by Assemblyman Nichols.

Patrick Williams, William Cartwright and John Baxter, held by the police of Chester, Pa., as suspected yeggmen, were released yesterday when word was sent from their home town of Gloucester that they were respectable young men making a sight-seeing trip.

Because Sabato Di Argenis, of 750 River street, Paterson, has two stab wounds on the neck, Constable Christopher Stager is hunting John Herman, a dyer at Weidman's, who lives at 629 River street, that city. The trouble started over the method of doing the work.

In Jersey City Rev. George Miller was installed Sunday as the pastor of the First Evangelical Lutheran Church by Rev. Dr. Emil A. Meury, president of the South Bergen Classis. Mr. Miller succeeds his brother Matthew, who has been given another charge.

Game Warden Phifer, of Milville, has been distributing game laws printed in the Italian and Hungarian languages among the aliens of that section the past week. More than half the fines for game law violations in that section have been collected from foreigners.

Harry Gillespie, seventeen years old, of 252 Grand street, Paterson, was so badly bitten by a fellow-workman at the Rogers plant, Saturday, that he went to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment. An argument was started over their work, and the companion seized Gillespie's cheek and bit so hard that his teeth met. The victim was treated by Dr. Coen and then allowed to go home.

Franklin Clark, of 79 Vine street, Paterson, who was so seriously injured Friday through being run down by an automobile that it was thought he would not recover, is now believed to be past the danger point. Yesterday he regained his sight, which was lost through the blow he received on his head and which it was thought had fractured his skull. His mind is now clear.

WANT LICENSES RETURNED.

Elizabeth Saloonkeepers to Again Make Application.

Four Elizabeth saloonkeepers who have been refused renewals of licenses will again make application for new licenses at the meeting of the Board of Excise tonight. These are John Mihalkowitz, 339 Magnolia avenue; Nathaniel H. Astfalk, 1214 East Grand street; James Byrnes, 842 Pearl street, and William Artman, 214 First street. Astfalk's application came up at the last meeting of the board, but action was deferred.

There is much speculation as to what the action of the board will be on these applications. It is said that two members have emphatically refused to vote for Astfalk's license, and it was impending defeat that caused the Astfalk application to be laid over. Strong pressure is being brought to bear, it is claimed, to get back the license for the former chief of the fire department.

Couldn't Believe It.

Mrs. Bacon—Do you believe anything in that letter you got from your husband today?

Mrs. Egbert—No I didn't. It's all about what he claims he caught fishing the other day.—Yonkers Statesman.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS By MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

For an instant Nathaniel found himself close beside Neil and he prodded him sharply with his knee. His companion did not lift his head. He made no sign, gave no last flashing comradeship with his eyes, but climbed into the bow of the boat and sat down with his chin still on his chest, like a man lost in stupor.

"Don't Give Up Hope—Marion—Winnsome—"

Nathaniel followed him, scarcely believing his eyes, and sat himself in the stern, leaning comfortably against the knees of the man who took the tiller. He felt a curious thrill pass through him when he discovered a moment later that this man was Jeekum. Two men seized the oars amidships. A fourth, with his rifle across his knees, sat facing Neil.

For the first time Nathaniel found himself wondering what this voyage meant. Were they to be rowed far down the shore to some secret fastness where no other ears would hear the sound of the avenging rifles, and where, a few inches under the forest mold, their bodies would never be discovered? Each stroke of the oars added to the remoteness of this possibility. The boat was heading straight out to sea. Perhaps they were to meet a less terrible death by drowning, an end which, though altogether unpleasant, held something comforting in it for Captain Plum. Two hours passed without pause in the steady labor of the men at the oars. In those hours not a word was spoken. The two men amidships held no communication. The guard in the bow moved a little now and then only to relieve his cramped limbs. Neil was absolutely motionless, as though he had ceased to breathe. Jeekum uttered not a whisper.

It was his whisper that Nathaniel waited for, the signaling clutch of his fingers, the sound of his breath close to his ears. Again and again he pressed himself against the sheriff's knees. He knew that he was understood, and yet there came no answer. At last he looked up, and Jeekum's face was far above him, staring straight and unseeing into the darkness ahead. His last spark of hope went out.

After a time a dark rim loomed slowly up out of the sea. It was land, half a mile or so away. Nathaniel sat up with fresh interest, and as they drew nearer Jeekum rose to his feet and gazed long and steadily in both directions along the coast. When he returned to his seat the boat's course was changed. A few minutes later the bow grated upon sand. Still voiceless as specters the guards leaped ashore and Neil roused himself to follow them, climbing over the gunwale like a sick man. Nathaniel was close at his heels. With a growing sense of horror he saw two ghostly stakes thrusting themselves out of the beach a dozen paces away. He looked beyond them. As far as he could see there was sand—nothing but sand, as white as paper, scintillating in a billion flashing needle-points in the starlight. Instinctively he guessed what the stakes were for, and walked toward them with the blood turning cold in his veins. Neil was before him and stopped at the first stake, making no effort to lift his eyes as Nathaniel strode past him. At the second, a dozen feet beyond, Nathaniel's two guards halted, and placed him with his back to the post. Two minutes later, bound hand and foot to the stake, he shifted his head so that he could look at his companion.

Neil was similarly fastened, with his face turned partly toward him. There was no change in his attitude. His head hung weakly upon his chest, as if he had fainted.

What did it mean?

Suddenly every nerve in Nathaniel's body leaped into excited action.

The guards were entering their boat! The last man was shoving it off—they were rowing away! His throbbing muscles seemed ready to burst their bonds! The boat became indistinct in the starry gloom—a mere shadow—and faded in the distance. The sound of oars became fainter and fainter. Then, after a little, there was wafted back to him from far out in the lake a man's voice—the wild snatch of a song. The Mormons were gone! They were not to be shot! They were not—

A voice spoke to him, startling him so that he would have cried out if it had not been for the cloth that gagged him. It was Neil, speaking coolly, laughingly.

"How are you, Nat?"

Nathaniel's staring eyes revealed his astonishment. He could see Neil laughing at him as though it was an unusually humorous joke in which they were playing a part.

"Lord, but this is a funny mess!" he chuckled. "Here am I, able and willing to talk—and there you are, as dumb as a mummy, and looking for all the world as if you'd seen a ghost! What's the matter? Aren't you glad we're not going to be shot?"

Nathaniel nodded.

The other's voice became suddenly sober.

"This is worse than the other, Nat. It's what we call the 'Straight Death.' Unless something turns up between now and tomorrow morning, or a little later, we'll be as dead as though they had filled us with bullets. Our only hope rests in the fact that I can use my lungs. That's why I didn't let them know when my gag became loose. I had the devil's own time keeping it from falling with my chin; pretty near broke my neck doing it. A little later, when we're sure Jeekum and his men are out of hearing, I'll begin calling for help. Perhaps some fisherman or hunter—"

He stopped, and a chill ran up Nathaniel's back as he listened to a weird howl that came from far behind them. It was a blood-curdling sound and his face turned a more ghastly pallor as he gazed inquiringly at Neil. His companion saw the terrible question in his face.

"Wolves," he said. "They're away back in the forest. They won't come down to us." For a moment he was silent, his eyes turned to the sea. Then he added: "Do you notice anything queer about the way you're bound to that stake, Nat?"

There was a thrilling emphasis in Nathaniel's answer. He nodded his head affirmatively, again and again.

"Your hands are tied to the post very loosely, with a slack of say six inches," continued Neil with an appalling precision. "There is a rawhide thong about your neck, wet, and so tight that it chafes your skin when you move your head. But the very uncomfortable thing just at this moment is the way your feet are fastened. Isn't that so? Your legs are drawn back, so that you are half resting on your toes, and I'm pretty sure your knees are aching right now. Eh? Well, it won't be very long before your legs will give way under you and the slack about your wrists will keep you from helping yourself. Do you know what will happen then?"

He paused and Nathaniel stared at him, partly understanding, yet giving no sign.

"You will hang upon the thong about your neck until you choke to death," finished Neil. "That's the 'Straight Death.' If the end doesn't come by morning the sun will finish the job. It will dry out the wet rawhide until it grips your throat like a hand. Poetically we call it the hand of Strang. Pleasant, isn't it?"

The grim definiteness with which he described the manner of their end added to those sensations which had already become acutely discomforting to Nathaniel. Had he possessed the use of his voice when the Mormons were leaving he would have called upon them to return and lengthen the thongs about his ankles by an inch or two. Now, with almost brutal frankness, Neil had explained to him the meaning of his strange posture. His knees began to ache. An occasional sharp pain shot up from them to his hips, and the thong about his neck, which at first he had used as a support for his chin, began to irritate him. At times he found himself resting upon it so heavily that it shortened his breath, and he was compelled to straighten himself, putting his whole weight on his twisted feet. It seemed an hour before Neil broke the terrible silence again. Perhaps it was ten minutes.

"I'm going to begin," he said. "Listen. If you hear an answer nod your head."

He drew a deep breath, turned his face as far as he could toward the shore, and shouted.

"Help—help—help!"

Again and again the thrilling words burst from his throat, and as their echoes floated back to them from the forest, like a thousand mocking voices, Nathaniel grew hot with the sweat of horror. If he could only have added his own voice to those cries, shrieked out the words with Neil—joined even unavailingly in this last fight for life, it would not have been so bad. But he was helpless. He watched the desperation grow in his companion's face as there came no response save the taunting echoes; even in the light of the stars he saw that face darken with its effort, the eyes fill with a mad light, and the throat strain against its choking thong. Gradually Neil's voice became weaker. When he stopped to rest and listen his panting breath came to Nathaniel like the hissing of steam. Soon the echoes failed to come back from the forest, and Nathaniel fought like a crazed man to free himself, jerking at the thongs that held him until his wrists were bleeding and the rawhide about his neck choked him.

"No use!" he heard Neil say. "Better take it easy for a while, Nat!"

Marion's brother had turned toward him, his head thrown back against the stake, his face lifted to the sky. Nathaniel raised his own head, and found that he coud breathe easier. For a long time his companion did not break the silence. Mentally he began counting off the seconds. It was past midnight—probably one o'clock. Dawn came at half past two, the sun rose an hour later. Three hours to live! Nathaniel lowered his head, and the rawhide tightened perceptibly at the movement. Neil was watching him. His face shone as white as the starlit sand. His mouth was partly open.

"I'm devilish sorry—for you—Nat—" he said.

His words came with painful slowness. There was a grating huskiness in his voice.

"This damned rawhide—is pinching—my Adam's apple—"

He smiled. His white teeth gleamed, his eyes laughed, and with a heart bursting with grief Nathaniel looked away from him. He had seen courage, but never like this, and deep down in his soul he prayed—prayed that death might come to him first, so that he might not have to look upon the agonies of this other, whose end would be ghastly in its fearless resignation. His own suffering had become excruciating. Sharp pains darted like red-hot needles through his limbs, his back tortured him, and his head ached as though a knife had cloven the base of his skull. Still—he could breathe. By pressing his head against the post it was not difficult for him to fill his lungs with air. But the strength of his limbs was leaving him. He no longer felt any sensation in his cramped feet. His knees were numb. He measured the paralysis of death creeping up his legs inch by inch, driving the sharp pains before it, until suddenly his weight tottered under him and he hung heavily upon the thong about his throat. For a full half minute he ceased to breathe, and a feeling of ineffable relief swept over him, for during those few seconds his body was at rest. He found that by a backward contortion he could bring himself erect again, and that for a few minutes after each respite it was not so difficult for him to stand.

PERKINS TOOK HIS RYE THE WRONG WAY.

While autoing Sunday Ralph Perkins, former Mayor of Westfield, paused beside a rye field and picking a whisp of the grain, chewed it as he resumed his journey. A grain of rye caught in his throat and gagged him. Suffering intensely he drove his car to the nearest doctor and had it removed.

"You take your rye the wrong way," said Judge Blair, his former partner, when Perkins told him of the occurrence.

DOMBROSKY STOLE VALISE, COMPLAINT NOT PRESSED.

Charles H. Hiller, a salesman, of 295 Broadway, New York, telephoned from Bound Brook last night at 7:30 o'clock that a Pole had started for this city having in his possession a valise belonging to Hiller. On the arrival of the main line trolley the Pole, J ohn Dombrosky, was taken from the car and locked up. He had the valise in his possession.

Mr. Hiller arrived in town at 9:40 and went at once to Police headquarters, where he recovered his valise and refused to press a complaint against Dombrosky.

Fire Started By Fresh Hay.

A fire that started from spontaneous combustion in fresh hay in the stable of the Spottiswoode-Cusack Company, at Essex avenue and the Lackawanna Railroad, at Orange, yesterday afternoon did $10,000 damage in less than half an hour. Three frame structurse owned by the company and a quantity of coal were burned. The high southwest wind sent showers of sparks toward the adjoining buildings, which were saved by the firemen. Trains on the railroad were held up for an hour.

HIGH SCHOOLS ALUMNI TO MEET ON THE DIAMOND

Plans are again on foot for the baseball game between the alumni of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools. It was intended to play the game during the spring but on account of many of the alumni being out of town ,the match was postponed. It is now intended to play the contest within two or three weeks.

The P. H. S. interests are being looked after by Paul R. Collier, Francis Foster and S. B. Bogart. North Plainfield is represented by Fred Armstrong, Arthur Humble and Frank Webster.

Phil Smith, the old P. H. S. star and pitcher on the high school team in 1905, has signified his intention of being on the job when the game is called. Phil is now twirling for the New York Edison nine and still has his old supply of curves and a goodly share of his old time speed. Fred Armstrong says that he can still pitch and with Jack Peacock in line, the N. P. H. S. box work is well cared for.

In addition to Smith, Plainfield High has Fred VanAuken, who pitched for and captained the Annapolis Naval Academy team two years ago, and Stewart Freeman, who pitched this year on Yale 'varsity. Howard Craig is still in town and in line for short stop while Allen Snyder or Joseph VanDeventer can be called on for the second base position. Paul Collier and Will Doane are in line for first base with Samuel Bogart, Edgar Freeman, Chauncey Murphey, Monroe Long and James Conway on deck for third. The field positions are being tried for by Dudley Wilcox, Clyde Doane, Francis Foster, John Riffert, Paul Brakely, John Dutcher, Howard Freeman, John Lyness and Arthur Denton. The backstop job is lacking candidates, although Charles Loizeaux is still available.

The North Plainfield candidates have not been fully announced as yet but many of the Alumni have signified their intentions of working once more on the diamond for their Alma Mater.

It has been suggested that the game be made an annual affair, with an Alumni reunion in both schools. The idea is a good one and would stimulate the spirit of athletics among the undergraduates.

BASEBALL.

Wilcox, of the Y. M. C. A. team, has his eagle eye on the ball these days. He got two safeties again in Saturday's game.

Frederickson certainly made a good impression. Thirteen strike outs and only three hits is going some for a youngster.

Emery surely had an off day Saturday. It isn't very often that the clever thirdbaseman gets three errors in a game.

Just keep your eyes on Henderson, that Somerville lad. You'll hear from him some day in fast baseball.

Harry Giddes is doing great work for the Dunellen nine. The old Plainfield High School boy was right there in Saturday's game.

Three hits were put to Boyd's credit after that Rahway game.

Dodge, the old Scotch Plains shortstop, is keeping up his good work in Rahway. Those two errors against him in Saturday's game didn't do much harm.

"Brit" Martin is a regular "Cy" Young. He keeps a-pegging right along and can always be counted on in a pinch.

Platt Adams' work with the stick can't keep up with his track work.

Hervey Marsh is putting up a speedy game on second for the association boys. And Hervey is batting some, too.

Piddington and Giles did the stick work for Dunellen Saturday. "Piddie" cracked out three clean ones in three times at bat.

Here's hoping that game comes off between the P. H. S.—N. P. H. S. alumni.

JUDGE SIDES WITH BOYS.

"Couldn't Sentence Them for Playing Ball," He Says.

"I couldn't pronounce sentence upon any boy for playing ball in the street as long as no harm was done," said Judge Owen P. Mahon in the City Juvenile Court to-day to John Lieb, the complainant against three boys who played ball in front of his house, 430 East Jersey street, Elizabeth. The boys were discharged.

They gave their names as Raymond Henry, Robert Seibert and Frank Feat. Lieb charged them with breaking a window in his home by batting a baseball in that direction. The boys denied the charge. As Lieb had no witnesses, while the boys were corroborated by several others, Judge Mahon discharged them and made the foregoing statement.

Tells Negroes to Win Respect.

Frederick Moore, editor of "The New York Age," a paper published in the interest of negroes, gave a plain talk yesterday before members of his race at the laying of the cornerstone of the hall of the Young Men's Association, a negro organization, at Paterson. In his address Mr. Moore said that negroes in the South were superior to the negroes in the North. He said that the negroes in the North were lazy and unwilling to make an effort to improve their condition. "It is time for the colored people to get together and do something to win the white man's respect," he said, adding that the negro must follow the white man's example in industry or forever remain where he is today.

Walter M. McGee and family, of Rockview avenue, have gone to Mouse Island on the Maine coast, where they will spend the summer.

Mrs. Charles P. Leggett and family, of Madison avenue, leave Saturday for Asbury Park, where they have taken a cottage for the month of August.

HOW NAME CITY JUDGE?

Is He Nominated at the Primaries or at the Party Conventions.

THE LAW SEEMS AMBIGUOUS.

Attorney General Appealed to to Decide the Question Which Interests Local Aspirants For the Office.

Are city judgeship nominations to be made at the primaries in September or at the party convention? That's the question puzzling the politicians, ambitious office seekers, etc., etc., today. The law bearing on the case is too deep for the layman to fathom. For that matter, it is too much for the average lawyer. Hence, the Attorney General of New Jersey has been appealed to by aspirants for the nomination to provide the solution. Draw your own conclusions from the following quotations:

The Act of 1907 says that "hereafter all candidates of political parties for the following offices, to wit, members of state Senate, members of General Assembly, county clerk, surrogate, register of deeds, sheriff, county supervisor, coroner, mayor and for all elective officers of any county in this state, to be voted for at the general election for members of the General Assembly, by the voters of any county of this state, or of any political sub-division thereof, shall be nominated directly without the intervention of delegates or conventions, at the primary elections held pursuant to the act to which this act is a supplement. * * *"

Another clause in the same act says that "not less than fifty voters of any political party in any municipality of this state, other than a county, may file with the clerk of such municipality a petition endorsing any member of their political party as a candidate for the nomination of said party to public office in said municipality in accordance with and in the manner provided by the act to which this is a supplement for the endorsing of candidates for nomination in a single ward or township, and such municipal clerk shall cause the names of all persons so nominated to be printed upon the official ballots of the respective political parties in the election districts * * *."

In the first paragraph, the office of city judge is not specifically mentioned. Is it inferred by the contents of the latter paragraph?

BOROUGH POLICE COURT HAS BUSY MORNING.

William B. Emmons, a contractor, of 38 Codington avenue, was arrested yesterday afternoon on Race street by Chief Weiss for being drunk and disorderly. Emmons has been up before the court several times previous to this one, so Recorder Dolliver this morning made it twenty dollars fine and seven days in jail.

John Doe, Richard Roe and William Doe, who claimed to be from Newark, and who were arrested by Chief Weiss on July 19 for peddling without a license, were fined ten dollars in the borough court this morning.

The case of Michael Martin against John Slevin, of Franklin place, for reckless auto driving, which was scheduled to be tried this morning, was postponed for the fifth time until tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Methodist Excursion Tomorrow.

As the weather man has promised a fine day tomorrow for the excursion of the Methodist Sunday-school excursion a record breaking crowd is expected to take the train from here at 8:15 in the morning. The Methodist Sunday-school from Dunellen as well as the two Sunday-schools of this city, together with that of Wilson Memorial church will all go on this excursion. The train leaves Dunellen at 8:00 o'clock, Clinton avenue at 8:06 and Grant avenue at 8:08.

Muffler Off, Face Cut.

John Anderson, of Watchung avenue, reported to the police at 7:30 last night that automobile No. 10,231, while going up Watchung avenue at 6:30, removed the muffler and his son who was riding a wheel directly behind the car was struck in the face by something which cut his lip. He was not badly hurt.

Fought in Street.

David Rogan and George Pouchulas, arrested last night for fighting on the street, were given a warning and a suspended sentence by Judge William N. Runyon this morning in the city court.

PRESS AD. BRINGS BACK MR. SHOTWELL'S WALLET

William H. Shotwell, of Fairview avenue, lost his wallet on his way to the station yesterday morning. Now the wallet, beside containing a considerable sum of money, held in its leathery pockets several valuable papers and business documents.

Of course Mr. Shotwell was worried, but like the true business man that he is, he inserted a "lost ad" in The Daily Press. Such confidence did Mr. Shotwell place in this advertising medium that he asked for his pocketbook at The Press office upon his return from New York. He was told to call later in the evening.

In the meanwhile John Retzer, of 71 Watchung avenue, North Plainfield, had found the wallet and returned it to The Daily Press office. Mr. Retzer was liberally rewarded.

BANISH VOTE MACHINE FROM MUNICIPALITY

Approx'mately ten per cent. of the total registered vote in the given districts was cast at the special elections in the First districts of the four respective wards yesterday when the voting machines in use there were ordered abolished. In all, there are about 2,000 voters registered and the ballots cast yesterday numbered but 281. Of these all but twenty-four were recorded against the use of the automatic device.

The verdict of the people here, as it has been in all but two of the many places where the machines were installed, is to send them back to Secretary of State Dickinson, who sponsered them. At the same time, notice is given State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen that there must have been some mistake on his part when he said in the Legislature last winter that there was no sentiment against the machine.

Paterson also voted on the machine yesterday. Nineteen districts ordered them cast out, while one, a strong Republican district, ordered them retained.

Here is the result in Plainfield:

First ward—For 6, against 87; Second ward—For 7, against 45; Third ward—For 5, against 52; Fourth ward—For 6, against 71. Totals—For 24, against 257.

"WHOOPING COUGH" PARTY ENJOYED BY 50 CHILDREN

A "whooping cough" party, that is to say a party given to children in the city suffering from whooping cough who cannot enjoy with the other children the fresh air of the mountains at the camp, were given an outing yesterday afternoon which all appreciated.

Six friends of the youngsters offered their automobiles and chauffeurs and about fifty children were given rides about the surrounding country, afterwards being entertained on the lawn at the residence of Miss Phillips, where ice cream and cake were plentifully supplied. The outing was under the auspices of the Charity Organization Society.

Those who furnished the automobiles were Mrs. F. E. Mead, Mrs. George Mellick, Mrs. Lawrence Van-Beuren, Miss Annie Slevin, Mrs. Henry DeForest and John P. Emmons.

TOTTEN ARRESTED FOR ALLEGED THEFT OF BICYCLE.

William Totten, of Watchung, was arrested at the show grounds last night by Patrolman Charles Flynn, who turned the prisoner over to Marshal Culver, of the borough police force, on a warrant sworn out for Totten's arrest by Recorder Campbell, of Dunellen. Totten was wanted on a charge of stealing a wheel from W. H. Cramer, of Dunellen, some time ago. Immediately after the theft, Totten disappeared and was not located until last night when he was found working with the "101 Ranch" company. Marshal Culver turned him over to the Dunellen authorities.

Totten served a term in the Somerset county jail two years ago for breaking into Conroy's carriage shop on Somerset street and stealing several horse blankets.

Euchre For Convent Fund.

There will be a euchre held on the lawn of the home of Mrs. John Walsh, 307 Madison avenue, on Friday evening, for the benefit of St. Mary's convent. The games will begin at 8 o'clock.

ALEX. D. MALLINSON DEAD

Veteran Druggist Succumbs After an Illness of Ten Weeks.

IN BUSINESS FIFTY-ONE YEARS.

Was Member of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company—Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon.

After an illness extending over a period of ten weeks, Alexander D. Mallinson succumbed yesterday at his home, corner of Fourth and Liberty streets. He was in his sixty-third year and had been in business in this city for upward of thirty-three years. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at his late home, Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating.

Mr. Mallinson is survived by his wife and one son, Lawrence A. Mallinson, two sisters, Mrs. W. S. Chedister, and Miss Victoria Mallinson, and one brother, Edwin Mallinson, all of Newark.

Mr. Mallinson was the oldest druggist in Plainfield, having been engaged in the business continuously for fifty-one years. With his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Mallinson, he went to Watertown, N. Y., where he obtained his early education. At the age of twelve he entered the employ of a Watertown druggist, later passing the examination which permitted him to enter the business as a drug clerk.

While in the employ of Reynolds & Stelle on North avenue, with whom he worked for seventeen years, Mr. Mallinson made a host of friends and in 1894 he established a drug store of his own in the Ulrich building and later removed to the store now occupied by Cadmus Brothers. In 1901 he made an exchange with E. S. F. Randolph at the corner of Fourth and Liberty streets, where he had continued ever since. His son, Lawrence, was associated with him during the past five years.

Mr. Mallinson was a member of the old Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company. He was a constant attendant at the First Baptist church, of which he was a member.

BIG CROWDS ATTEND 101 RANCH PERFORMANCE.

Over 4000 people witnessed the performances yesterday of Miller brothers' "101 Ranch" Wild West Show. The crowd at the night performance was much larger than that in the afternoon.

The show was a reproduction of the life on the 101 Ranch, in Oklahoma, in the early days. There was the regular horse racing, daring riding, trap shooting, the attack on the "Deadwood Coach", horse stealing, and all that goes to make up an exciting show of the Wild West life. The crowd, at the grounds, was an orderly one and everything was done without the usual rowdyism of circuses.

Clothespin Social for Missions.

Miss Edna Eckert and Miss M. Clara Hunter were in charge of the clothespin social given last night, on the lawn at the residence of Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard. The social was under the auspices of the Missional Committee of the Young People's Society of Hope chapel and it was greatly enjoyed by the twenty-five young people present. Games were played until a late hour, when refreshments were served. A silver collection was taken by the missionary committee.

Part of Spencer Estate Sold.

A portion of the Spencer estate on East Seventh street, near Park avenue, was sold yesterday for ten thousand dollars, through the agency of Armstrong Mulford. The buyer is Mrs. Rutherford H. Towner, of Second place, who will probably remodel the house on the premises. The architect's plans call for an expenditure of $8,000 for the changes which are contemplated. Mrs. Towne has not yet decided whether the remodeling shall be done now or later.

St. Peter's Ice Cream Festival.

An ice cream festival will be held under the auspices of the Junior Aid Society of Saint Peter's Lutheran church in the Sunday school room of the church, corner of Grove street and Mercer avenue, this afternoon and evening. There is an admission fee of ten cents.

NEW GRAIN CO. TO BUILD STOREHOUSE AT ONCE

The final business meeting of the Union Grain Company, which was incorporated at Elizabeth on Monday, was held last night and the following officers elected: President, A. I. Smalley; secretary, Joseph Ryno; treasurer, Frank Mobus. These officers will also form part of the directorate of the new company; the others will be announced later.

Mr. Smalley said today that everything is in readiness for starting to build the new storehouse and offices. The plans are ready and a permit has been issued for the work. The new building will be two story and basement, built of brick, concrete and steel; not a piece of wood will be used on the first floor. The plans call for a building 40 feet wide and 95 feet deep, an additional six inches of width being at the rear end.

A switch of the railroad passes the rear of the new building which is conveniently located on East Third street, next to the Union Beef Company's plant. Mr. Smalley said it was intended to have the building ready for occupancy by November 1. The company is capitalized at $50,000.

CADMUS PROPERTY SOLD TO CRESCENT ESTATES

Another important real estate deal has just been consummated by which the old Cadmus property in the west end of the borough changes hands for a consideration which showed a considerable advance over the purchase price. It consists of fifty-seven acres of desirable building land. It was owned by The West End Heights Improvement Company, who have sold it to the Crescent Estates, a New York corporation.

The land will be surveyed and laid out in building lots 125x300 feet each. New macadam streets will be cut through the property and concrete sidewalks and curbing laid. The tract will be restricted to residential purposes and only houses of the highest class will be erected on the property.

It is expected that the contracts for the leveling and grading of the premises will be let today and a general contract given for the laying out of streets and sidewalks. In all probability the contract will be awarded to a North Plainfield contractor and the work is to be begun at once.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT GRACE M. E. CHURCH

The memorial services for Melvin LeRoy Vanderbeek, who died last Friday, were held in the Grace M. E. church last night. There was a large number of the dead boy's friends at the church, the room being filled to its capacity.

The services were conducted by the Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of the church, and Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue. Miss Alice Carroll sang two beautiful hymns during the service.

Both Dr. Carroll and Mr. Shoop spoke. Mr. Shoop read several appropriate passages of Scripture and then led in a most beautiful prayer.

In the course of his remarks, Mr. Shoop referred to LeRoy Vanderbeek's sterling Christian character, of his genial disposition, and his loving friendship. He told of the influence that the life of this young man had had on a large number of his associates, each one of whom had felt the loving touch of his friendship. Mr. Shoop also spoke at length of LeRoy's sunny nature and hearty jovality, and of how his shining light had brightened many a darkened, gloomy life.

Dr. Carroll compared the life of the Vanderbeek boy with the building of a bridge in Scotland, which first took delicate wire, then stout cables, and finally strong steel girders, which were so useful in later years in the support of one of the world's great commercial bridges. Dr. Carroll said that although Mr. Vanderbeek had not lived a score of years as yet, he had done in those nineteen years what many people fail to do in sixty.

The industrious zeal of the young man was also highly commended by both speakers.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnard J. Fitzimmons, of Bristol, Conn., who were married on July 25, are spending their honeymoon with Mrs. Amos Stiles, of East Second street.

REV. MR. ASHLEY RESIGNS

Popular Rector of St. Stephen's to Be a Curate at All Angel's, New York.

HE BUILT UP A PARISH.

Netherwood Section Will Grieve Over Loss of Hustling Young Clergyman Who Will Leave On Oct. 1.

Residents of the Netherwood section, where he has endeared himself, will learn with regret that Rev. Morgan Ashley, the popular rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, has resigned. He has accepted a call to become a curate of All Angels church, a fashionable and wealthy parish at West End avenue and Eighty-first street, New York. The resignation will take effect on Oct. 1, when the energetic young clergyman will assume his duties as an assistant to Rev. Dr. S. DeLancey Townsend.

Rev. Mr. Ashley's resignation has been handed to his vestry the members of which say they will have a most difficult time to find one who will be so successful. When Mr. Ashley went to the Netherwood parish two years ago next October, he found but a handful of worshippers and a treasury sadly depleted. Now, at every service, the pretty little edifice is filled with devout people, and the parish is free from debt, and, moreover, there is a snug balance in the treasury.

Rev. Mr. Ashley was graduated from Princeton university in 1903, and four years later from the General Theological Seminary, in New York, where he received the degree of B. D. He was ordained to the priesthood the same year. His first parish was St. Paul's, Butler, N. J. He is the son of Edward W. Ashley, of Orange.

Entertained by Miss Skillman.

Miss Ethel Skillman, of Watchung avenue, entertained a number of her friends Monday evening at a tennis party. A "round robin" tournament of mixed doubles was much enjoyed by the guests. Supper was served under the grape arbor, which was prettily decorated with Japanese lanterns. Among those in the party were: Miss Ethel Skillman, Miss Bessie Alpaugh, Miss Florence Prior, Miss Marguerite Ramsey and Guion Fountain, Charles E. Prior, Jr., Arthur Bingaman, and Stanley Robins.

Master Builders Convention.

The twenty-ninth quarterly convention of the Master Building Association of New Jersey will be held on Thursday, July 28, 1910, at 478 Broad street, Newark, N. J. There will be in attendance at this convention, representatives from every county and almost every city in the State of New Jersey. Contractors from this city are members of this organization and will be at this convention.

Alleged Bicycle Thief.

William Totten, no home, was arrested by Roundsman Higgins near the show grounds last night on a warrant issued by Recorder Campbell, of Dunellen, on a charge of stealing a bicycle belonging to William Cramer, of Dunellen. He was turned over to the Dunellen authorities.

Mustang Rider Broke His Arm.

One of the mustang riders in the "101 Ranch" Wild West show fell from the horse he was riding in yesterday afternoon's performance, breaking his elbow and wrist. The accident was unnoticed by the spectators. The unfortunate rider will remain in town several days for treatment.

GYULA DE FESTETICS WINS SUIT BROUGHT BY WIFE

Gyula deFestetics successfully defended the suit brought by his wife for the possession of the body of their son Arthur who died in this city on June 12, before Vice Chancellor Garrison yesterday.

Mr. deFestetics was represented by S. S. Swackhamer and Robert Newton Crane, while Richard Boardman represented Mrs. deFestetics.

Vice Chancellor Garrison decided that Mrs. deFestetics had no case inasmuch as there was no precedent and he refused to issue an order which she prayed for giving her the custody of the child's body. The court decided that the father had a right to bury the boy in Hillside cemetery and that his wife could not have the body removed under any circumstances, although she would have the right to visit the place of burial at any time.

According to the testimony adduced it was a complete vindication of the actions of Mr. deFestetics since the separation from his wife and further the allegations against him as to kidnapping the boy were not proved.

PROCLAMATION ON THE WATER FAMINE

Borough and City Mayors Ask People to Stop Using Lawn Sprinklers.

PRESSURE ALARMINGLY LOW.

Water Company Will Refund Payments—Fire Protection Is Imperiled—Drought Causes Trouble.

By public proclamation, Mayors Charles J. Fisk and Newton B. Smalley, of the city and borough respectively, today jointly request that the residents of the community cease

PROCLAMATION.

The excessive heat and drought now prevailing has taxed the capacity of the works of the Water Company to such a degree that it is impossible, for part of the day, to maintain pressure in the Company's mains sufficient for protection in case of fire.

This condition has prevailed for several days past to some extent, but has become so acute within forty-eight hours that urgent measures must be taken to relieve the situation.

During the past twenty-four hours more than seven million gallons of water have been pumped at Netherwood, which is more than two millions in excess of the quantity pumped in any day last year. A large port of this excess is used by lawn sprinklers and hose, and perhaps a considerable quantity of water is allowed to run to waste in fixtures in dwellings and other buildings.

The Fire Committee of the Common Council met representatives of the Water Company last evening and, after a full discussion of the situation, it was decided that action should be taken by the city authorities to prevent the unnecessary use of water during the pending drought.

The most important saving of water can be effected, with least inconvenience to the people, by the immediate cessation of the use of lawn sprinklers and hose, and their use should be discontinued at once.

The Fire Committee is assured that the Water Company will refund one-half of the amount paid by citizens for the use of hose and sprinklers during the current year, which is a fair pro rata of the charge for hose and lawn sprinklers.

It is urgently hoped that all citizens will respect this notice and warning, and direct all their employes so to do.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor of Plainfield.
N. B. SMALLEY, Mayor of North Plainfield.

Dated, July 27, 1910.

NEW CLASSES ADDED TO Y.W.C.A. PROSPECTUS

The Young Women's Christian Association has already started to plan for its fall work. The fall prospectus is to be issued soon, this containing complete information in regard to the outline of the proposed work.

The educational classes will be larger and more complete this year than ever before. The corps of teachers shows that the instruction will be of the best. Classes will be organized in millinery, dressmaking, embroidery, domestic science, English for foreign girls, English literature, French, and Christmas Arts and Crafts. This last class is an entirely new venture, but the purpose of it is a good one; teaching girls to make useful, dainty, Christmas gifts.

The course in English literature will be an enjoyable as well as a broad treatise on the literature of our mother tongue, while that in French offers a splendid opportunity for girls to study this language under a well known teacher. The courses in millinery, dressmaking, domestic science and embroidery will be designed to teach the practical as well as the artistic side of these subjects.

The list of teachers in the courses will be: Christmas Arts and Crafts, Miss Margaret Goddard, of East Ninth street; millinery, Miss Edith Capron, of New York; dressmaking, Miss Isabel Scarborough, of Park avenue; embroidery, Miss Amy Lough, of East Front street; French, Miss Zoe Bateman, of this city; domestic science, Miss Wilson, of the New York Teachers' College, and English literature, Miss Elizabeth Chadbourn, of this city. The course in English for foreign girls will be taught by several different Plainfield women.

THE WEATHER.

Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday; not much change in temperature; light to moderate variable winds.

Max., 91; Min., 61.

The Misses Mary Seevs and Mary E. Robinson, of West Second street, left this morning for Asbury Park, where they will spend their vacation of two weeks.

using lawn sprinklers and hose. In the official statement notice is given that the water company will refund the proportion of the payment for such privilege for the remainder of the year. It is an emergency measure due to the alarming conditions occasioned by the continued drou; Fire protection is imperiled by the lack of pressure due solely, it is said, to the unusual use of lawn and garden sprinklers and this has prompted the municipal heads to make the request.

The present condition of the water pressure is well known to every householder. The flow from the faucets and the stream from the lawn hydrants have been extraordinarily small during the past few days especially. The fact that only .02 inches of rain has fallen during the twenty-seven days of the month has caused the lawns and gardens to dry up and this has compelled the property-owners to use water freely to save them. So great has been the use that the huge tank at the Netherwood plant has become almost empty at times. On Monday night between 6:00 and 8:30, for instance, one and a quarter million gallons of water was used. This represents two and a half times the quantity that the stand pipe can hold at one time. It is believed that nearly a million gallons of this total represents the amount used for sprinkling purposes.

The stand pipe is 140 feet high and has a diameter of 25 feet. It will hold 515,000 gallons of water. The other night, despite the running of the pumps at high pressure, the water in the big tank fell ninety-seven feet. This means a falling off of 45 pounds pressure, which is a serious thing should a fire occur. The normal pressure is seventy pounds. With but twenty-five pounds pressure in the hose, the fire department would be powerless to cope with a blaze of any magnitude.

One year ago, the water company was supplying 5,000,000 gallons a day here. This week's records show that the use has jumped up to 7,000,000. The two millions increase, it is explained, is due almost entirely to the unusual drought and the consequent use of lawn sprinklers.

The situation was discussed thoroughly at a conference last night between the Councilmanic fire committee and the representatives of the water company. President Frank Bergen, of the company, explained the condition of affairs, and the city fathers agreed that some radical step should be taken at once to in-

LAST WEEK OF THE
JULY CLEARANCE SALE
AND THE TEFFT, WELLER CO. STOCK.

It is not strange that a country store should have been two weeks in advance of the city stores in advertising the Tefft, Weller Co. stock. We advertised this sale on July 5th. New York, Philadelphia and Newark stores got next only July 19th, showing conclusively the alertness of the "White Store" in trying at all times to secure the best possible values for our patrons. It will pay you to be on hand every day this week, for during the closing days of this great sale special lots will be offered from day to day that will not be advertised.

GOV. FORT FELICITATES GEN. DENNIS F. COLLINS

General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, has received a letter from Governor Fort, congratulating him on the showing made by him and his command in the sham battle at the Gettysburg camp of instruction.

The letter follows:

"My Dear General Collins:

"Naturally I was greatly pleased that your brigade won in the fight during the maneuvres at Gettysburg. Your victory, accompanied by the complimentary letter of General Wotherspoon, on the general work of the troops, is a matter for congratulation not only on the part of the National Guard, but for all Jerseymen.

"It justifies the sending of the brigade to the camp of instruction, and demonstrates more than anything else could (what those of us familiar with the guard already know) that New Jersey has a National Guard unsurpassed by that of any other State, and one which reflects credit upon this State.

"With hearty congratulations, I am

"Yours very truly,
(Signed)
"JOHN FRANKLIN FORT."

DALY MAKES DENIAL OF "DISAPPEARANCE."

John Daly, a court constable, who, it was alleged, figured as a go-between in a $10,000 real estate transaction County Register John J. McMahon had with the North Bergen Board of Education in Jersey City in 1908 and which was recently exposed by the special Senate investigating committee which has been probing school conditions throughout the State, "located" himself yesterday in a statement given out through his counsel, Eugene W. Leake. Since the North Bergen expose Daly has kept in the background and all effort to locate him has failed. His statement is as follows:

"The newspapers have been making a great fuss about my so-called disappearance. I was sick and excused by the sheriff's office. Some of my friends sent me the newspaper clippings and I returned at once to show that these newspaper stories are all wrong. I understand that Judge Carey wants to see me and I certainly intend to keep my appointment with him on Wednesday morning. I understand also that the Senate investigating committee wants to see me and I will gladly appear before that committee any time they send for me. I am advised by my counsel that no investigating committees have any right to pry into the private affairs or real estate transactions of any person, and while I admit that I was lucky as a good many other people have been in making a good real estate sale, I will certainly tell them that it is none of their business how much profit I made on the sale of land for a public school in North Bergen. I was not a member of the Board of Education that bought the school, and I didn't have any friends on the board. I got the best price I could for my property.

New Use For Vacuum Cleaner.

Mosquitoes do not disturb the slumbers of John T. Lyman, 183 Cooper avenue, Upper Montclair. There are many of the little winged pests in that section of the mountain town this summer, and, despite the fact that outer doors and windows are carefully screened to prevent their entrance, many mosquitoes get into the house each day. Mr. Lyman has found an effective way of clearing the rooms of them. According to Mr. Lyman's story, he has a small vacuum carpet cleaner which is run by the electric current obtained by removing an electric light bulb and connecting the motor of the cleaner to the socket. Just before retiring, Mr. Lyman says, he runs the cleaner over the walls of the sleeping rooms, not allowing it to touch the wall, but keeping a distance of several inches away. The result is, he asserts, that every mosquito, fly, moth or other insect that has secured entrance into the house is sucked into the dust bag at the lower end of the machine. This work accomplished after two minutes to each room, Mr. Lyman and his family retire to their beds, where they can remain, undisturbed by insect pests until morning.

Girl Escapes From Asylum.

A telegram was received at Elizabeth yesterday from the authorities of the Morris Plains State Hospital for the Insane, that Mary Dessenfy, alias Mary Miller, who was taken from the county jail June 27 last to the asylum, had escaped from there Monday. The Elizabeth police authorities are requested to keep a lookout for the fugitive. The woman is twenty-one years old and is said to be an inveterate cigarette fiend. She has figured in several escapades in Elizabeth during the past four years and was in jail half a dozen times. It was finally decided she was mentally unbalanced from cigarette smoking and should be placed in the insane asylum. Her parents are now living in Linden Township.

Governor's Day at Meet.

Governor's Day at the aviation meet, to be held at Asbury Park, August 10 to 29, will be August 18, Governor J. Franklin Fort, Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, and Governor Edward S. Stuart, of Pennsylvania, have been invited to attend with their staffs and the members of both houses of the State Legislature have also been asked to attend. August 16 has been set apart for the scientists, and will be known as "Scientist's Day." Many celebrities in the scientific world will be asked to attend the meet. Among them will be Thomas A. Edison, the Wizard of Llewellyn. A "speechless dinner" has been planned for that night, at which the men of science will be guests. Speeches will be printed on the menus, but no one will be allowed to address the diners.

Marti Dessaux Here.

Master Marti Augustus Dessaux, the little French lad who will be adopted by Mrs. Joseph Cleary, has arrived in town and is now quite happy. Young Dessaux will apply himself to learning English so that in the fall he will be able to go to school.

Boy Tries Suicide in Jail.

Taking as serious a threat that he "wouldn't get anything to eat for a week," Edward Williams, a negro lad, who lives in Orange, N. J., and has been in jail at Newark for the last three weeks, attempted suicide yesterday by hanging. When discovered by one of the hallmen he had taken the sweatband from his hat, twisted it about his neck and was ready to suspend himself. Deputy Warden James Reilly refused to divulge the name of the hallman who is said to have made the threat.

Proves Rumor of Death Untrue.

A persistent rumor has been in circulation the last week that Dr. James S. Brown, surgeon at the Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, had died while on a vacation at Lake Champlain, where the doctor had been resting from a severe nervous attack. But the doctor is very much alive, as was proved by a visit which he made to his home, in Montclair, Monday, in order to show his friends that he is still a poor subject for an obituary notice.

Fire Damages Lumber Yard.

Fire Monday afternoon damaged the lumber yard of Jacob Jacobson, at Elizabethport. The flames spread rapidly, but the firemen's efforts were effectual in preventing the flames from reaching houses in the vicinity. The loss will reach several thousand dollars. This was the second time the plant has been on fire within a few months.

For the first time in thirty weeks, Katherine O'Connell, seventeen years old, of 781 Line street, Camden, Monday partook of a meal with her family after suffering from an attack of hiccoughs since last Christmas.

WATER PROCLAMATION

sure the necessary water pressure for the fire department. The upshot of the matter was a decision to ask the executive heads to request the people to stop using lawn sprinklers.

Twenty-three wells are in operation at present at the Netherwood plant, but before long a number more will be in use. For months the company has been working to enlarge its plant, expecting that sooner or later just such a situation would be presented. Four new wells have been completed and two more are being rapidly put in shape. A new pumping station is also being installed. The new pumps are the air pressure plan, commonly called the air lifts. The pumps now in use are the suction type. The new wells, which will be increased from time to time to supply the demand, are sunk into the solid rock to a depth of 350 feet, while the present wells are only seventy feet deep.

In a month or so, the water company officials say, the added equipment, will afford an increased supply of a million and a half gallons a day. At the present time, the Plainfield-Union Water Company is only supplying towns in Union county as far as Garwood, the supply for Roselle, Cranford, El Mora and other places being furnished from Elizabeth. Notices similar to those issued here will be sent out today in every other town where the local company is supplying water.

It is generally believed that the public will understand and approve the steps taken to insure fire protection and will cease forthwith to use lawn sprinklers and hose.

Small Boy Lost In Crowd.

Little Richard Mellick, the five-year-old son of Thomas L. Mellick, of East Second street, wandered away from his mother while the two were shopping in town yesterday, and was lost among the crowd of parade witnesses. Patrolman Vanderweg found him and took him to the Public Service Corporation office, where his father is employed. Then there was a happy reunion between father and lost son.

ASBESTOS SAD IRONS
AN IRON FOR EVERY PURPOSE.

The Cause of the Commotion

East Front Street in front of our store was litterly jammed with people on Saturday night, the crowd numbering at least a thousand. The cause of the commotion was the demonstration in our window of

"Asbestos Sad Irons"

By Miss A. S. Bestos, who notwithstanding the extreme heat, smilingly ironed away and showed the crowd the many advantages these famous irons posseses over the ordinary kind. It's a pleasure to iron with them particularly in Summer, the absence of heat in the handle makes them the most comfortable and sanitary irons a woman can use, for all of the heat is confined to the face of the iron and kept away from the hand of the ironer, and as the demonstrator says, "You always have a hot iron and a cold handle."

Briefly speaking the principal features of "Asbestos Sad Irons" are the heat-retaining hood, Asbestos lining, cool handle, highly polished ironing surface, nicely rounded edges, economy in heating. An iron for every purpose. Here's what they sell for:

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

As to Charles Newell Fowler.

What is the Republican party? Why is the Republican party? At Paterson, N. J., a Republican audience loudly applauded a statement by Congressman Fowler, as follows: "It is my opinion that Cannon and Aldrich are two of the biggest political pirates and public enemies of this republic." If the men who have led the House of Representatives and the United States Senate around by the nose for years and who have been elected as Republicans are to be declared "Pirates" by a Republican Congressman and the sentiment applauded by Republican voters, what shall one think of that party which has maintained such men in office? Congressman Fowler, but a few short months ago, from a Rahway platform, extolled the grand old Republican party, the party without blemish, the party which was responsible for all the "good times' the country has experienced, the party led by men of brains, the party which was not responsible for the so-called "Roosevelt panic,' engineered by the friends of Aldrich in Wall street. Was Congressman Fowler less thoroughly informed of the piratical natures of Aldrich and Cannon at that time or may we assume that their deficiencies were held in the background to deceive his Rahway audience? Did Fowler play fair with the Rahway voters when he induced them to continue supporting the "Pirates" and their crowd? Did Fowler ever take any action whatsoever to protect his constituents until he himself had been cut off from his committee chairmanship by Speaker Cannon? Is he not a "sore-head" in every sense of the word—a man who can point to nothing of service to the rank and file of the voters? If Congressman Fowler has ever shown that devotion to the cause of the people which he professes he should be forgiven for his delay in exposing his confederates in Congress—otherwise he should be held strictly accountable. —Rahway News-Herald.

THE GRADUATE.

The graduate is hard to guess,
That fact is very plain.
She wears a thousand dollar dress
Yet lugs a daisy chain.

You'd think with such a fine array
That she would hardly deign

Without an orchid chain.

If daisy chains are good enough,
Why can't she wear a dress
That's made of inexpensive stuff?
She's very hard to guess.

BATHING-SUIT FASHIONS.

"Today the well-dressed girl's bathing outfit is a convincing illustration that fashions, at least along some lines, are improving as the days go by," says Grace Margaret Gould, in Woman's Home Companion for July. "Bathing suits reflect the trend of the prevailing fashion. They are smart in style and decidedly shapely—occasionally a little too shapely—and they are made of modish fabrics and are trimmed in most attractive ways.

"And not the smallest accessory of the bathing-suit is forgotten—every little detail is considered. The girl who studies her clothes and who cares especially for appropriateness in dress is very particular about her bathing costume. She wants it to be stylish, to be sure, but she is equally anxious that in no way shall it be conspicuous.

"In deciding upon the color of her suit she generally selects either a dark blue, dark brown or black. Such shades as red, light tan or white are only permissible for a well-dressed little girl. The grown-up girl keeps the foundation coloring of her bathing suit dark, and introduces the bright color note, if she must have it, in the trimming."

FOUND WAY TO GET RID OF A BABY CARRIAGE.

The problem of what to do with a baby carriage after Warren Wright, of Chicago, against whom it had been used as evidence, was found guilty of stealing it, troubled Municipal Judge Wells until it was stolen by a policeman, who ran out of the court-room with and escaped, says a Windy City paper.

"I've got some kids at home," he shouted, as he disappeared through the doorway, "and I can make good use of it."

The bailiff followed him, but by the time he reached the sidewalk the policeman was half a block away, running at full speed, pushing the baby buggy.

"I don't think I'll try to find out who the policeman was that stole the buggy," said Judge Wells. "It was a good way to get rid of it."

CHINTZ APPLIQUE.

Apply cut-out cretonne flowers to course linen lace for bedroom curtains.

This work is to be recommended for its beauty and richness, and, let it be whispered, for the repairing of that cluny and antique lace insertion in the curtain that has seen too hard service on the washboard.

Huge colorful blossoms from English chintz or cretonne are sewed upon the lace with their raw edges in evidence and then covered along their edges with white or cream cottonbraid.

When this work is well and firmly done, therea will be no danger in its being laundered with the ordinary care given to any curtains. The applique work should, however, be laid face downward upon a soft flannel cloth during ironing.

CHANCERY COURT MUST DECIDE PRINCETON GIFT

On the construction of the will of Mrs. Josephine A. Thomas Swann, who died at Princeton on March 2, 1906, leaving a large estate, hinges the disposition of about $320,000 left to the university for the erection and maintenance of a graduate college.

Mrs. Swann's will expressly provided that the building shall be erected "upon the grounds of the said university." Since that time two large gifts have been received for the same purpose, that of the late Isaac C. Wyman, of Salem, Mass., whose bequest, it is expected, will total at least $2,000,000, and that of William Cooper Procter, of Cincinnati, who has offered $500,000 conditional upon the raising of an equal amount.

These latter beneficences have been arranged to be used for the erection of a great graduate school on the present golf links, a fine tract of land comprising some 222 acres. This tract, however, was acquired by the university subsequent to the death of Mrs. Swann.

Now the trustees of the university, through Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, have applied to the Court of Chancery for a ruling whether this land, now, but not at the time of Mrs. Swann's death, owned by them, may be considered as being embraced in the terms of her will, so that advantage may be taken of her bequest.

In the bill of complaint the university trustees, after reciting in great detail their rights and powers as to the acquisition and control of real estate under the law conferred since the founding of the College of New Jersey in 1748, tell of the death of Mrs. Swann and the probate of the will. This instrument was dated July 20, 1902, with a codicil dated July 24, 1905.

The will was admitted to probate in due course and on April 5, 1907, the executors delivered to the university trustees $192,748.99, being the residuary estate of the testatrix. This sum has grown by various accretions to about $320,000.

The paragraphs of the will devising the amount named to the uses of a graduate college, construction of which is now sought, are as follows:

Terms of Bequest.

"I give, devise and bequeath all the rest, residue and remainder of my estate, of whatsoever kind or nature, and wheresoever the same may be situate, unto the trustees of Princeton University, in trust, nevertheless, to devote the same, or the proceeds thereof, as soon as practicable, to the erection and construction, upon the grounds of said university, of a building to be known as the John R. Thomson Graduate College of Princeton University, the said building to contain sitting and sleeping rooms for officers and students, with a dining hall, kitchen and the necessary appurtenances, in a portion of the building entirely separate, and apart from, such sitting and sleeping rooms.

"The living-rooms shall be rented at the best prices they will command to the graduate, senior and junior students of the university and the income derived from such rentals, after deducting the cost of maintaining such building, shall be devoted to the maintenance of as many fellowships of $400 each as the funds will provide.

"These fellowships shall be awarded by a committee to be designated from time to time by the trustees of the university and shall be given to bachelors of arts of the male sex of high character and ability who would not otherwise be able to continue their studies at the university, and they shall be terminable at the discretion of said committee. The fellows, to a number not exceeding thirty, shall have unfurnished rooms in said building free of rent. The tuition fees of the fellows shall be remitted by the trustees as a condition of this gift.

"The number and situation of the rooms allotted to the officers and fellows shall be fixed by the said committee, but in no case shall the rent of more than thirty rooms be remitted. The board at the college table shall be regulated by the committee, and the fellows of the graduate college shall pay the regular charge therefor, and they shall eat at the college table, unless dispensed therefrom by the dean of the graduate faculty. * * *

For Literary Research.

"I further direct that the said fellowships shall be bestowed upon bachelors of arts who are engaged in literary and scientific research other than that directly connected with professional studies, so-called; that said fellowships shall be known as 'the John R. Thomson Fellowships;' that in making appointments to said fellowships bachelors of arts of Princeton University shall have preference in the order named:

"First, from the Borough of Princeton; second, from the county of Mercer, and third, from other parts of the state of New Jersey; provided always, that the attainments of such persons are fully equal to those of other applicants.

"It is my desire that my executors shall be fully consulted respecting the character and location of the said graduate college, which is designed by me for a permanent memorial of the interest felt by my late husband, John R. Thomson, in the higher literary and scientific education of his countrymen."

The executors named are Professor William M. Sloane, Bayard Stockton and Francis Larkin, Jr., to whom letters testamentary were issued. They have agreed to the use of the golf links for the site of the school, subject to the approval of the Court of Chancery.

The trustees making the request for the construction of the will were Moses Taylor Pyne, Stephen S. Palmer and Cornelius C. Cuyler.

A NOVEL CRAFT INVENTED BY AN AUSTRIAN.

In a recent report sent from Chemnitz Consel Thomas H. Norton says that in German sporting circles interest is excited over the possibilities of a newly devised form of locomotive for use on water, termed the "hydrocycle."

It is of exceedingly simple construction. A couple of parallel, pointed water-tight tubes of galvanized iron, ten and one-half feet in length, are attached to each other two and one-half feet apart. A light framework supports a seat. Beneath this is a pair of pedals, the motion of which is communicated to propeller blades. A handle bar in front of the seat is connected with a rudder.

The traveler using this novel craft, by a pedal action identical with that of the ordinary bicycle, moves easily over the surface of the water, and alters his direction promptly at will. He has an advantage over the rower in facing forward, as does a canoe paddler.

The total weight of a one-seated hydrocycle is sixty-six pounds. The inventor, an Austrian (Herr Fr. Kaspar), attained a speed of six to seven miles per hour. The new craft offers an agreeable variation from ordinary rowing, for use on inland waters and along the seashore.

More elaborate constructions, provision for more than one passsenger, and other improvements on the fundamental idea, may enable it to become a popular feature in marine sports.

A COLORED TIE.

The paisley tie has a pretty touch which will add richness to the midsummer shirt waist, and while the fashion expert persists in the passing of the separate shirt she suggests more and still more ties that will, like the paisley print, harmonize with this skirt, which is not in question, but out of the count.

All of this is a tacit consent to the cool shirt waist; but wear the white blouse with a white linen skirt whenever you can, instead of dividing yourself, and the pretty tie will prove none the less effective.

Color enters in here, for the Parisian prints come in all tones and tints, and the paisley tie is only at its best on you when it is chosen in a becoming general tone.

The Refugees.

"Now, stranger, it isn't etiquette in Frozen Dog to ask a man why he came here."

"I know all about that. It's the same way in Paris."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Louis Drucke, Whose Rise to Fame Was Rapid.

Louis Drucke, known in Texas as "the pride of the Brazos," now a successful pitcher for the New York Nationals, was a college student one year ago. In three months he accomplished the step from college baseball to service in the major league, his minor league experience being brief, but long enough for Manager McGraw to recognize the lad's unusual ability.

Drucke graduated from Texas Christian university of Waco in June of last year and immediately joined the Dallas team of the Texas league. Drucke pitched twice a week and lost only two or three games. He was considered the best pitcher in the Texas league despite his lack of experience in professional baseball, and that was an honor, considering the fact that several twirlers from that league were corralled by major league scouts last fall.

McGraw closed a deal for the purchase of Drucke last July, or, rather, he then exercised an option and bought the youngster's release for $2,000. But Drucke's experience with McGraw dates back to the spring of 1908, when the Giants made their first trip to Texas for training purposes.

The Giants that season won something like thirty-four exhibition games in the Lone Star State. They were beaten only once, and Drucke, then a green college pitcher, turned the trick.

Ty Cobb on Port Siders.

Cobb declares that left handed batters can solve the sharp breaking curve thrown by left handed pitchers—a curve that is too much for most of them—by crowding into the plate, stepping forward on the ball and spearing it before it breaks. This, he says, is a comparatively easy thing with only a little practice. Most left handed batters, Ty says, have grown accustomed to imagining themselves buffaloed by the port side pitchers and fall feebly from afar when that curve comes over. By crowding boldly inward they can get busy with the ball and will soon find themselves making all kinds of hits off the delivery that has so long confoozled them.

After Harmsworth Cup.

According to Commodore H. H. Melville of the Motorboat Club of America, who recently returned from England, where he completed the final arrangements for the coming international motorboat race for the Harmsworth cup, the keenest interest is displayed by the British motorboat owners in the coming race, and many of them are coming over in person to attend it.

Played For One Run.

Griffith, McGraw and Bresnahan are the hit and run managers of the National league, while Chance, Clarke and Lake are depending more on the sacrifice hit. Dooin and Dahlen are "mixers." Having poor luck with the hit and run style, Manager Chance switched, resorted to the sacrifice and played for one run. Seven victories resulted.

Big Prizes For Pacific Motor Race.

The Pacific International Motorboat association of Seattle, Wash., is completing arrangements for the first annual motorboat race from Puget sound to Ketchikan, southeastern Alaska, next August, for which prizes valued at $7,000 will be given.

McGilvray Fails to Explain.

"The Bald Eagle of the Coldorado" is what the Cincinnati scribes called McGilvray. The first part is all right, but wherein the second portion is apt is a mystery that Bill will not explain.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The crop of huckleberries in South Jersey has broken all records, and the prices dropped yesterday to six and eight cents per quart.

County Clerk Kirby, of Atlantic county, has issued final naturalization papers to thirteen foreigners who were admitted to citizenship last week by Judge Higbee.

Just recovering from a severe case of dropsy, which reduced her weight over 100 pounds, Mrs. Mary Hilyard, of Williamstown, is now suffering from a paralytic stroke.

While he was canoeing in Muddy Run, Millville, Monday, William Stover was upset by a fallen tree and he was almost drowned when pulled from the swift current by a fisherman.

The heat in the only glass factory which is being operated in Millville was so intense on Monday that the workmen could not continue and the firm will close the plant for the season.

Dr. John C. Curry, of Holroyd place, Woodbury, who has offices at Fifteenth and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, was badly poisoned by eating mushrooms, of which he is very fond. It is the second time he has come near losing his life from the same cause.

Joseph Davis, son of J. Frank Davis, of Mays Landing, captured a State scholarship for Rutgers College at a competitive examination by County Superintendent Cressman. Young Davis, who is a senior in the Atlantic City High School, will complete his course there and enter Rutgers in 1911.

Thomas Brown, of Eighteenth street, Paterson, caught his arm in a machine while at his work a month ago. The skin was stripped off as completely as though 't had been a long glove. A short time ago skin was taken from the man's leg and grafted on to the arm. The grafting has proved a complete success.

Charles P. Tilton, an Atlantic City contractor and amateur yachtsman, was dragged nearly twenty-five yards under water at the Inlet when his foot caught in a sheet and pulled him overboard. The craft kept right on and rescuers on board had to luff her up before they could pull the owner out. Tilton recovered under treatment.

Masonic ceremonies are to mark the laying of the corner-stone of the new Bradley Beach $85,000 public school early in September. Masonic dignitaries from all over the State are to be invited to attend the laying of the stone, and a banquet to the visiting potentates at the La Reine Hotel is being considered by the committee. The new school adjoins the new Catholic church.

The hastily scribbled note which Lena Silsky slipped under the door of her gas-filled room after she had determined on suicide in a boarding-house on Goodwell avenue, Atlantic City, resulted in the woman's life being saved. Other boarders saw the note and after reading it broke open the door and pulled the woman out in time to resuscitate her. Expecting to die the woman had left the note to declare that loss of her husband's love had decided her on suicide.

William Newport, of Philadelphia, fell the first victim of the Atlantic City campaign against reckless bathing, started by Chief Beckwith and his force of life guards on Monday, when he defied the orders of Guard Miller and was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct. Newport was swimming out beyond the life boats and was ordered back because of the rough sea. When he refused the guards went after him in a life boat, placed him under arrest and sent him to the city hall, where he was released under bail for appearance before Recorder Keffer.

SOME OLD FRIENDS.

An inspection of the materials for spring and summer wear shows that certain old-time, reliable materials have returned under new names, but our mothers will recognize their friends in the shape of the coarse linens that resemble "oat meal" cloth, hopsacking and the various basket weaves.

The feature that commends itself to many women is the fact that the weave is so evident that it serves for decoration, and, therefore, requires very little other ornamentation. Simple braiding designs or buttons are generally sufficient for the morning dress, while the square meshes of these coarse fabrics form excellent backgrounds upon which designs in cross-stitching (done with woolen or linen threads) may be added.

When the individual touch of embroidery is added these materials are excellent for afternoon wear, and although the design is more conventional than the trailing vines worked by the weavers of fifty years ago the effect warrants the time expended in the construction.

Charles F. Dayton, formerly of East Sixth street, who recently moved to Flemington, has been elected musical director of the Baptist Sunday-school in that town.

"Executor Ordered to Pay Up" is the heading of a recent newspaper story regarding a trusted relative who had lost a Trust Estate through speculation.

The selection of a competent Trust Company as Executor and Trustee is the certain and sensible way to avoid all such future difficulties for the Estate. Speculation is prohibited.

BAMBERGER'S
"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"
MARKET, HALSEY & BANK STS.

An Interesting Summer Store.

"I don't seem to notice the heat when I shop at your store," said an Elizabeth woman the other day. "Everyone seems so busy and there's so much going on all the while that, somehow or other, I seem to forget that it is hot."

We thought this was most COMPLIMENTARY, as we told the customer so, too.

Now we don't claim that our store is an ICE BOX in the summer time or that it is any cooler than any other big, modern shop with good, high ceilings, broad aisles and plenty of electric fans, but we DO claim that this is an INTERESTING summer store and we DO try to make it so thoroughly WORTH WHILE to come here these hot days, that it is exactly as the Elizabeth woman said, "YOU SEEM TO FORGET THAT IT IS HOT."

With all the excessively hot weather of the past few weeks, we are just rounding out the BIGGEST and BUSIEST July in all our seventeen years of store keeping in the "INDUSTRIAL CITY", and we want to state right here—and emphatically, too—that we're going to keep things humming for the next thirty days as they never hummed before, at this time of the year.

Visit this store some of these torrid days and see if it isn't pretty nearly as the Union County woman says.

MAN AND THE RAT.

The Long Battle Between These Two Conquering Forces.

The dominion of man over the beasts of the field does not yet include the rodents. Aurochs, cave bear and mammoth we put down with stone headed arrows. We have wiped out the buffalo. The lion and the elephant will soon be gone. But still the rabbit of Australia cost the colonies millions a year. Traps, ferrets and poison still fail to make headway against the rats, mice and gophers of the United States. While our animal enemies have become smaller in size, they have grown more numerous. It is as if nature after trying vainly to chastise her insurgent son with a catapult had gone after him with a shotgun.

The fact is that of all warm blooded creatures there are just two that are really dominant, successful, increasing in numbers and range and able to maintain themselves anywhere in the world against all rivals. These two are man and the rats. The genus homo and genus mus go everywhere and eat everything. They are the two creatures that dwell in houses and travel in ships. Each drives its other rivals to the wall, but neither except locally and for brief periods has ever come near to exterminating the other. Civilized man has fought the common rat for 200 years, and the battle is still drawn.—McClure's Magazine.

A KING'S DOWNFALL.

Louis Philippe's Lack of Nerve When the Crisis Came.

Baroness Bonde wrote in her diary the following account of the abdication of Louis Philippe of France on the day of that remarkable occurrence:

"An aid-de-camp of the minister of war who was in the king's cabinet when he abdicated gave me a detailed account of this most signal piece of cowardice. He had reviewed the troops in the carrousel on horseback, highly rouged, when a cry was raised, 'Voici les Faubourgs!' No one had any orders; no one gave any. The mob rushed forward, shouting, 'Vive la garde nationales—vivent les troupes!' and shook hands with the outposts. The king retreated precipitately with his sons, and a sublieutenant of the national guard rushed into the palace asking to see him. He was admitted and in the greatest agitation said, 'Your majesty must abdicate.' 'Very well,' says the king. 'In favor of my grandson.' 'No, unconditionally,' says the young and self elected mouthpiece of public opinion.

"Would you believe it? Of all who were congregated round the royal person Piscatory alone said: 'Go down and head your troops. Fight for your crown and your dynasty.' He was overruled, and they all marched out of the palace except the Duchesse d'Orleans, her children and the Duc de Nemours."

Boxing the Compass.

Boys who live in seaport towns are sometimes asked to "box the compass." If they can do it quickly and accurately they are fine sailors and may grow up to be the captain of a four master. If they miss a point or can only do it slowly they are landlubbers and will never see blue water. To box the compass means to name all the points in order just as fast as you can speak. This is the way an old down east skipper will rattle it off: North, nor' by east, nor'-nor'east, nor'-east by north, northeast, nor'east by east, east-nor'east, east by north, east, east by south, east-sou'east, sou'east by east, sou'east, sou'east by south, sou'-sou'east, sou' by east, south, sou' by west, sou'-sou'west, sou'west by south, sou'west, sou'west by west, west-sou'west, west by south, west, west by north, west-nor'west, nor'west by west, nor'west, nor'west by north, nor'-nor'west, nor' by west, north.

Can you do it?—Exchange.

Gunpowder and Artillery.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past. The Hindoo code, compiled long before the Christian era, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns or any kind of firearms. Quintus Curtius informs us that Alexander the Great met with fire weapons in Asia, and Philostratus says that Alexander's conquests were arrested by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that those wise men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "overthrew their enemies with tempests and thunderbolts shot from the walls."

An Odd Turkish Superstition.

An odd Turkish superstition is as follows: If one finds a piece of bread lying upon the ground he must pick it up, kiss it and carry it until he finds a hole into which the bread can be inserted. To step upon a piece of bread or to leave it lying upon the ground is one of the unpardonable sins and dooms the offender to the third hell, where he is perpetually gored by an ox that has but a single horn that is in the center of his forehead.

Advanced Ancestral Pride.

"So Woodby is very rich now. When I knew him he was poor. His only treasure in those days was the musket his great-grandfather carried in the Revolution."

"Oh, his great-grandfather has been promoted since. Woodby exhibits his sword now."—Philadelphia Press.

The Limelight.

"Pa, what is meant by the limelight?"

"The limelight, my boy, is something that everybody wants to be in without paying advertising rates for the privilege."—Detroit Free Press.

GIVING UP TO DICK

Im so glad to see you, Margaret," said the girl in the blue silk kimono, looking up languidly from the lounge. "Put your wraps on the bed. I've always felt that you and I were kindred spirits and now I know we are since you divined that I was dying to see you. By the way, I'm not going to Agnes' party to-night. I've given up society."

"As befits a good church woman during Lent, Betty." Margaret returned, sinking into a rocking chair.

"I'd almost forgotten it is Lent," Betty confessed, plumping up a pillow behind her head.

"What makes you look so dismal? Didn't Dick call last night?" Margaret asked.

"All his things, even the dear little cigarette he gave me the first night we met, I've made into a package to return to him," declared Betty, tragically. "It has been such a trying ordeal that I simply had to lie down."

"Tell me all about it, my dear," Margaret urged.

Just after Christmas," Betty began, "I happened to say to Dick—I mean Mr. Blount—that I liked calendars—I mean a certain calendar. It happened this way: We were going to the theater and he had to stop at his office for something. Over his desk hung a calendar with the picture of a woman entitled, 'The Girl I Love.' Of course it was an idealized subject and really she wasn't in the least pretty, but just to show that I was not jealous and to show also that I took some interest in Mr. Blount's surroundings I said, 'What a perfectly beautiful calendar!'

"He seemed quite pleased with my admiration and the next night he brought the calendar to me.

"Well, John Knight called the next evening. When he saw the calendar he said at once that he had a beauty, which he would bring to hang alongside it. He said he was glad to know I liked calendars, because he liked them, too. You know, Margaret, I never can bear to hurt another's feelings, so I permitted John to believe that I longed to own his calendar also. Perhaps I may have added, when he hung it up beside Mr. Blount's, that I rather preferred the subject of it to the other.

"Bert Waldron called Sunday afternoon. He said he didn't know I was fond of calendars. He added that he had two beauties in his office which he'd send up on Monday. A messenger boy brought them next day, together with a lovely big bouquet of violets. Yesterday was Monday, wasn't it? Oh, it seems ages ago. Well, of course I hung Bert's calendars beside the other two.

"Shortly afterward Prof. Morton dropped in with a piece of music which he promised me. When he saw the calendars he said if he had known I cared so much for such things he would have sent me the one in his studio, which he greatly prized because it reminded him of me. What could I say but that I should be delighted to own the calendar?

"We were just hanging it over my desk last night when Mr. Blount called. You will never believe how dreadfully he acted. I was glad the professor could remain only a few minutes—he was on his way to play at a recital. After he had gone, Mr. Blount said he'd 'like to punch that old fool's head.' He went on to say that he didn't know I had a craze for calendars or he'd have sent me a hundred. He said that after all the admiration I had wasted on his horrid calendar and the interest I had taken the trouble to show in his business! It will always be to my credit that I smiled sweetly and amiably while he was making his unkind remarks. By way of changing the subject I asked him if he didn't think Bert's violets were lovely.

"I never before realized how rude Mr. Blount is. When I asked him that innocent question, he sprung to his feet and, still with calendars on his mind, positively roared out that his office boy had a calendar which doubtless I would be pleased to add to my collection and he would send it up. Then he went away without even holding my hand for the briefest moment.

"The calendar came a little while ago, a picture of a dreadful-looking creature called 'The Coquette.' I'm sure I can't imagine why Mr. Blount should have thought I'd like to add that to my collection. As a matter of fact, it's burning up in the furnace with the other calendars and all my dreams.

"Life is over for me, Margaret. I shall never speak to Mr. Blount again."

"Please, Miss Betty, it's Mr. Blount calling you on the phone," interposed a white-capped maid at this moment.

Betty sprung to her feet and flew out of the room. When she returned her eyes were shining.

"It was Dick," she said. "The dear boy! He's going to take me to Agnes' party to-night and wants me to wear my blue gown. Dick just loves me in blue."

"I thought——" Margaret began, slowly.

"As I explained to Dick over the telephone," Betty went on hurriedly, "as it is Lent, I feel I ought not to indulge longer in uncharitable thoughts against any one. It is splendid discipline, during Lent, to give up having one's own way; that's why I've given up to Dick."

"How sweet of you!" said Margaret, smiling to herself.

Entire Wheat Bread.

Two cups scalded milk, one-fourth cup sugar, one teaspoonful salt, one yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup luke warm water, four and one-third cups entire wheat flour. Combine the first three ingredients and when cool add dissolved yeast cake and three cups of flour; beat until light, add remaining flour, beat, cover and let rise to double its bulk; again heat, turn into greased bread pans one-third full, let rise not quite double, bake; making and baking to occupy five and one half hours.

The Other Side.

"I see you employ a number of old men."

"I do."

"How old are they?"

"Too old to be interested in canoeing or mandolins, or racehorses, or girls, or tennis. That makes 'em fine for work."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Variety of Laces.

The skillful dressmaker does not hesitate to combine several varieties of lace on one gown, even if it is necessary to applique one variety with another to get an unusual effect. Lace in various ways play one of the most important roles on the gowns for mid-summer. It may be a handsome lace polonaise, and here the black Chantilly laces are used to excellent advantage, or a more general form is the deep flounce of lace, of which two and even three are sometimes used. Again the material may be draped to display an underskirt rippling with ruffles.

Modernized.

Auntie—Back from the sewing circle? I suppose you are making a crazy quilt for poor old lady Jones?

Gwendolyn—Not much. Each girl brought a piece of a busted auto, and we are going to have them put together into a new machine for poor divorced Mrs. Uppish.

Parboiling Steaks.

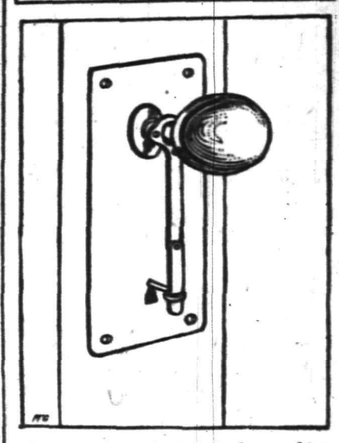
To parboil a steak is about as good as to cook over the coals. Use an iron frying pan if possible. Heat very hot, but do not use a drop of grease. When the pan is smoking put the steak in and turn rapidly from side to side. This will help to keep in the juices. Then brown and cook slowly. All meat should have a very high temperature at first to sear the outside; then it must cook more slowly. Meat is ruined if it is cooked very quickly.

Egg Toast.

This is a popular Southern supper dish. Butter a shallow pudding dish put in a layer of toast cut into narrow strips, then a layer of the whites of hard-boil eggs sliced, then another layer of toast. Put on top of all the yolks of the eggs, "riced" by passing through a vegetable press. Pour over all a rich cream sauce, highly seasoned, and place in the oven until it is well browned.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Device to Keep the Key Fast In the Lock.



People who lock their bedroom doors to keep burglars out do not always feel safe then. Expert knights of the jimmy have a way of pushing the key out from the outside and picking the lock. To frustrate their efforts in this direction a Washington man has designed a key fastener, which is as much protection as a big iron bar. This fastener is a thin but strong metal strip in two parts, the lower part shorter than the upper, and attached to the latter pivotally. The upper section, too, is made to fit over the handle of the door, so that when it hangs down the lower section passes through the ring of the key and not only prevents the latter from being pushed out from the outside, but from being turned except from the inside. From the room side of the door, however, the key will turn as easily as if there was no bar through it, the short section of the fastener moving readily with the movement of the key, and by turning the latter to one side the fastener may be easily withdrawn.

Fillets of Haddock.

Separate one or more fish into fillets. Remove the skin by passing the knife under the fillets so as to detach the tail end of the skin from the fish, then take a firm hold of the piece of detached skin and, inserting the knife with the edge of the blade turned toward you, draw the skin toward you and keep moving the blade firmly against the skin. Having removed the skin, trim the fillets neatly, cutting off all rough edges, and place them in a basin with two sliced onions, some sprigs of parsley, oil and lemon juice, seasoning with salt and pepper. About ten minutes before dinner drain the fish on a napkin, dip each fillet in a light batter and fry to a golden brown in deep fat. Drain on coarse paper to absorb the grease. Serve with any fish sauce.

Ivory Jelly.

Ivory jelly is a good summer dessert. To make it requires one ounce of gelatin, one-half cupful of cold water, one cupful of hot milk, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of double cream, one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and a pinch of salt. Soak the gelatin in cold water and dissolve in the hot milk, add the salt and sugar and strain. When cool add the cream and vanilla and stir occasionally until the mixture begins to thicken, then pour into a mold. Serve with a fruit puree, chocolate sirup or cream.

Dandelion Wine.

Four quarts of crowded blossoms and four quarts of boiling water. Let it stand for twenty-four hours. Strain and squeeze. Add four pounds of sugar, the juice of two lemons, two oranges and slice two bananas. Dissolve one yeast cake in lukewarm water. (Add one pound of raisins if you like.) Put into a stone jar, let stand three weeks, stirring occasionally, then strain and bottle.

Sweet Cucumber Pickles.

For 300 cucumbers use brine to hold up an egg, pour over cucumbers and leave three days, then out of that into hot water one day. Pack pickles in jars or bottles and put tablespoonful of mixed spices into each quart jar with piece of alum as large as a dime. Use a pint of sugar to each quart of strong vinegar, heat boiling hot and pour into jars of cucumbers, spices and alum and seal.

Preserved Crab Apples.

Look over the crab apples, cutting out blossom end and any imperfictions, but do not pare or stem. Wash and put into boiling sirup made of the proportion of twice as much sugar as water. Boil till tender from fifteen to twenty minutes and can boiling hot, sealing at once.

Blackberry Pudding.

One pint flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, pinch of salt; add enough milk to make a soft batter and then gently stir into it enough blackberries to suit the taste and put into a steamer and steam until done. Serve with a rich cream.

Homemade Breakfast Food.

Grind dry stale bread. Sift out the fine for breading chops, etc. Use only the coarse. Toast or brown in the oven. Serve with hot, not cold, cream or milk and sugar, and nutmeg or cinnamon if desired.

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

After a third effort he turned again toward Neil. A groan of horror rose to his imprisoned lips. His companion's face was full upon him, ghastly white; his eyes were wide and staring, like balls of shimmering glass in the starlight, and his throat was straining at the fatal rawhide! Nathaniel heard no sound, saw no stir of life in the inanimate figure.

A moaning, wordless cry broke through the cloth that gagged him.

At the sound of that cry, faint, terrifying, with all the horror that might fill a human soul in its articulate note, a shudder of life passed into Neil's body. Weakly he flung himself back, stood poised for an instant against the stake, then fell again upon the deadly throng. Twice—three times he made the effort, and failed. And to Nathaniel, staring wild-eyed and silent now, the spectacle was one that seemed to blast the very soul within him and send his blood in rushing torrents of fire to his sickened brain. Neil was dying! A fourth time he struggled back. A fifth—and he held his ground. Even in that passing instant something like a flash of his buoyant smile flickered in his face and there came to Nathaniel's ears like a throttled whisper—his name.

"Nat—".

And no more.

The head fell forward again. And Nathaniel, turning his face away, saw something come up out of the shimmering sea, like a shadow before his blistering eyes, and as his own limbs went out from under him and he felt the strangling death at his throat there came from that shadow a cry that seemed to snap his very heart-strings—a piercing cry and (even in his half consciousness he recognized it) a woman's cry! He flung himself back, and for a moment he saw Neil struggling, the last spark of life in him stirred by that same cry; and then across the white sand two figures flew madly toward them, and even as the hot film in his eyes grew thicker he knew that one of them was Marion and that the other was Winnsome Croche.

His heart seemed to stop beating. He strove to pull himself together, but his head fell forward. Faintly, as on a battlefield, voices came to him, and when with a superhuman effort he straightened himself for an instant he saw that Neil was no longer at the stake but was stretched on the sand, and of the two figures beside him one suddenly sprang to her feet and ran to him. And then Marion's terror-filled face was close to his own, and Marion's lips were moaning his name, and Marion's hands were tearing at the thongs that bound him. When with a great sigh of joy he crumpled down upon the earth he knew that he was slipping off into oblivion with Marion's arms about his neck, and with her lips pressing to his the sweet elixir of her love.

Darkness enshrouded him but a few moments, when a dash of cool water brought him back into light. He felt himself lowered upon the sand and after a breath or two he twisted himself on his elbow and saw that Neil's white face was held on Winnsome's breast and that Marion was running up from the shore with more water. For a space she knelt beside her brother, and then she hurried to him. Joy shone in her face. She fell upon her knees and drew his head in the hollow of her arm, crooning mad senseless words to him, and bathing his face with water, her eyes shining down upon him gloriously. Nathaniel reached up and touched her face, and she bowed her head until her hair smothered him in sweet gloom, and kissed him. He drew her lips to his own, and then she lowered him gently and stood up in the starlight, looking first at Neil and next down at him; and then she turned quickly back to the sea.

From down near the shore she called back some word, and with a shrill cry Winnsome followed her. Nathaniel struggled to his elbow, to his knees—staggered to his feet. He saw the boat drifting out into the night, and Winnsome standing alone at the water-edge, her sobbing cries of entreaty, of terror, following it unanswered. He tottered down toward her, gaining new strength at each step, but when he reached her the boat was no longer to be seen and Winnsome's face was whiter than the sands under her feet.

"She is gone—gone—" she moaned, stretching out her arms to him. "She is going—back to Strang!"

And then, from far out in the white glory of the night, there came back to him the voice of the girl he loved:

"Goodby—Goodby—"

CHAPTER XII.

Marion Freed From Bondage.

"Gone!" moaned Winnsome again. "She has gone—back—to—Strang!"

Neil was crawling to them like a wounded animal across the sand.

She started toward him but Nathaniel stopped her.

"She is the king's—wife—"

His throat was swollen so that he could hardly speak.

"No. They are to be married tonight. Oh, I thought she was going to stay!" She tore herself away from him to go to Neil, who had fallen upon his face exhausted, a dozen yards away.

In the wet sand, where the incoming waves lapped his hands and feet, Nathaniel sank down, his eyes staring out into the shimmering distance where Marion had gone. His brain was in a daze, and he wondered if he had been stricken by some strange madness—if this all was but some passing phantasm that would soon leave him again to his misery and his despair. But the dash of the cold water against him cleared away his doubt. Marion had come to him. She had saved him from death. And now she was gone.

And she was not the king's wife!

He staggered to his feet again and plunged into the lake until the water reached to his waist, calling her name, entreating her in weak, half choked cries to come back to him. The water soaked through to his hot, numb body, restoring his reason and strength, and he buried his face in it and drank like one who had been near to dying of thirst. Then he returned to Neil. Winnsome was holding his head in her arms.

He dropped upon his knees beside them and saw that life was returning full and strong in Neil's face.

"You will be able to walk in a few minutes," he said. "You and Winnsome must leave here. We are on the mainland and if you follow the shore northward you will come to the settlements. I am going back for Marion."

Neil made an effort to follow him as he rose to his feet.

"Nat—Nat—wait—"

Winnsome held him back, frightened, tightening her arms about him.

"You must go with Winnsome," urged Nathaniel, seizing the hand that Neil stretched up to him. "You must take her to the first settlement up the coast. I will come back to you with Marion."

He spoke confidently, as a man who sees his way open clearly before him, and yet as he turned, half running, to the low black shadow of the distant forest he knew that he was beginning a blind fight against fate. If he could find a hunter's cabin, a fisherman's shanty—a boat.

Barely had he disappeared when a voice called to him. It was Winnsome. The girl ran up to him holding something in her hand. It was a pistol. "You may need it!" she exclaimed. "We brought two!"

Nathaniel reached out hesitatingly, but not to take the weapon. Gently, as though his touch was about to fall upon some fragile flower, he drew the girl to him, took her beautiful face between his two strong hands and gazed steadily and silently for a moment into her eyes.

"God bless you, little Winnsome!" he whispered. "I hope that some day you will—forgive me."

The girl understood him.

"If I have anything to forgive—you are forgiven."

The pistol dropped upon the sand, her hands stole to his shoulders.

"I want you to take something to Marion for me," she whispered softly. "This!"

And she kissed him.

[illegible] on him like a

"You have given me a new life, you have given me—Neil! My prayers are with you."

And kissing him again, she slipped away from under his hands before he could speak.

And Nathaniel, following her with his eyes until he could no longer see her, picked up the pistol and set off again toward the forest, the touch of her lips and the prayers of this girl whose father he had slain filling him with something that was more than strength, more than hope. Life had been given to him again, strong, fighting life, and with it and Winnsome's words there returned his old confidence, his old daring. There was everything for him to win now. His doubts and his fears had been swept away. Marion was not dead, she was not the king's wife—and it was not of another that he had accepted proof of her love for him, for he had felt the pressure of her arms about his neck and the warmth of her lips upon his face. He had until night—and the dawn was just beginning to break. Ten or fifteen miles to the north there were settlements, and between there were scores of settlers' homes and fishermen's shanties. Surely within an hour or two he would find a boat.

He turned where the edge of the forest came down to meet the white water-run of the sea, and set off at a slow, steady trot into the north. If he could reach a boat soon he might overtake Marion in midlake. The thought thrilled him, and urged him to greater speed. As the stars faded away in the dawn he saw the dark barrier of the forest drifting away, and later, when the light broke more clearly, there stretched out ahead of him mile upon mile of desert dunes. As far as he could see there was no hope of life. He slowed his steps now, for he would need to preserve his strength. Yet he experienced no fear, no loss of confidence. Each moment added to his faith in himself. Before noon he would be on his way to the Mormon kingdom, by nightfall he would be upon its shores. After that—

He examined the pistol that Winnsome had given him. There were five shots in it and he smiled joyously as he saw that it had been loaded by an experienced hand. It would be easy enough for him to find Strang. He would not consider the woman—his wife. The king's wife! Like a flash there occurred to him the incident of the battlefield. Was it this woman—the woman who had begged him to spare the life of the prophet who had knelt beside him, and whispered in his ear, and kissed him? Had that been her reward for the sacrifice she believed he had made for her in the castle chamber? The thought of this woman, whose beauty and love breathed the sweet purity of a flower and whose faith in her king and master was still unbroken even in her hour of repudiation fell upon him heavily. For there was no choice, no shadow of alternative. There was but one way for him to break the bondage of the girl he loved.

For hours he trod steadily through the sand. The sun rose above him, hot and blistering, and the dunes still stretched out ahead of him, like winnows and hills and mountains of glittering glass. Gradually the desert became narrower. Far ahead he could see where the forest came down to the shore and his heart grew lighter. Half an hour later he entered the margin of trees. Almost immediately he found signs of life. A tree had been felled and cut into wood. A short distance beyond he came suddenly upon a narrow path, beaten hard by the passing of feet, and leading toward the lake. He had meant to rest under the shade of these trees, but now he forgot his fatigue. For a moment he hesitated. Far back in the forest he heard the barking of a dog—but he turned in the opposite direction. If there was a boat the path would take him to it. Through a break in the trees he caught the green sweep of marsh rice and his heart beat excitedly with hope. Where there was rice there were wild fowl, and surely where there were wild fowl there would be a punt or a canoe! In his eagerness he ran, and where the path ended, the flags and rice beaten into the mud and water, he stopped with an exultant cry. At his feet was a canoe. It was wet, as though just drawn out of the water, and a freshly used paddle was lying across the bow. Pausing but to take a quick and cautious glance about him he shoved the frail craft into the lake and with a few quiet strokes buried himself in the rice grass. When he emerged from it he was half a mile from the shore.

For a long time he sat motionless, looking out over the shimmering sea. Far to the south and west he could make out the dim outline of Beaver island, while over the trail he had come, mile upon mile, lay the glistening dunes. Somewhere between the white desert sand and that distant coast of the Mormon kingdom Marion was making her way back to bondage. Nathaniel had given up all hope of overtaking her now. Long before he could intercept her she would have reached the island. When he started again he paddled slowly, and laid out for himself the plan that he was to follow. There must be no mistake this time, no error in judgment, no rashness in his daring. He would lie in hiding until dusk, and then under cover of darkness he would hunt down Strang and kill him. After that he would fly to his canoe and escape. A little later, perhaps that very night if fate played the game well for him, he would return for Marion. And yet, as he went over and over his scheme, whipping himself into caution—into cool deliberation—there burned in his blood a fire that once or twice almost set him set his teeth hard, a fire that defied extinction, that smoldered only to await the breath that would fan it into a fierce blaze. It was the fire that had urged him into the rescue at the whipping post, that had sent him single handed to invade the king's castle, that had hurled him into the hopeless battle upon the shore. He swore at himself softly, laughingly, as he paddled steadily toward Beaver island.

The sun mounted straight and hot over his head; he paddled more slowly, and rested more frequently, as it descended into the west, but it still lacked two hours of sinking behind the island forest when the white water-rim of the shore came within his vision. He had meant to hold off the coast until the approach of evening, but changed his mind and landed, concealing his canoe in a spot which he marked well, for he knew it would soon be useful to him again. Deep shadows were already gathering in the forest and through these Nathaniel made his way slowly in the direction of St. James. Between him and the town lay Marion's home and the path that led to Obadiah's. Once more the spirit of impatience, of action, stirred within him. Would Marion go first to her home? Involuntarily he changed his course so that it would bring him to the clearing. He assured himself that it would do no harm, that he still would take no chances.

He came out in the strip of dense forest between the clearing and St. James, worming his way cautiously through the underbrush until he could look out into the opening. A single glance and he drew back in astonishment. He looked again, and his face turned suddenly white, and an almost inaudible cry fell from his lips. There was no longer a cabin in the clearing! Where it had been there was gathered a crowd of men and boys. Above their heads he saw a thin film of smoke and he knew what had happened. Marion's home had burned! But what was the crowd doing? It hung close in about the smoldering ruins as if every person in it were striving to reach a common center. Surely a mere fire would not gather and hold a throng like this.

Nathaniel rose to his feet and thrust his head and shoulders from his hiding-place. He heard a loud shout near him and drew back quickly as a boy rushed madly across the opening toward the crowd crying out at the top of his voice. He had come out of the path that led to St. James. No sooner had he reached the group about the burned cabin than there came a change that added to Nathaniel's bewilderment. He heard loud voices, the excited shouting of men and the shrill cries of boys, and the crowd suddenly began to move, thinning itself out until it was racing in a black stream toward the Mormon city. In his excitement Nathaniel hurried toward the path. From the concealment of a clump of bushes he watched the people as they rushed past him a dozen paces away. Behind all the others there came a figure that drew a sharp cry from him as he leaped from his hiding-place. It was Obadiah Price.

"Obadiah!" he called "Obadiah Price!"

The old man turned. His face was livid. He was chattering to himself, and he chattered still as he ran up to Nathaniel. He betrayed no surprise at seeing him, and yet there was the insane grip of steel in the two hands that clutched fiercely at Nathaniel's.

"You have come in time, Nat!" he panted joyfully. "You have come in time! Hurry—hurry—hurry—"

He ran back into the clearing, with Nathaniel close at his side, and pointed to the smoking ruins of the cabin among the lilacs.

"They were killed last night!" he cried shrilly. "Somebody murdered them—and burned them with the house! They are dead—dead!"

"Who?" shouted Nathaniel.

Obadiah had stopped and was rubbing and twisting his hands in his old, mad way.

"The old folks. Ho, ho, the old folks, of course! They are dead—dead—dead—"

He fairly shrieked the words. Then, for a moment, he stood tightly clutching his thin hands over his chest in a powerful effort to control himself.

"They are dead!" he repeated.

He spoke more calmly, and yet there was something so terrible in his eyes, something so harshly vibrant of elation in the quivering passion of his voice that Nathaniel felt himself filled with a strange horror. He caught him by the arm, shaking him as he would have shaken a child.

"Where is Marion?" he asked. "Tell me, Obadiah—where is Marion?"

The councilor seemed not to have heard him. A singular change came into his face and his eyes traveled beyond Nathaniel. Following his glance the young man saw that three men had appeared from the scorched shrubbery about the burned house and were hurrying toward them. Without shifting his eyes Obadiah spoke to him quickly.

"Those are king's sheriffs, Nat," he said. "They know me. In a moment they will recognize you. The United States warship Michigan has just arrived in the harbor to arrest Strang. If you can reach the cabin and hold it for an hour you will be saved. Quick—you must run—"

"Where is Marion?"

"At the cabin! She is at—"

Nathaniel waited to hear no more, but sped toward the breach in the forest that marked the beginning of the path to Obadiah's. The shouts of the king's men came to him unheeded. At the edge of the woods he glanced back and saw that they had overtaken the councilor. As he ran he drew his pistol and in his wild joy he flung back a shout of defiance to the men [illegible] pursuing him. Marion was at the cabin—and a government ship had come to put an end to the reign of the Mormon king! He shouted Marion's name as he came in sight of the cabin; he cried it aloud as he bounded up the low steps.

"Marion—Marion—"

In front of the door that led to the tiny chamber in which he had taken Obadiah's gold he saw a figure. For a moment he was blinded by his sudden dash from the light of day into the gloom of the cabin, and he saw only that a figure was standing there as still as death. His pistol dropped to the floor. He stretched out his arms, and his voice sobbed in its entreaty as he whispered the girl's name. In response to that whisper came a low, glad cry, and Marion lay trembling on his breast.

"I have come back for you!" he breathed.

He felt her heart beating against him. He pressed her closer, and her arms slipped about his neck.

"I have come back for you!"

He was almost crying, like a boy, in his happiness.

"I love you, I love you—"

He felt the warm touch of her lips.

"You will go with me?"

Pianos & Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually.

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

A Trying Climate.

Water freezes every night of the year at Alto Crucero, in Bolivia, while at noonday the sun is hot enough to blister the flesh.

Comets.

Peoples in all times have been afraid of comets, and the dread of their approach has driven strong men to death. Hannibal and Mithridates committed suicide, and King Louis, the debonair, of France and Louise, mother of Francis I., died in sheer terror of the flaming portent. The great Charles V. became a monk because of one.

Chinese Drinks.

The national drinks of China are samshu, a kind of arrack, and hocshu, which looks and tastes much like mum, a peculiar kind of beer made from wheat malt.

The Dictionary.

"Neither is a dictionary a bad book to read," says Emerson in his essay on books. "There is no cant in it, no excess of explanation, and it is full of suggestion, the raw material of possible poems and histories. Nothing is wanting but a little shuffling, sorting, ligature and cartilage."

Gutta Percha.

Gutta percha is a poor conductor of electricity, for which reason it is most successfully used for insulation of electric cables and other electric conducts. Friction causes negative electrification.

Birds of Paradise.

Probably no famous bird has a smaller habitat than the bird of paradise. No one knows why the varieties of this beautiful bird are confined to the island of New Guinea and the neighboring coasts of Australia. There are many other islands not far away where the conditions would seem to be equally favorable to their existence, but they are not found among them.

Sundials In China.

The Chinese have carried the art of sundials to perfection. One Chinese watchmaker has arranged his front porch in such a way the shadow of the posts tells the time by which to regulate the watches.

Sense of Smell.

There is no end to the curiosities of smell. It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de cologne be poured into the nostril the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

Convicts in Norway.

The convicts of Norway are made to till the soil.

An Ancient Clock.

There is at Castletown, in the Isle of Man, a clock that was telling Manxmen the time of day before Oliver Cromwell was born, and there is a clock, it is said, still marking time at Castle Rushen which Queen Elizabeth herself presented to the owner of that castle.

High Winds In Scotland.

It is a common occurrence for a train to be brought to a standstill on the Scotch highlands by the force of the wind.

Pickled Statues.

The marbles in Westminster palace are treated to a bath once a year. They are first sponged off with water and then "pickled." This pickle consists of a solution of soft soap and sulphur, which removes the incrustations due to the smoke laden atmosphere and is said to do the marble no harm.

Chinese Newspapers.

The Chinese newspaper is generally printed on a roll, so that the purchaser may tear off and throw away that part which he has perused.

An English Borough.

In the days of "rotten boroughs" in England that of Gatton Park is said to have been the worst. It had only one qualified voter, and yet it returned two members of parliament. Of course with this right the property was very valuable, and in 1830 it was purchased by Lord Monson for $500,000. Two years later it was disfranchised.

The Tail of a Wolf.

The wolf carries its tail hanging down because in that position it is less conspicuous and better eludes detection. A family of wolves playing together undisturbed occasionally carry their tails curled upward.

Analysis of a Tear.

The chief element in the composition of a tear is water, but with water are associated minute proportions of salt, soda, phosphate of lime, phosphate of soda and mucus, and when seen under the microscope a tear after evaporation looks like a very small fish bone, owing to the salines forming themselves into lengthened cross lines.

Elephants In Liberia.

The virgin forests of Liberia contain thousands of elephants.

To Get Rid of Rats.

After all other remedies fail there still remains a way of getting rid of rats, and that is by depriving them of water. They can live for a very long time without food and when hard pressed will not hesitate to eat each other, but no rat can go twenty-four hours without drink. Therefore if every possible means of obtaining water is taken from the rats they will desert the vicinity.

What He Said.

"What do you think of this place?" asked the girl's brother.

"It's fine. Every prospect pleases," the young man replied.

"I heard mother telling father this morning that you had asked Dorothy to be your wife."

"Did you? What did he say?"

"What he said would make you go ahead and finish the quotation you began a moment ago about every prospect pleasing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Little Curl.

There was a little girl,
And she had a little curl
Right in the middle of her forehead.
She wore it to a dance,
Where the blamed thing dropped by chance,
And the language that she thought was simply horrid.

—Punch.

Her Markswomanship.

The militia boys were going away to camp on the morrow, and as Lieutenant Wellington Grant Smith parted with his sweetheart on the piazza she said, "I shall stand here tomorrow as you march past and throw a kiss at you."

But her soldier lover said, "No, don't do that."

"Why not?" she asked.

"Because," laughed he, "ten to one you'd hit the captain."—Judge.

Tales of a Tail.

I've taken with a grain of salt
The wondrous things men do.
The speed they've made, the tales they've spun,
Have knocked me all askew.
But for the swiftest things afloat
That never seem to fail
Without exception are the yarns
About that comet's tail!

—Boston Herald.

Real Solicitude.

Husband—You are quite comfortable, dear?

Wife—Yes, love.

"The cushions are easy and soft?"

"Yes, darling."

"You don't feel any jolts?"

"No, sweetest."

"And there is no draft on my lamb, is there?"

"No, my ownest own."

"Then change seats with me."—Ideas.

Too Late.

The novelist laid out his course, on atmosphere intent,
Sought for the places reeking sin, the horrid, low and vile.
They had to let him gently know each wicked place he went
That others, seeking atmosphere, had beat him by a mile.

—Philadelphia Ledger.

No Cause For Delay.

"I sent for you, doctor, because you are famous as a specialist in cases similar to mine," said the sick man.

"Ah, I see," rejoined the noted M. D.

"But before we go any further," continued the patient, "I feel it my duty to inform you that $25 is all that I am able to pay you for your services."

"That being the case," said the great pill dispenser, "I'll have you on your feet by tomorrow."—Chicago News.

Not Reversible.

"A miss is as good as a mile,"
But I can assure you of this—
The rule worketh not t'other way.
So long as we've taste for a kiss
Nowhere lives a man who will say
A mile is as good as a miss.

—Woman's Home Companion.

What Traveler Saw Abroad.

"So you think the Bluffers are faking about their extended European tour?"

"I should say so. They said there were so many Americans in Venice that many had to walk in the middle of the street."

"Well?"

"Why, the streets of Venice are canals."—Springfield Union.

The Only Change.

My ladylove is perfect quite.
Her name is Brown, her hair the same.
Her disposition's sweet and bright.
There's naught I'd change—except her name.

The Place of Danger.

Employer—You have an excellent chance to grow up with the business, young man, and make something of yourself. It's all up to you.

Boy—I'd like de job all right, mister, but if you don't mind I'd just as lief stay at de bottom. You see, sir, I'm just a little leery about bein' one o' dem fellers "higher up."—Boston Herald.

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW.

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Plainfield Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that

Backache pains come from sick kidneys,

'Twould save much needless woe.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys,

Plainfield people endorse this:

Mrs. E. Dorflinger, 400 Clinton avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says:

"About three years ago I was suffering severely from kidney trouble. There were dull, heavy pains in my back and in the top of my head. I also had dizzy spells and I was subject to chills. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and I began their use. They promptly drove away my trouble and I have had no symptom of a return since."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Stone Roads
ELIZABETH, N. J.

Proposals are asked for the construction of a Macadam Road in Union County, New Jersey, known as Springfield Avenue and Shunpike Road, begining at Turkey Road and extending northerly to Westfield Avenue, all in the Township of Springfield.

The length of the work to be done is 1.131 miles.

The width of the macadam is to be made 16 feet. The widths between the gutters will be 33 feet.

Bids may be presented on the following different types of work.

1. Macadam, with asphaltum binder.
2. Macadam, with Amiesite surface coating.
3. Macadam, with Warrenite surface coating.
4. Macadam, with Filbertine surface coating.
5. Macadam, with Healley Good Roads Company's surface coating.
6. Macadam, with Tarvia surface coating.

Plans, profiles, specifications and cross-sections of the work may be examined at the office of Jacob L. Bauer, county engineer, 130 Broad Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Bidders must enclose with their bids a certified check for $1,000.00, made payable to the order of John N. Cady, Director of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, as a guarantee that should the work be awarded to such bidder, the said bidder will enter into an agreement within the stated time, with the Board of Chosen Freeholders, for the carrying out of this work.

Bids for the above described work will be received by the County Road Committee of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, at the Court House, Elizabeth, New Jersey, at 2:30 p. m., on Wednesday, August 10, 1910.

Each bid must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, with the name of the bidder written plainly upon the outside of the envelope. The certified check must also be enclosed with the bid.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids, as they may deem best for the interests of the County of Union.

Bidders must be prepared to satisfy the Committee that they have had experience in doing the class of work bid upon, and that they have the necessary plant and means to carry out the work, in case the same should be awarded to them.

A Nice (?) Distinction.

Her son had married a fair lady friend,
The sort young fellows don't write home about.
One soothed, "It may come right, dear, in the end."
She said, "The Lord's ways are past finding out."
The mother sighed: "But one thing cannot mend!
The woman's not respectable!" "No doubt,"
The comforter smiled back, "but, then, she's—well,
My dear, she's perfectly presentable."

Holding Her Own.

The patient, an elderly gentleman, became quite ill while the doctor was absent upon a holiday, the indisposition being the result of too frequent potations. A female nurse was at once engaged to care for him in his hotel.

A lady residing in the same hotel became aware of his illness and interested herself to the extent of one morning inquiring concerning his condition of the chambermaid.

"Shure, ma'am," replied Maggie, "an' I think he do be gettin' along very well. The nurse was sittin' on his lap this mornin'."—Western Druggist.

GUBERNATORIAL BOOMS

Katzenbach, Wittpen and Silzer Discussed at Democratic Outing.

THEY MAKE SOME STATEMENTS.

Little Talk of Woodrow Wilson at Annual Jollification of the Mercer County Democrats.

Woodrow Wilson's boom for the Democratic nomination for governor was conspicuous by its absence at the annual outing of the Mercer County Democrats which was held at Trenton yesterday afternoon and participated in by 1200 party men recruited from all sections of the county. The college president's name was not mentioned once during the public speechmaking and no one among the crowd, although there were many there from Princeton, espoused his ambition to sit in the gubernatorial chair. Even the letter of regret at his inability to attend the outing, which he sent in acknowledgement of an invitation to be on hand to meet the Democrats of his home county, was not read to the throng of voters who gathered at the Interstate Fair grounds to meet and listen to their Democratic aspirants. Charles H. Gallagher, Mercer county's representative on the Democratic state committee, who declared himself in favor of President Wilson for governor early this week, was unable to attend the outing on account of being called to Baltimore to visit a sick relative, announced before he left town in the morning that now that Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., had said that he would accept the nomination if it was tendered to him by the state convention, he was for the latter. Mr. Gallagher was the only Mercer county Democratic leader who had received the suggestion of nominating President Wilson in a favorable light.

While the Wilson boom was studiously ignored by the Democrats attending the outing, Mr. Katzenbach was hailed a number of times as the next governor of New Jersey, and his name was cheered to the echo every time it was mentioned during the afternoon. In a carefully prepared speech Mayor Walter Madden, of Trenton, proclaimed it to be a fact that Mr. Katzenbach was practically the unanimous choice of Mercer county Democrats for the gubernatorial nomination and declared that it would afford them "universal pleasure" to again support the latter for chief executive of New Jersey.

In marked contrast to the attitude of the crowd toward the Wilson boom was the treatment the assembled Democrats accorded to Senator George S. Silzer, of Middlesex county, and Mayor Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City, who as avowed candidates for the governorship were greeted enthusiastically when they were introduced during the speechmaking period. In this view it was apparent that President Wilson was not remotely regarded as even a second choice of the Mercer county Democrats.

In his speech Mr. Katzenbach again declared that he was not seeking the nomination for governor. Incidentally he made na indirect reference to Mr. Wilson but it aroused no interest among the crowd. He stated his position in the following language:

"I appreciate what my fellow citizens did for me three years ago. This year my friends have again kindly sought my nomination. I made a statement a few days ago that exactly interpreted my feelings. I would like to have you all read it. It is not my wish to receive the nomination. I will serve only if drafted. My earnest desire is that you would select some other candidate. I believe that I have done my whole duty to the Democratic party. I want you to take my utterances exactly as I have made them. There is no deceiving, no dissembling. If you are my friends you will respect my wishes, and I know that you are my friends. The Democratic party is rich in candidates. We have Mayor Otto Wittpenn, of Jersey City, and we have in our own county a candidate who desires the nomination and who occupies a high and prominent position, and one who would give this State an excellent administration."

Senator Silzer made his appearance as an avowed candidate for the nomination without any "ifs or ands." "If Mercer county does not furnish the candidate," said Mr. Silzer, "I may be pardoned for immodesty in making the statement that Middlesex county will feel proud to furnish to the State a successor to its present governor. No matter, however, what the result of the com-

WARNS AGAINST LOCUSTS

State Entomologist John B. Smith Tells of Pest Due in May 1911.

HOW TO PREVENT DAMAGE.

Cicada Will Probably Devastate Trees in Every County of the State—Will Disappear In June.

State Entomologist John B. Smith has issued a note of warning against the "Seventeen-Year Locusts" which are due to make their appearance next May and remain throughout June. The locust is particularly voracious in the eastern part of New Jersey, hence the following circular is of great interest to Union county.

The text of the warning follows:

"Brood II. of the periodical Cicada, or, as it is better known, the 'Seventeen-Year Locust,' appeared in New Jersey in 1894, and is due to appear again in 1911. According to the records gathered in 1894, the brood covers practically all of Bergen county, scattered areas in Passaic county, small areas near Huntsburg and Papakating in Sussex county, practically all of Morris, Union, Essex and Hudson counties, a few areas in Mercer county, irregular areas all over Middlesex county, scattering points in the eastern part of Monmouth county, small patches in Ocean and Burlington counties, Pensauken and vicinity in Camden county, scattering sections at the southwestern part of Gloucester and Salem counties, irregular areas throughout Atlantic and Cumberland counties, and all the wooded sections on the Cape May Peninsula. There is, therefore, no county entirely free from the insects; but they do not approach the Delaware River closely except in Camden county, and, in a general way, may be said to be most abundant in the eastern half of the State.

"The insects will appear during the last days of May, 1911, and will continue throughout June; disappearing by the end of the month. The injury is done by the females in laying eggs in twigs and small branches, making slits that do not heal. These result in the ultimate death beyond the point of injury of every punctured branch less than one-half an inch in diameter, and, where there are many punctures on the trunks of small trees or on branches up to three-quarter inch, these are apt to be seriously injured or killed.

"Farmers, fruit-growers and others who contemplate setting out trees or shrubs during the fall of 1910, or spring of 1911, in the infested areas, are warned of the danger of injury from these Cicadas. If trees or shrubs must be set, put out either very small trees and cut back severely, so as not to offer attractions to the insects, or set large trees with many branches and cut back no more than absolutely necessary until after July 1, so as to offer the insects a chance to oviposit in wood that can be spared. Burn all the cut infested wood.

"In established, young orchards or other plantations, do not prune more than necessary, so as to distribute any injury that may be caused. On large trees no appreciable injury will be noted, but there may be a serious cutting of the crops borne on small shoots and branches. There is no way of poisoning the insects, for they do practically no feeding, and it is not in the least dangerous to handle them. All insectivorous birds feed freely on these Cicadas, and so does the ordinary farm poultry of all kinds. Sparrows take a malicious delight in tearing them to pieces, and little damage need be expected where these birds occur in large numbers.

"The undersigned will be grateful for all information as to the places where the insects appear.

"JOHN B. SMITH,
"Entomologist."

At Fresh Air Home.

The service tonight at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home, under the auspices of the C. E. Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, promises to be a particularly interesting one. Henry J. Cochran will give a talk on China and Mr. McKay will lead the singing. All are cordially invited.

Musical For Youngsters.

A delightful musical entertainment was given at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home last night by several friends from Plainfield. It was a great treat to the children who enjoyed every minuite from beginning to end. At the close lolly-pops were served.

CRANFORD CLUB'S CIRCUS

Society Turns Out in Large Numbers to Witness Amateur Performances.

HELD BURLESQUE ON BIG FIGHT

Prominent Men and Women Work Hard For Club Building Fund —Big Sum Realized.

Screamland, the circus given by the Cranford Golf Club at the clubhouse and grounds last night, brought out one of the largest gatherings of society people that ever came together in the town. The house and surrounding grounds had been transformed into a veritable Coney Island in the midst of which the revelry and fun continued until a late hour of the night. Screamland and its attractions will long be remembered by those who attended.

Nothing funnier has been seen in Cranford or anywhere else, for that matter, than the parody on the Johnson-Jeffries fight. It was a four-round bout including the moving picture men, referee, etc. S. Wetherill represented Jack Johnson, while Edward Wild took the place of the stocky Jeffries. S. M. Yeaman refereed the bout in true sporting style and the screams of the spectators could be heard for a mile.

The museum of freaks disclosed Mr. Marshall disguised as the bearded lady, and Miss Frances Bourne as the midget. J. H. Vidal looked the part of the fat lady, while E. Stevens was the much tattooed man, and E. A. Cruikshank looked uncomfortable as the human pincushion. J. Frank was the Hercules of the show and Miss Laura Cochrane the snake charmer.

If Edward Babcock had ever struck his head on the bottom of the tin bathtub in which he did the diving stunts as Miss Annette Killaman, his obituary would have to be written instead of plain statement of facts like these. He amused the crowd immensely with his antics. Others who amused and entertained were Mrs. Charles Harris, as Mme. Lightfoot; Mrs. G. S. Veit, a pretty mechanical doll; the artful dodger, by F. C. Irwin; Miss Edith Hillier, as Rebekah at the Well. Miss Grace Birdseye had charge of the grab bag, ice cream cones and hot dogs were sold by Mrs. A. S. Wrenn and Miss Stratton, while the wheel of fortune was spun by Mrs. C. C. Ventries and Thomas Wrenn was the artist on the job.

Among the barkers for the side shows were Harvey N. Fisk, president of the club; E. G. B. Riley, J. H. Frazier, S. M. Yeaman, Charles Voorhees, C. C. Ventries and Robert C. Miller. Mrs. S. Witherill and Mrs. R. B. Wasson attired as Dutch girls were in charge of "Under Den Linden." One of the best patronized features of the show was the Royal Gypsy Queen, the only genuine fortune teller, impersonated by Mrs. Frank T. Sloan. A large sum was realized for the building fund of the club. Following is the committee who had the circus in charge: Mrs. Frank Sloan, chairman; Mrs. C. C. Ventries, Mrs. R. C. Vidal, Mrs. R. B. Wasson, Mrs. S. M. Yeaman, Mrs. S. Wetherill, Mrs. G. S. Veit, Mrs. Frank Harriott and Mrs. E. H. Millier.

DIDN'T GET ALL THE FISH BUT CAUGHT A GOOD MESS.

Ever since yesterday morning aspiring fishermen have been wondering whether there would be any of the finny tribe left after the visit of the big six to Princess Bay yesterday. They have even gone so far as to claim that the worms and other bait used on the trip scared the fish which were not caught away from their favorite haunts.

However this may be, there are those among the angling fraternity who declare that they will try their luck anyhow and will make their usual trips during the next few days and see whether there is any truth in the rumors.

Yesterday mornin- Clarence Thorne, Bert Harold, Jony Garthwaite, James Neal, Robert Meeker, Jr., and James Blair fled from the heat of the city and hired a motorboat at Princess Bay and angled for about five hours, returning last night with sixty-five beauties. They were all weakfish and many homes besides those of the fishermen enjoyed fresh fish for breakfast this morning.

In District Court.

In the district court this morning, George Merrill, of Grove street, was examined in supplementary proceedings in a suit brought by Reed & Codington on a note for $75. Judge Newcorn reserved decision.

WHEN A STRUCTURE IS NOT A BUILDING

Property owners in the vicinity of North and Park avenues are aroused over the presence of an unsightly lunch wagon that has been backed up on the vacant lot on the west side of Park avenue adjoining the railroad tracks, claiming that it is a disgrace to the neighborhood. They are free in their condemnation of the property owner who would allow such an objectionable thing to be placed on his land for the sake of a few dollars he may obtain as rent.

When Building Inspector T. O. Doane was asked this morning whether any permit had been granted for the lunch wagon, he stated that none was necessary. The inspector said that the corporation counsel had held that a structure on wheels was not subject to the building ordinance. This wagon has wheels on it but they are hidden by a frame work that extends to the ground. To all intents and purposes it is a permanent building. It has also been learned that permits have been obtained for sewage, water and gas connections. Consequently the neighbors are powerless, it seems, to have the lunch wagon removed.

Another such objectionable wagon is permitted to be placed on a public thoroughfare every night. It is on Second street, near Park avenue. Though it has no legal right to do so, the Common Council each year grants a license for such wagon to obstruct a public thoroughfare. A small fee paid to the city appears to be a temptation that the city fathers do not seem to be able to refuse.

TRINITY CONSISTORY ORDERS NEW ORGAN

After receiving the report and the estimates gathered by the special committee on new organ, the consistory of Trinity Reformed church last night, in special session, authorized the making of a contract with The Tallman Organ Company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., for the installation of a new and larger pipe organ in the church edifice. The agreement will be signed at once and The Tallman Company, which is one of the most prominent organ builders in the country, has promised the work completed by December 15. Its bid was the most advantageous submitted, in the opinion of the committee.

The new organ will contain 1,481 pipes, 275 more than in the instrument now in use. The organ front will be constructed of dark antique oak and decorated pipes. The organ will have two manuals and twenty-five stops. It is to have a modern console and an American Guild Organist's pedal key-board. The power will be a Ross water motor.

The Consistory also empowered the building committee to purchase a new choir railing and a new pulpit, to conform with the antique oak organ front.

LARGEST EXCURSION TO THE SHORE TODAY

The largest excursion of the season left this city this morning for Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. There were included in the excursion the Sunday schools of the First M. E., Grace M. E., Monroe Avenue M. E., Dunellen M. E., and Wilson Memorial churches. The train was made up of two sections of twelve cars each. Both sections were well filled when the trains pulled out. As usual, there was a delay in starting, the first section not leaving until 8:36, and the second section following five minutes later.

From all present indications, the excursionists will enjoy a most delightful day at the shore, although the wind here is blowing from the west. The bathing at Asbury Park has been delightful during this week and so the plainfielders will enjoy a cooling dip in the surf.

Coming home, the train will leave Asbury Park at 7:10 and should arrive here at 8:45.

Minstrel Show August 10.

On August 10 the new Honey Boy Minstrels will make their bow to a Plainfield audience in the Plainfield theatre. One of the features of this show is James J. Corbett, who will deliver a monologue on his observation of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno.

TO MARK SLAVE'S GRAVE

"Caesar, an African" Was a Teamster in the Continental Army.

BURIED AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Union County Board of Freeholders Will Place a Stone Over His Resting Place—Gen. Drake Found Grave.

General J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, who, last year by authorization of the Board of Freeholders, located the grave of every Civil War soldier and sailor in the various cemeteries of Union county, nearly 1,300 in number, has made a discovery in the Baptist church graveyard at Scotch Plains that not only surprised but interested him. General Drake, for some months past, has been engaged in the laborious task of locating the graves of soldiers of the American Revolution as well as those who served in the second war with Great Britain—1812-1815. He has already found the resting-places of more than 400 Continental soldiers, very few of which have been marked by the Sons of the Revolution and expects that the number will be considerably increased.

By authority of the freeholders, who imposed this task upon him, General Drake will make requisition upon the war department for a beautiful white marble stone, appropriately inscribed, for each grave.

While in the Scotch Plains cemetery, the general ran across a crumbling brown stone bearing this legend:

"Ceasar an African. Died 1866, age 104 years."

General Drake, with no thought that the negro, whose resting-place is so chronicled, could have been a soldier in the Continental army, merely copied the inscription in his note-book, on account of its singularity and the great age of the man. Strange to say, on looking over his revolutionary record and MSS. the general discovered that "Ceasar, an African", was a slave belonging to a prominent family in Westfield, and was a regularly mustered Continental soldier, who served during the war as a "Teamster" in Captain William Davison's Team Brigade, accompanying Maxwell's New Jersey Brigade in most of its campaigns.

General Drake has determined to erect a monument at the grave of "Ceasar", marking it with his army record, however humble it may be.

MONEY IN THE GROUND.

A few years ago William Jeffery, of this city, bought a tract at West Fourth street and Rock avenue, a few minutes' walk from the trolley and the Clinton avenue station, and the man who sold the land to him said it took him ten years to find Jeffery. Mr. Jeffery resold the property to Bolton Hall, of New York, and then organized the Investors' Realty Company, with Bolton Hall as one of its stockholders, who had associated with him several well known Plainfielders, among whom were J. Hervey Doane, the jeweler; Alonzo W. Weseman, of the Scott Press Works; W. R. Mosher, Dr. Adams, Robert E. Humpston and William N. Runyon. He sold several of the lots from this tract and sold the balance to the Berkeley Heights Association, and the Investors' Realty Company cleaned up in a short time one hundred and thirty per cent.

Fifteen houses have been erected on this tract in addition to a large number of houses which have been built in the immediate vicinity. Rock avenue has been macadamized up to Fourth street and will soon be macadamized from Fourth street to Seventh street. Seventh street has been macadamized from Plainfield to New Market.

The land is high, and contains sharp sand suitable for building purposes. The improvements have been very satisfactory. The Berkeley Heights Association has sold all of the tract with the exception of forty-one lots which Mr. Jeffery has been directed to sell to the highest bidder on Saturday, July 30th, at two p. m., at the corner of West Fourth street and Rock avenue. Payments of $10.00 down, and not less than $5.00 per month will give every working man a chance to buy one of these lots. He thinks they are worth about $250 each. The lots are 30x125 feet. •••

TURNED OFF THE WATER

That's the Penalty Paid by Those Who Disregarded Mayors' Proclamation.

USED HOSE AFTER THE HOURS.

Some of the Excuses Given Would Make the Sphinx Laugh—The Proclamation and What It Means.

Despite the proclamations of the mayors of the city and borough requesting that the residents of the community abstain from using sprinkler and hose for lawn and garden watering, many ungenerous—shall we say "undesirable"—citizens turned on the hose at the homes this morning. The action of the municipal executives was due to the alarming conditions occasioned by the continued drought. This condition has reduced the water pressure to such an extent that the fire protection was threatened—it was impossible to get any sort of stream for the fire department purposes.

According to the water company officials, there are some cold blooded people "in our midst." This morning, it was found necessary to cancel the permits of at least thirty property owners. The water at their homes was shut off, not because they were using the lawn sprinklers or hose regardless of the mayors' request, but because they were using them during the prohibited hours.

It does beat all what excuses a housewife can furnish when caught using the hose after hours. The fibs they tell would furnish enough humor for Puck and Judge for a month. Of course Willie Dowd, the genial clerk at the water company's office, believed everything they said by way of extenuation for their offense. Nevertheless, none of these culprits will get their lawn sprinkler permits back. Why should they?

The Daily Press, for the people's interest, gladly reproduces the mayors' proclamations—and this paper makes no charge for doing so:

PROCLAMATION.

The excesstive heat and drought now prevailing has taxed the capacity of the works of the Water Company to such a degree that it is impossible, for part of the day, to maintain pressure in the Company's mains sufficient for protection in case of fire.

This condition has prevailed for several days past to some extent, but has become so acute within forty-eight hours that urgent measures must be taken to relieve the situation.

During the past twenty-four hours more than seven million gallons of water have been pumped at Netherwood, which is more than two millions in excess of the quantity pumped in any day last year. A large part of this excess is used by lawn sprinklers and hose, and perhaps a considerable quantity of water is allowed to run to waste in fixtures in dwellings and other buildings.

The Fire Committee of the Common Council met representatives of the Water Company last evening and, after a full discussion of the situation, it was decided that action should be taken by the city authorities to prevent the unnecessary use of water during the pending drought.

The most important saving of water can be effected, with least inconvenience to the people, by the immediate cessation of the use of lawn sprinklers and hose, and their use should be discontinued at once.

The Fire Committee is assured that the Water Company will refund one-half of the amount paid by citizens for the use of hose and sprinklers during the current year, which is a fair pro rata of the charge for hose and lawn sprinklers.

It is urgently hoped that all citizens will respect this notice and warning, and direct all their employes so to do.

Mayor of Plainfield.
N. B. SMALLEY,
Mayor of North Plainfield.

NEW COMPANY TO BUILD

International Vending Machine Co. to Begin Operations in Short Time.

MACHINE HAS GOV'T. APPROVAL

$300,000 Corporation May Ultimately Rival the Great Cash Register Concern In Dayton, O.

At a meeting of the International Vending Machine Company held in the parlors of the Kensington Hotel last night it was decided to incorporate the company under the laws of this State, taking over the assets of the old company originally incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

The new company will issue $300,000 in stock of which $50,000 will be in 7 per cent. cumulative preferred shares and $250,000 common stock in shares of $100 each, full paid and non-assessable. The incorporation papers are being drawn up by Judge Isaac P. Runyon and will probably be filed with the Secretary of State within the next ten days.

The International Vending Machine Company will establish a factory in this city for the purpose of manufacturing their stamp, and other vending machines. The officers have not yet been chosen, but they will be elected at a meeting to take place probably within two weeks hence.

The machines which this company will make have been approved by the United States postoffice department and already orders have been received from various parts of the country for the product. The device will fill a want noticeably felt in every city and town in the country. The main object is to supply stamps at convenient points in all cities for which the people will pay a small amount for the convenience. The machine made by this company is the only machine of its kind and its special feature is a coin detector which prevents foreign or spurious coin from working the machine.

Provisions have been made in the estimate for the coming year by Postmaster General Hitchcock, for printing eighty-nine million stamps of the one and two cent denominations in strips for this machine, which shows that the seal of government approval has been put upon the enterprise. Judge Isaac P. Runyon will be the legal adviser of the new company.. Operations will be begun just as soon as a suitable site for the factory can be obtained. R. H. Pollock, of Baltimore, is the inventor of the new device and with Charles Matt has succeeded in forming a strong company in this city for the purpose of manufacturing the machines. It is firmly believed that the new concern will eventually rival the great National Cash Register Co., of Dayton, Ohio, which todays employs upward of 7,000 people.

Swackhamer's Speech.

Samuel S. Swackhamer, the champion of local option and who believes that this plank inserted in the Democratic platform in the coming convention will assure a Democratic victory next November, says that the speech delivered by him at the meeting held at Saengerbund Hall two weeks ago, has resulted in an awakening all over the State. He is daily in receipt of congratulatory letters and appeals for copies of the speech.

Arrested On Woman's Complaint.

Hervey Vroom, of this city, was arrested last night on complaint of Miss Mary Broskom, of the borough. Vroom was arrested on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Thomas H. Snape, before whom the hearing will take place. Vroom is being held in the borough jail. The date of the hearing has not been set.

Bicycle Smashed By Auto.

While riding a bicycle on Richmond street near Fifth last evening early, Tony Depenly, an Italian, living at 430 East Sixth street, was in collision with an automobile driven by D. Thompson, Jr., of Putnam avenue. The wheel was wrecked and Mr. Thompson settled with the Italian on a cash basis.

Furnished $10,000 Bail.

Ernest Wadley, of Bound Brook, whose automobile knocked down and killed Frank Potockny on Monday night, was arrested and immediately released on furnishing his own bond of $10,000 to await the action of the grand jury.

Dancing to Be Feature.

Dancing will be a feature of the euchre to be given tomorrow evening at the home of Mrs. John Walsh, Madison avenue, in aid of St. Mary's convent building fund.

Mrs. Frank Toman, of New York, is spending several days with friends in Bound Brook.

WESTFIELD.

Officials of the Plainfield-Union Water Company are using every endeavor to have the residents of the towns along the Central Railroad use lawn sprinklers as little as possible. The claim is made that through the careless use of sprinklers a large amount of water that is needed for domestic use is wasted and the pressure in the mains lowered. Unless more care is used in the use of sprinklers the use of lawn sprinklers will be suspended temporarily.

James O'Rourke, Kate Stedley and Daniel Hultz were sent to the county jail for ten days by E. R. Collins, acting as recorder, Tuesday. The complaint against the trio was that they were creating a disturbance on New street. In the evidence it was shown that O'Rourke tried to kill with an axe a horse belonging to J. N. Wilcox.

A meeting of Union County Board of Agriculture is to be called to get a definite report on the crop conditions of the county at the present time and to learn if possible the amount of damage suffered by the present drought, to be forwarded to Washington, to the Department of Agriculture.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

William Totten, of Watchung, N. J., was placed in the borough lockup yesterday afternoon by Marshal Benson. Totten was sought for by the police for stealing a bicycle, belonging to W. H. Cramer, of Dunellen, some time ago. Since the theft, Totten has kept out of the hands of the law but he was found among the employes of "101 Ranch" at Plainfield, Tuesday night. He was arrested on a warrant issued by Recorder Campbell and was brought to this borough yesterday.

THE OPENING GUNS OF THE CAMPAIGN

Opening guns in the Republican campaign for the coming primaries and convention will be fired on the night of August 9, at a big meeting to be held by the Downtown Republican Club, in German Parish Hall, Third street, Elizabeth. Booms, it is expected, will be launched for various offices, principally among them being that for Mayor. Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, who has announced his candidacy for the nomination for Congress from the Fifth district, to succeed Charles N. Fowler, will be the principal speaker of the evening, and the occasion has been announced as the one upon which Mr. Runyon will explain to the voters just where he stands.

In his opening address to the voters of the county, given at the recent outing of the Sixth Ward Republican Club, of Elizabeth, he stated that he would, within a few days, issue a statement telling just how he stood on the leading questions of the day. It is expected and has been announced that this statement will be made public by him from the platform at Parish Hall.

Republican clubs from all over the county will be represented at the gathering, and the occasion promises to be a big pow-wow.

The boom for Assembly candidates will probably be launched. Just what the powers that be have in mind regarding the candidate for Mayoralty is not known at present, but it is expected that this office will be one of the important ones under discussion at the meeting.

Among the men invited as speakers for the meeting are Robert B. Cissel and School Commissioner Walter B. Timms, of Elizabeth.

NEWARK PASTOR'S WIFE VICTIM OF SNAKE BITE.

Suffering from the bite of a copperhead snake, Mrs. T. Percival Bate, wife of the rector of St. James' Episcopal church, Newark, is in a serious condition at the Idylease Inn, Newfoundland. It was said yesterday that the sufferer had passed a fairly comfortable night, but was not yet out of all danger.

Mrs. Bate almost stepped on a big copperhead as she was walking through the woods on the way to her husband's camp at Green Pond on Sunday evening. The reptile lay coiled at the edge of a pathway through the woods, and, as Mrs. Bate passed, sank its fangs into her ankle. Several friends with whom Mrs. Bate was returning from a neighboring camp were a few yards ahead of her, and when she screamed hurried back to her assistance.

Although thoroughly frightened, Mrs. Bate did not become hysterical. She hurried as rapidly as possible with her friends to the camp, and there antiseptics were applied to the wound. It is to the skilful manner in which these were used that Mrs. Bate probably owes her life.

Dr. D. E. Drake, who was stopping at the inn, was summoned, and Mrs. Bate was placed in an automobile and hurried to meet him on his way to the camp. The poison from the bite was already producing its effects, and after Dr. Drake had given such temporary treatment as was possible, Mrs. Bate was taken to the inn. A change for the better has taken place during the last twenty-four hours.

Early in the year the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Bate were stricken with scarlet fever almost simultaneously and were very ill for a long time.

CONCERN CONVICTED OF EMPLOYING MINORS.

In the District Court in Somerville Tuesday, before Judge Isaac P. Runyon, the Somerset Manufacturing Company was found guilty, as charged by the state department of labor, of employing three girls who were not of the legal age required by law.

The defense produced affidavits made by the parents of the girls showing that they were within the legal age, but the state produced baptismal records showing that the affidavits were untrue, and the mothers admitted this on the stand. Judge Runyon directed the jury to bring in a verdict for the state, and they did so without leaving their seats.

The penalty for violation of the law is $50 fine in each case.

Mrs. Wootton and Miss Margaret Wootton, of Carleton avenue, are guests at The Bluffs, Gay Head.

Miss Laura Stillman, of West Fourth street, has returned home after spending a pleasant vacation with friends at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Mattis and their daughter, Marguerite, of West Fourth street, are enjoying their annual outing at Asbury Park.

Among the late arrivals registered at the Clifton House, Patchogue, L. I., are L. C. Whitell, of this city, and A. V. Russell, of Westfield.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Atlantic City Elks have asked for a city appropriation toward the expenses of next year's great reunion.

William Vanaman, a Millville mason, was overcome by the heat Tuesday and is in a serious condition.

Arthur Webb, the seventeen-year-old boy who was drowned in the lake at Brown's Mills Sunday, was buried from his home yesterday.

William Baker, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Baker, of Winslow, was picking cherries Monday evning when he fell off a fence into an unused well and was drowned.

Burned across the back by scalding chemicals at the American Nickel Works, in Camden, Tuesday, Andrew Briddle, twenty-two years old, of 316 Chester street, was taken to Cooper Hospital.

Kicked by a cow he was milking on the farm of Clarence Hendrickson, at Swedesboro, Edison Wesly, fourteen years old, was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden, Tuesday, suffering from a fracture of the right leg.

Buried in a sand pit at Chesilhurst, where he was employed as a laborer, Tuesday, George Williams, thirty-eight years old, colored, was smothered to death. The body was dug out by about thirty men, and Coroner Cook, of Laurel Springs, gave a certificate of accidental death.

Frank Fredericks, of Engine Company No. 50, Philadelphia Fire Department, gave Ocean City's life guards, Sweeney and Rinehart, a scare Tuesday afternoon. They saw what they thought was a corpse floating in the ocean and went after it. Fredericks was taking a five-mile swim.

In a hurry to catch a trolley car at Delair Tuesday afternoon, William H. Amos, fifty-two years old, of 2710 Wayne avenue, Camden, stumbled and sustained a fracture of both knee caps. The injured man was only able to walk backwards, and was assisted to the Homeopathic Hospital, Camden.

William Pangburn, who was placed under $500 bonds on the charge of wife desertion at Millville, has been arrested again on a warrant sworn out by his bondsman, the young man having failed to pay his wife the stipulated weekly sum. He will now be tried under the act which makes wife desertion a misdemeanor with a penalty of two years in State prison.

J. Burwood Daly, a Philadelphia lawyer, was knocked unconscious while umpiring the ball game at Ocean City Tuesday afternoon and will be confined to his bed a few days. A wild pitch struck the home plate and the ball flew under Daly's breast pad. He fell unconscious, but was revived by Dr. Durt and started the game again. In a few minutes he had to be carried from the field.

REFORM SCHOOL FOR ONE; SLASHER'S TRIAL BEGUN.

At the last session yesterday of the Union County Court of Special Sessions that will be held until September Judge Atwater sentenced to the State Reform School Alonzo Williams, a youth of Westfield, who pleaded guilty to larceny.

James M. Lease, of Virginia, a young man indicted for atrocious assault, was then placed on trial without a jury. The Judge assigned Charles Wagner to defend him. The prisoner last January slashed across the forehead and side of the neck with a razor Frederick Ross, a negro of Elizabeth.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these; not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

COURT MARTIAL FOR FIVE ORANGE SOLDIERS.

That intoxication and disorderly conduct will not be tolerated by Colonel E. W. Hine, of the Fifth Regiment, is evident from the prompt manner in which he took up the charges made by John N. Lindsley, of the Orange Police Board. As soon as the letter Mr. Lindsley sent to the Governor was brought to his attention, Colonel Hine directed the two captains, W. A. Lord, of Company H, and Norton C. Horton, of Company I, to prefer charges at once against the three accused men in each company. The papers have been filed and the men summoned to appear before a summary court at the expiration of the five days following the notice. The names of the men have been withheld by the military authorities out of sympathy for their families.

When Colonel Hine was interviewed by the Press correspondent, he said that he had no personal knowledge of the matter, which had occurred at Orange before the two companies joined the regiment at Newark. Continuing he said:

"When the letter of Mr. Lindsley was brought to my attention, I at once directed that there should be a full investigation of the allegations and steps taken for the punishment of the offenders. The regiment cannot afford to tolerate anything that savors of disorderly conduct or rowdyism of any sort."

THE FORUM.

Extradition.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Is there an extradition agreement between the United States and Canada? If so, who can lawfully serve the papers and greatly oblige the public?

HENRY WALTERS.

By a treaty entered into between the United States and Great Britain on August 9, 1842, it was agreed that the United States and her Britannic Majesty, shall upon mutual requisitions by them, or their officers or authorities respectively deliver up to justice all persons who being charged with murder, piracy, arson, etc., shall be found within the territory of the other.

The practice between the two countries where a request for extradition from the Dominion of Canada is made is for the Secretary of State to ask the same of the British Ambassador at Washington.

The act of March 3, 1869, authorizes the President to appoint an agent to receive from a foreign government and convey to this country for trial a fugitive whose extradition has been requested, and clothes such agent with the powers of a Marshal of the United States, in the districts through which it may be necessary for him to pass, so far as such power is requisite for the safe-keeping of the prisoner.—Editor.

THE BUZZARD.

Watch out for that dark horse in the mayoralty contest.

Effie Bygatts says that either Runyon or Fowler will be nominated for Congress if some other man doesn't win out. Great!

The city judgeship bookies tipped The Buzzard off with this dope today: 6 to 5 and out on Blatz; 8 to 5 and 3 to 5 on DeMeza; 4 and 8 to 5 on Crane; 6 and 2 on Nash.

Monty is counting his many blessings this fall. The axe can't strike him as he has still another year to serve. But then—

Aleck says: "I don't know anything new; I haven't seen the mayor this morning."

Walt Hetfield is Thursdaying it at Ocean Grove. What punishment!

ASBESTOS SAD IRONS

AN IRON FOR EVERY PURPOSE.

The Cause of the Commotion

East Front Street in front of our store was litterly jammed with people on Saturday night, the crowd numbering at least a thousand. The cause of the commotion was the demonstration in our window of

"Asbestos Sad Irons"

By Miss A. S. Bestos, who notwithstanding the extreme heat, smilingly ironed away and showed the crowd the many advantages these famous irons posseses over the ordinary kind. It's a pleasure to iron with them particularly in Summer, the absence of heat in the handle makes them the most comfortable and sanitary irons a woman can use, for all of the heat is confined to the face of the iron and kept away from the hand of the ironer, and as the demonstrator says, "You always have a hot iron and a cold handle."

Briefly speaking the principal features of "Asbestos Sad Irons" are the heat-retaining hood, Asbestos lining, cool handle, highly polished ironing surface, nicely rounded edges, economy in heating. An iron for every purpose. Here's what they sell for:

SOME READY-MADES.

The season of the ready-to-wear is at hand, and those who walk along the line of least resistance buy whatever is thrust before them, to the relief of the overburdened dressmaker, but to the final dissatisfaction of the so-easily satisfied.

Now, there are ready-mades and ready-mades, and the discriminating eye alone can detect the difference every time it lights on either one.

The good shopper is born, not educated. The woman who has all her life made mistaken purchases will, no doubt, continue to spend the family money (or her own) and regret it later. She rarely profits by experience.

The observant one will cast an eye in all directions, but will turn eventually to her mental directory for the address of the successful silk buyer or the best man in cotton frocks. Year after year the established reputation follows the astute shopkeeper who keeps his goods up to the mark.

Do you, as a buyer, as a spender, of your husband's hard-earned money—do you know where you can best buy the simple frock—the best value for the least money? No? Then it's a poor shopper you are, and one not to be trusted with the savings of the household.

Let the fashion expert help you out. Good value in a cheap silk frock rests in the softness of the silk. The "crispy" ones won't wear. Good lines lie within the bounds of common sense in an inexpensive frock. The cheap imitation of an elaborate creation is never good value. The trimmingless condition proclaims the quality of the silk. When overornate, there usually are defects, or one main defect of quality, to conceal.

The semi-plain dress may be retrimmed, and than this advantage there is no greater. A little new trimming or a personal touch signifying your own taste differentiates the dress from the other ninety and nine of the hundred lot from which you selected. Look at quality, at the fit and next at the ease with which the present decorations can be removed (or recovered), and then buy. But not before.

TWO SIDES TO THE PRESENT HIGH COST OF LIVING.

"How do you account for the high cost of living?"

The rubicund gentleman addressed glanced at a check for $8.35, representing the cost of his modest meal, handed the waiter $10, with instructions to keep the change; pulled out a cigar that the interviewer recognized as a 50-center, and leaned back in his chair.

"All rubbish," he said. "People live beyond their means and then growl about it. It's their own fault."

"I see. You believe that everybody should save part of his income?"

"Exactly."

"Umph-umph. Sounds reasonable. But what proportion of it do you think he should salt down? Suppose, for instance, the man earns $1.10 a day, and has a wife and five children, and some of the babies get sick occasionally, and the older ones need clothes to go to school, and the landlord wants his rent right on the nail, and a pair of kid's shoes lasts a month, and the installment on the sewing machine is 50 cents every two weeks, and he carries enough insurance to bury him, and cough medicine for his wife is half a dollar a throw, and everything that the members of his household eat and drink and wear costs more than it used to, and get higher all the time, do you think he ought to save a very large proportion of his income?"

"You do not state the case fairly. Doubtless the man has vices. I am certain he smokes."

"I forgot that. Yes, he pays 5 cents a package for tobacco and a package lasts ten days."

"Ha! Shiftless fellow. And, of course, he has the nerve to complain. He'll cut out luxuries before he gets any sympathy from me."—Philadelphia Ledger.

MUST BE BORN AGAIN IF HE WANTS NEW TEETH.

"Ouch!" said the man in the dentist's chair.

"Does it hurt?" asked the dentist, removing the buzzer.

"No, but I thought you must be getting pretty close to the nerve."

"No, that's a common error," said the dentist. "A tooth hurts worst near the surface. The thing in the centre, which you call the nerve, is really not a nerve at all, but an organ."

"What's it for?"

"It builds up the tooth. After the tooth is full grown it really hasn't much of any function. The nerves that hurt are all through the tooth, especially near the surface. They are extremely minute."

"Can you do something so my teeth won't be so yellow?" asked the patient, changing the subject.

"You must be born again," said the dentist. "Your teeth are yellow because you are an Anglo-Saxon and because of your complexion. Do you realize that if you had pure white teeth they wouldn't match your complexion, and would spoil your looks? A blond mustn't spend time wishing for a brunette's white negro's."—Exchange.

She was "Hip" to Him.

"He who gets married," sadly said H. B. Warner, "alias Jimmy Valentine" on the stage, "gets caught. Look at my best friend who has only been married a month. A chandelier fell in the night at his house and in the morning at breakfast he said to his wife, with a laugh:

"'What did you think, my love, when you heard the chandelier fall in the dead silence of the night?'

"'I thought, darling,' his wife answered, 'that you had been detained on business again and were getting upstairs as quietly as you could.'"—Young's Magazine.

"So you're from Kentucky, are you? That's where nearly every family has an inherited feud, isn't it?"

"Yes. Also where a splendid new State Capitol has been built without exceeding the appropriation or developing a scandal of any kind. What state are you from?"

"Never mind, old man. I'm sorry I threw out that insult about the feuds."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GUBERNATORIAL BOOM

ing conversation the Democrats of Mercer can rely upon this fact, that Middlesex county will be loyal to the nominee, and they believe that if the nomination should come from Middlesex county that Mercer will likewise show it loyalty. On our part this is not a mere promise, for Middlesex, which went 1744 Republican in 1906, was carried for Mr. Katzenbach. Last year Middlesex went 1879 Democratic and we believe that this will this year be duplicated for the Democratic nominee."

Mayor Wittpenn arrived at the outing late in the afternoon after many of the guests had departed for home. He made a brief speech from an automobile. He said that he expected to come to the Sate convention with a solid Hudson county delegation behind himself for the governorship. Later on Mayor Wittpenn had a conference with a number of Mercer county Democratic leaders in the Trenton House and was assured that there was not the slightest possibility of President Wilson capturing any delegates from Mercer county to the State convention.

S. Frederick Smith's Plans.

Bound Brook Plant Leased.

The big $300,000 plant of the Franco-American Gelatine Company at Bound Brook was leased yesterday. The tract on which it is located consists of 50 acres and has the trolley line running through it. The party that has taken the lease has an option on the property and may buy it later. This leasing of the big plant may be the forerunner of a big boom for Bound Brook.

Funeral of Mrs. Godwin.

LONDON BANK CLERKS.

Their Dress and Mode of Living a Century Ago.

A hundred years ago the number of bank clerks in London must have been inconsiderable. The old banks needed only small staffs. Quite late in the eighteenth century one of the biggest conducted its business with two clerks. The engagement of a third created great excitement. His arrival was still more exciting, for we are assured that "he wore a long flapped coat with large pockets; the sleeves had broad cuffs, with three large buttons, somewhat like the coats worn by Greenwich pensioners; an embroidered waistcoat reaching nearly down to his knees, with an enormous bouquet in the buttonhole; a cocked hat, powdered hair, with pigtail and bagwig, and gold headed cane." This, no doubt, was something of a peacock, even for his time. A few years later, in the early part of the nineteenth century, the correct official garb was knee breeches, silk stockings, shoes with silver buckles and often a white tie. One can scarcely imagine a dress more suggestive of sober opulence.

But it does not seem that, according to our ideas, the manner of life was quite in harmony with this impressive appearance. Not for the bank clerk of the early eighteen hundreds the immaculately clean and elaborately fitted restaurants of the modern city! Not for him tea shops with varieties of harmless drinks and tempting light food! If he wanted a meal he went to the butcher and bought himself a chop or steak for fivepence halfpenny or sixpence. This he carried himself to an adjacent public house, where they cooked it for a penny. The public house, in fact, played no small part in his life.

Is it not a tradition that the clearing house has grown from the meetings of clerks in a tavern, where they met for the purpose of settling up accounts among themselves?—London Telegraph.

RARE WILD BEASTS.

The Kadiak Bear and the Tufted Ear Rhinoceros.

There are a number of beasts specimens of which are ardently desired not only by the zoological gardens of the world, but by the professional menageries as well. Among these may be mentioned the Kadiak bear, an extremely rare animal and one calculated to make a Rocky mountain grizzly appear insignificant.

South America contains a prize in the form of a species of jaguar never held in captivity. This jaguar is of tremendous size and coal black.

There are two rare birds in the Amazon forests whereof no specimens have ever been brought away—the "bell bird" and the "lost soul." These names are derived from the effects produced by the cries of the birds, the former having a voice likened to that of a silver bell and the latter possessing the eerie accompaniment of crooning in such a manner as to produce gooseflesh on the unfortunate person who hears its song.

The naturalists will also vote an expression of heartfelt thanks to the individual who will fetch them from far-off Burma a specimen of a rhinoceros having a black hide and big, tufted ears. No one has ever actually seen this rhinoceros; but, it is averred, white men have frequently seen his hide.

New Zealand is a land of animal mysteries. The most popular of the rare beasts whereof specimens are longed for by the civilized world is a kind of duck billed beast. No one seems certain what it should be called. Darwin, it is added, was always of the opinion that some day a true lizard-bird—i. e., not a flying lizard, but a true missing link between the birds and the reptiles—might be found in New Zealand.—Harper's Weekly.

The Catalpa Tree.

The catalpa tree is the slouch of the forest. It has a brief season of beauty, but this outburst of charm is so exceedingly ephemeral when compared with the long weeks and months when it seems to be fairly reveling in litter that the wonder is its presence is tolerated to the extent it has been in years gone by. We believe it was Lord Byron who once indulged in a few rhapsodical utterances over the catalpa blossoms, but it is safe to say he never had to clean up a yard which was marred by the presence of one or more of the trees or the sentiments expressed would have been in other than [illegible] vein.—Des Moines [illegible].

European Tattooers.

Tattooing is not by any means confined to savage peoples. There are races in Europe which make it a regular practice, and men, women and children bear on their bodies ornamentations that are as ornate and queer, although not as extensive, as are markings on the bodies of the south sea savages. These European tattooers are among the Albanians and Bosnians, who live in the famous Balkan peninsula.

Pride All Around.

"I'm proud to say," boasted the man with the large stomach and the immense solitaire, "that I ain't never wasted any time readin' poetry."

"Well," ventured the gentleman with the seedy clothes and the high brow, "if the poets were asked they would probably agree that they were proud of it too."—Chicago Record-Herald.

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.

Adjourned meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders was held on Friday, July 15, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed the following members present: Director Cady, Freeholders Adams, Crane, Darby, Doane, Garrison, Gruener, Jensen, Jones, Krouse, Meisel, Perry, Randolph and Thompson—14. Absent—Freeholders Haviland, Martin, Swain and Wilbur—4.

On motion of Freeholder Smith the reading of the minutes of the meeting of July 7 was disposed with.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

Report on Committee on Normandie Place Bridge.

Gentlemen — Your committee would report that they have examined the ground and find that the present bridge is too high for use, owing to the regrading of the street, and is too small and inadequate.

Your committee would therefore recommend the construction of a new bridge, near the intersection of Normandie place and Riverside drive, discharging into the Rahway River, the length to be about ninety-five feet and the size to be thirty inches by eighteen inches. The cost to be not more than $425.

E. K. ADAMS,
JOSEPH PERRY,
CHARLES J. JENSEN,
Committee.

Freeholder Darby moved the report be received and the recommendation adopted, which on roll call was so ordered.

NEW BUSINESS.

By the Committee on County Roads.

Resolved, That the plans, profiles, cross-sections, and specifications, this day submitted to this board, for the building and constructing of the following roads, namely:

Springfield avenue and Shunpike road, from Turkey road to Westfield avenue, in the Township of Springfield.

Be and the same are hereby approved; and be it further

Resolved, That said plans, profiles, cross-sections and specifications be submitted to the State Commissioner of Public Roads for his approval or rejection, and be it further

Resolved, That upon the receipt of the approval of the State Commissioner of Public Roads, the County Road Committee be and are hereby empowered to proceed with the advertising and receipt for bids for such work, and report to this board at a future meeting thereof.

HENRY KROUSE,
PETER MEISEL,
C. A. SMITH,

Freeholder Adams moved the adoption of the resolution which on roll call was so ordered by an unanimous vote.

By the Committee on County Roads.

Whereas, on the twenty-fifth day of June, nineteen hundred and nine, this board entered into a contract with E. C. Humphreys and Milton M. Bamberger, partners as E. C. Humphreys & Company, for the building and construction of a macadamized road known as Edgar road, and whereas said contract also provided for a possible change of grade, thereby diminishing or increasing the amount of excavation and work necessary on that portion of the road where the Baltimore and New York Railway crosses said Edgar road, and extending about eight hundred feet on the one side of said railway and five hundred feet on the other, totaling thirteen hundred feet, and whereas, since the execution of said contract this board, at its regular meeting held on the seventh day of July, adopted a resolution providing for the completion of said road at said point at grade, and whereas said resolution has been duly approved by the State Commissioner of Public Roads, and where this board on or about June 25, 1910, also entered into a contract with Clarence H. Winans, for the building and construction of a portion of said Edgar Road, and whereas by reason of the determination of this board to construct the same at grade will necessarily change the amount and character of work to be done under said contract at said point; therefore be it Resolved, That this board enter into a supplemental contract with the said E. C. Humpherys & Company and with the said Clarence H. Winans, respecting the completion of said work upon terms to be agreed upon; said supplemental contract to in no way nullify or change the original contracts herein referred to, except as herein provided.

HENRY KROUSE,
PETER MEISEL,
C. A. SMITH,
Committee.

Freeholder Gruener moved the adoption of the foregoing preamble and resolution, which on roll call was so ordered by an unanimous vote.

By the Committee on County Roads:

Whereas, heretofore, on May 23, 1910, this board entered into a contract with the Weldon Contracting Company for the building and constructing of the road under the State Aid Road Act, said road known as Springfield avenue and Turkey road; and

Whereas since the making of said contract, it has been determined, and is deemed advisable to eliminate from said contract the work required to be done for that portion of the road known as Turkey road, extending from Springfield avenue to Westfield avenue in the Township of Springfield; and

Whereas, The Weldon Contracting Company being willing to permit the same to be eliminated from said contract, and are willing that the cost of the work which would accrue in the building of the same, be deducted from the amount of said contract hereinbefore referred to; therefore be it

Resolved, That that portion of the road known as Turkey road, from Springfield avenue to Westfield avenue, in the Township of Springfield, be eliminated from the contract made by this board with The Weldon Contractin" Company, bearing date May 22, 1910. And be it further

Resolved, That a supplemental contract be made by this board with The Weldon Contracting Company, agreeing to said elimination, and confirming the original contract in all other respects.

Dater July 15, 1910.

HENRY KROUSE,
PETER MEISEL,
C. A. SMITH.

Freeholder Smith moved the adoption of the foregoing preamble and resolution, which on roll call was so ordered by an unanimous vote.

Freeholder Krouse moved to adjourn, which was carried. The Director declared the board adjourned until Thursday, August 4, at 2:30 p. m.

BENJAMIN KING, Clerk.

Goods Not Cheaper Abroad.

Women who feel to regret that their means will not permit them to join the army of travelers now on the Atlantic highway and heading for Paris and London where they expect to replenish their wardrobes, may be comforted in the fact, well known to those who cross often, that the most fascinating shops in the world are to be found right here at home, and the things for sale in them are not only just as handsome and as stylish as those found in shops abroad, but they are to be bought for less money. With every year of American invasion into foreign countries the prices have soared a trifle higher, until now, unless one crosses out of season during the winter, between October and May, when goods fall to rational prices again, it does not pay to shop at all except for the few articles which cannot be found at home. —Leslie's.

STOPPED THE DUEL.

But Not Until Maynard Was Nearly Dead From Terror.

Regnier, the French satirist of the reign of Louis XIII., forced a quarrel upon the poet Maynard, who was almost Quakerish in his love of peace. Maynard could not well avoid the appearance of taking up the quarrel, but immediately after the preliminaries sought out his patron, Comte de Clermont-Lodeve, and begged him to "surprise" the party at the dueling ground and break up the affair. The count promised, and Maynard went away with a lighter heart. But his patron, wanting some amusement, hastened to the field and concealed himself in the shrubbery before the party arrived. Maynard went through the first stages of preparation very well, but grew more and more nervous as time passed and the count did not appear. Then he began to play for delay. First he was sure that his sword was shorter than his adversary's, necessitating a slow and technical measurement. Next his boots hurt him, and he had a long, hard struggle to get them off his feet. At last, after the cold perspiration had begun to drip from his brow and he was more dead than alive, his protector emerged suddenly from the bushes and interfered. A peace was soon patched up. Maynard declaring that if he had said anything disagreeable about Regnier he had not intended to do so and Regnier accepting this as balm for his wounded feelings. As Maynard threw down his sword at the close of the parley and reached for his hat he was heard to murmur, "Another time I shall trust to my own wits to pull me out of a scrape, for if I had depended on the count I might have been made into mincemeat a half hour ago!"—New York Post.

COUNTING A SCORE.

It Represents the Whole Man, Ten Fingers and Ten Toes.

Twenty is called a score because it represents the whole man, ten fingers and ten toes. Etymologically it means a cut or mark. In very early times, when men could not count beyond twenty, or "one man," it was usual to cut a notch in a stick and begin again, and so it went on, one man, two men, and so on. This is why sheep are still counted by the score. Now, a tally (French taille, cut or nicked) means an account kept by means of a notched stick, and until the end of the eighteenth century such sticks were given as exchequer receipts, accompanied by a written document. This was also the usual way of keeping accounts in the inns of the middle ages. The number of drinks or meals a customer had were scored against him on what was called a tally stick, and when it reached twenty, or a "whole man," he was expected to pay. In some English country inns scores are still kept on a slate, four chalk marks and one across—five—and four of these make twenty, or a score.—Westminster Gazette.

Escapes In War.

Until war ceases, which will be the greatest miracle of all, it will always be the exhibition ground of miracles. How can a bullet puncture a man's coat behind and before or pierce his boot and sock and be gravely shaken out of both without wounding him? And what mysterious channel does this human body contain which leads a bullet dexterously around the heart, a hair's breadth from the seat of life, yet never rending it—a phenomenon vouched for by more than one army surgeon? Shells have burst thunderously between the very legs of soldiers and left them still soldiers. Pompom shells of two inches diameter have passed through legs and arms without shattering the bone or bursting at the impact, though there appears to be literally no room for such a merciful performance. In fact, a history of the escapes in war would be wild reading even after a course of Munchausen.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Dr. Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.

A Crowd Assured.

"Can't we have our marriage celebrated quietly, dear duke?"

"You mean wizout ze gr-r-reat crowd?"

"Yes."

"I'm afr-r-raid not. My creditors are quite sure to find us out, and every one weel be zere!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Well Begun—Half Done.

Sidney was walking on the beach with his Uncle John when his uncle told him that if he could find two pebbles exactly alike he would give him a dollar. Full of glee, Sidney began searching. By and by he ran to his uncle crying, "Oh, Uncle John, I've found one of them!"—Delineator.

Artful Innocence.

"I wish I was a moth," was the enigmatical declaration made by a young married woman to her husband.

"Why?"

"Because I should be able to get into some new clothes!"

The fact that they cannot carry a tune does not deter some men from singing their own praises.—Philadelphia Record

VULPINE SAGACITY.

The Tale of a Fox From the West Coast of Ireland.

It has often been said that the fox is the most cunning of all animals, but the following story of vulpine sagacity seems to require some credence. Some fishermen on the west coast of Ireland were in the habit of going to a small island a few hundred yards from the mainland in quest of bait. The island was inhabited by large numbers of rabbits and could be reached at low tide by wading, the water then being only a few inches deep. One morning they went in their boat quite early, it being high tide, and on landing saw what seemed to be a dead fox lying on the beach. The fur of the animal was all bedraggled, and he seemed to have been drowned. One of the men, remarking that his skin was worth something, pitched him into the boat. Procuring their bait, they returned to the mainland, and then the man who had possessed himself of the fox seized him by the tail and flung him on shore. As soon as the animal struck the beach he picked himself up with considerable agility for a dead fox and shot off like a flash along the cliffs, while the men stood staring at one another in mute astonishment. The men concluded that he had crossed over to the island during the night when the tide was low in search of rabbits and, finding in the morning that he was cut off from the mainland, counterfeited death, with the expectation of thereby procuring a passage to the shore in the boat, an expectation which was fully realized.—London Globe.

A DOG IN THE SKY.

Tibetan Explanation of the Cause of an Eclipse.

Every one has heard of the Chinese myth explaining an eclipse and the enormous dragon that stalks through the sky seeking to devour the sun. But the Tibetan legend is a little different and very interesting as described by Sven Hedin in his "Trans-Himalaya." After describing the eclipse and the terror and depression with which it was received he says:

Then I visited Hlaje Tsering with the corner pillars of my caravan. He sat at his lacquered table drinking tea and had his long Chinese pipe in his mouth.

"Why is it that it has just been so dark?" I asked him. "The gods of the Dangrayumtso are angry because you will not allow me to visit their lake."

"No, certainly not. A big dog roams about the sky and often conceals the sun. But I and the lama Lobsang have prayed all the time before the altar and have burned joss sticks before the images of the gods. You have nothing to fear. The dog has passed on."

"Very fine!" I cried and made a desperate attempt to explain the phenomenon. Robert held up his saucer to represent the sun, and I took two rupees to represent the earth and moon crossing each other's orbit. Hlaje Tsering listened attentively to Muhamed Isa's translation of my demonstration, nodded approvingly and finally expressed his opinion that this might do very well for us, but that it did not suit Tibet.

Meteors.

There is one very interesting fact connected with meteors that have struck the earth. Hundreds of them have been examined and found to contain animal remains—that is, the very lowest forms of life. This indicates that they are parts of a world that burst into fragments long, long ago. What a thought—a world broken up and scattered through space! Maybe we had another moon once, but that broke into pieces and these are the pieces, and maybe they are parts of the planet that once revolved between Mars and Jupiter. Over 500 of the larger pieces of this planet have been discovered and catalogued. One of these flew away inside of Mars' orbit. Why may not many of the smaller pieces and these solid meteors be they? It is probably so.—Columbus Journal.

The Way to Float.

This is the advice of an old swimmer to those who cannot swim: "Any human being who will have the presence of mind to clasp the hands behind his back and turn the face toward the zenith may float at ease and in perfect safety in tolerably still water. When you first find yourself in deep water you have only to consider yourself an empty pitcher. Let your mouth and nose and not the top of your heavy head be the highest part of you and you are safe. But thrust up one of your bony hands and down you go, turning up the handle tips over the pitcher." There are reason and logic in this.

Dease.

One day the teacher asked her class to write an essay on London, about which they had just been reading. When examining their papers later she was surprised to read the following:

"The people of London are noted for their stupidity."

"Where did you get that from?" asked she of Maggie Jones.

"Please, miss, it's all in the book. It says 'the population of London is very dense.'"—London Answers.

Props.

"My dear brother," said the clerical looking man, "are you doing anything to keep your brother from falling?"

"Why, yes," was the reply. "I'm interested in a concern that manufactures lamp posts!"—Boston Courier.

JUMPED THIRTY FEET TO LIBERTY IN NEWARK

Afraid that when arraigned in court next Friday he would be committed to the Rahway Reformatory, Polislaw Cinansai, fifteen years old, an inmate of the City Home at Verona, jumped from a dormitory window on the third floor of that institution yesterday morning. In spite of the fact that it was a thirty-five-foot drop and that a search was made for the boy within a few minutes, no trace of him was found.

Since his incarceration in the home the youth had been a model prisoner. In the time that he had been there since his commitment July 19, on a charge of larceny, the lad had given the attendants no trouble, but at times his manner was so sly, and, as one of the officers expressed it, "so sneaky," that he was rather closely watched.

Until yesterday, however, Cinansai had shown no signs of restiveness. Then he appeared to be exceedingly nervous, and when one of the attendants asked him what was wrong he confessed that he was afraid that when he was brought before the court next Friday he would be found guilty, and that in that event he would be sent to the reformatory and kept there until he was twenty years old. The attendants endeavored to cheer the lad, and when he retired Tuesday night he seemed to be much more at ease.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning one of the boys in the dormitory notified an officer that Cinansai was missing and the attendant sent word to Superintendent Heller. It was soon learned that the lad had quietly arisen from his bed and that darting to the window nearby he had poised himself on the ledge for an instant and then sprung to the ground.

Half expecting to find the boy lying seriously hurt beneath the window, the attendants and some of the "trusties" hurried out, but no trace of the lad was found. It was considered little short of miraculous that he had not been hurt, and, thinking that he might be limping around in the nearby woods, a hunt through them was made, but the lad had disappeared as completely as if the ground had swallowed him. Unable to find any clue to his whereabouts, the superintendent sent out a general alarm to the police of Newark and nearby places.

Wore His Nightclothes.

Whether the boy wore only his nightclothes or had had other apparel with him, the institution authorities do not know. It is assumed from the fact that his nightclothes were not found in the dormitory that he wore them when he made his rather perilous jump, but whether or not he took street clothing with him the authorities have not yet been able to ascertain.

Cinansai is one of three boys who were arrested a couple of weeks ago on four charges of breaking and entering. It was alleged at the time of their arrest that they had entered and robbed several saloons in a way that showed the skill of experienced thieves. According to the police, the lads gained entrance to the places that they are said to have robbed by turning window catches after removing a section of the glass.

It was said by the boys that they slept in lots, but the police declare that the lads had a cave with three exits near the tracks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Cinansai, who was barefooted and dirty when arrested, gave his home address as 154 Boyd street, Newark. His brother and a boy who said his name was John Heller are the other prisoners. They were each held by Judge Herr in default of $200 bail pending trial in the Juvenile Court.

TURNED DOWN AGAIN.

To be turned down a second time by the Excise Board is what happened to former Fire Chief Nathaniel H. Astfalk Tuesday night in Elizabeth when he again applied for a saloon license on East Grand street. Commissioners Fromm and Devine voted aye, and Commissioners Bye and Kling no. This practically disposes of Astfalk's case for one year. He had brought strong influence to bear on the board and felt confident of getting a license, but his efforts proved futile.

James Barns, of Pearl street, and two others whose licenses had been previously refused, and who had put in new applications, withdrew their applications Tuesday before they could be adversely acted upon.

Frederick Weber, of Newark, against whom a fight had been made to defeat his application for a license at 214 Broad street, won out and obtained the unanimous vote of the board.

Stains on Silver.

To get rid of the egg stains on silver wash the dishes in the ordinary way, adding a little ammonia to the water, then rub the silver over with a little very fine salt and wash again. To remove the taint of onion from silver rub it well over with bread or a little salt, or even lemon juice; in the case of forks these should be stuck in a piece of bread and drawn out, repeating this several times.

BASEBALL.

Plainfield fandom who journey out to Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon will witness one of the best games of baseball played here this year, for the Plainfield Baseball Club will cross bats with the strong McNulty Brothers' nine, of New York city. Both teams are in the pink of condition and a battle royal is to be expected.

The McNulty team has been the real candy among the semi-pro clubs of greater New York this year, taking the scalps of nearly every one of its opponents. Among its victims is the strong New York fire department nine, which is considered to be among the classiest amateur teams in the metropolis.

The Plainfield team has clashed already with the McNulty nine in New York. In that game, the New Yorkers won by a score of 4-2, but Plainfield was minus the services of Carlstrom, Emery and Nelson, three of the star players. But with the full line up and every one working in true mid-season form, Captain Martin expects to turn the tables on the opposing team. "Warry" McLaughlin will be on the slab for the locals and Nelson will do the receiving work in Saturday's game. The Plainfield team will present its regular line-up.

The locals have got to go some to keep up their enviable record—not losing a game on the home grounds this year. But with this "rep" to keep up, it's a pretty safe bet that the Plainfield boys aren't going to be asleep in that game on Saturday.

The McNulty line-up will include: Harrison in centerfield, who led the New England League in base stealing for two years, and Damran, one of the strong players on the York, Tri-State League team, last year.

The McNulty team will be made up as follows: Pfeifer, shortstop; Dowling, left-field; Deroiser, right-field; McGrath, first-base; Harrison, centre-field; Damran, third base; Wolfe, second base; Seaman, catcher; McKenna, pitcher.

James Vail, of this city, is able to be out again after a severe illness.

MISS ROSE M. HIGGINS BRIDE OF CHAS. TOWNLEY.

Miss Rose Marie, Carbone, daughter of Mrs. Michael J. Higgins, of 129 East Second street, and Charles Townley, of Madison avenue, were married yesterday afternoon at five o'clock in St. Mary's church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Hogan. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Amelia Carbone, of this city, and the best man was Roy McDonough, also of Plainfield.

There was a large group of friends in attendance, the guests coming from New York, Jersey City, Boston, Connecticut, and this city. After the wedding ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Higgins. Dancing and music was participated in by the guests and a supper was served at a late hour.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a handsome ring, while the groom presented the best man with a diamond scarf pin.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Michael Higgins, being well known to a large number of Plainfield people. The bridegroom is a brother of Captain William Townley of the fire department.

After a honeymoon in Connecticut, Mr. and Mrs. Townley will take up their residence in this city.

Mrs. John Powers.

Mrs. John Powers, of 221 Grove street, died suddenly at her home last night. Death resulted from a sudden cold and heart failure. Mrs. Powers was a native of England, coming to Plainfield from London. She had made this city her home for the past twenty-five years, leading a quiet life but having a large number of friends. Mrs. Powers was a member of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, in which she was an interested worker. She is survived by her husband and a stepson, John C. Powers. The funeral will be held Saturday morning and interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

LITTLE WORKERS DONATE $10 TO THE BABY CAMP

Our appeal to the little folks to help along the work at the baby camp conducted by The City Union of The King's Daughters on the mountainside has not been in vain. Today this paper received ten dollars from The Little Workers for Little People Circle, King's Daughters, and the sum is gratefully acknowledged. The fund now amounts to $109.00.

We know that there are many Plainfielders in the mountains or at the shore at this season of the year who will cheerfully aid such a worthy cause when requested to do so. To them we make this appeal. Send a dollar, two dollars, five dollars, or ten dollars to assist in defraying the expenses of the camp for the babes of the poor. Think of these tots whose parents could not give them comfort during these trying days but who by the goodness of The King's Daughters and their friends are cared for at the mountain resort by an efficient nurse. Don't you think you could spare a dollar for such a charity? Of course you will. Send your check, then, to The Daily Press. It will be acknowledged promptly and as quickly transmitted to the camp authorities.

We have received one hundred and nine dollars. Won't you help to make it three hundred dollars?

COSTLY MAUSOLEUM FOR WILLIAM PALMER SMITH

The corner stone for one of the most elaborate and costly mausoleums to be constructed in this state was laid with appropriate ceremonies on Monday afternoon in Hillside cemetery. The structure will be known as the William Palmer Smith mausoleum and will be erected on the plot belonging to the family. It is expected that its cost will be in the neighborhood of twenty thousand dollars. A small chapel will be a part of the building, which is to be 31x19.5x24 feet high.

The mausoleum is being built by William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, a New York banker. At the ceremonies attending the laying of the corner stone, which were conducted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace P. E. church, were Mr. Smith, his three sons, two daughters, and a son-in-law. The mausoleum will be built of White Mountain granite specially quarried at Westerly, R. I., and the interior will be of the finest Tennessee marble. The doors and gates will be of bronze of special design. It is expected that the magnificent tomb will be completed within two months, as work is being pushed on it now.

C. E. Simonson's Funeral.

The funeral services of Cornelius Ellis Simonson, who died at Corsicana, Texas, last Sunday, will be held at the residence of his mother, Mrs. J. W. Coddington, of 28 Watchung avenue, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Mr. Simonson was thirty years old and had been a resident of this city for twelve years, but was employed, at the time of his death, with an engine constructing firm in Corsicana, Texas. He was a member of the Holy Cross church. Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. J. W. Coddington, and one sister, Miss Laura Simonson.

Junior Aid Society Festival.

The Junior Aid Society of Saint Peter's Lutheran church held an ice cream festival in the Sunday-school room of the church yesterday afternoon and evening. The affair was for the benefit of the general church fund. There was a good sized attendance during both afternoon and evening. Ice cream and cake, soft drinks and candy were sold and a neat sum was realized. The room was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. The committee on arrangements consisted of Richard Duerschner, Andrew Pittroff and Rudolph Heinold.

Rev. Dr. Anderson to Speak.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, will be the speaker at the Netherwood Fresh Air Home next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Miss Jessie Haines, of Dunellen, and Miss Gesswein, of this city, will be the soloists.

Patrolman Nick Myers returned yesterday from a visit to his father, Peter D. Myers, of Rockaway Beach. The elder Myers is lying at the point of death suffering from paralysis.

Baker Alleged Embezzler.

A warrant was issued this morning for the arrest of Peter Baker, for a long time a collector and salesman in the local office of the Public Service Corporation's gas and electric department. It is alleged in the complaint sworn out by William R. Causebrook, the local manager, that Baker has embezzled money of the company. It is alleged that the amount taken is upwards of $100. Baker was under bonds furnished by a New York bonding company and was discharged about a week ago.

Get Schenectady Theatre.

W. J. Counihan and Michael Shannon have secured an option on one of Schenectady's most popular play houses and will sign the lease for it today. Mr. Counihan believes that the new venture will prove profitable as the city is a thriving one and the quality of the shows to be given there will be of the best. The new acquisition will be christened, "The Majestic."

The COURAGE of CAPTAIN PLUM

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD
ILLUSTRATIONS BY MAGNUS G. KETTNER

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"If you want me," she whispered. "If you want me—after you know—what I am—"

She shuddered against his breast, and he raised her face between his two hands and kissed her until she drew away from him, crying softly.

"You must wait—you must wait!"

He saw now in her face an agony that appalled him. He would have gone to her again, but there came loud voices from the forest, and recovering his pistol he sprang to the door. Half a hundred paces away were Obadiah and the king's sheriffs. They had stopped and the councilor was expostulating excitedly with the men, evidently trying to keep them from the cabin. Suddenly one of the three broke past him and ran swiftly toward the open door, and with a shriek of warning to Nathaniel the old councilor drew a pistol and fired point blank in the sheriff's back. In another instant the two men behind had fired and Obadiah fell forward upon his face.

With a yell of rage Nathaniel leaped from the door. He heard Marion cry out his name, but his fighting blood was stirred and he did not stop. Obadiah had given up his life for him for Marion, and he was mad with a desire to wreak vengeance upon the murderers. The first man lay where he had fallen, with Obadiah's bullet through his back. The other two fired again as Nathaniel rushed down upon them. He heard the zip of one of the balls, which came so close that it stung his cheek.

"Take that!" he cried.

He fired, still running—once, twice three times and one of the two men crumpled down as though a powerful blow had broken his legs under him.

The other two turned into the path and ran. Nathaniel caught a glimpse of a frightened, boyish face, and something of mercy prompted him to hold the shot he was about to send through his lungs.

"Stop!" he shouted. "Stop!"

He aimed at the fugitive's legs and fired.

"Stop!"

The boyish sheriff was lengthening the distance between them and Nathaniel halted to make sure of his last ball. He was about to shoot when there came a sharp command from down the path and a file of men burst into view, running at double-quick. He saw the flash of a saber, the gleam of brass buttons, the blue glare of the setting sun on leveled carbines, and he stopped, shoulder to shoulder with the man he had been pursuing. For a moment he stared as the man with the naked saber approached. Then he sprang toward him with a joyful cry of recognition.

"My God, Sherly—Sherly—"

He stood with his arms stretched out, his naked chest heaving.

"Sherly—Lieutenant Sherly—don't you know me?"

The lieutenant had dropped the point of his saber. He advanced a step, his face filled with astonishment.

"Plum!" he cried incredulously. "Is it you?"

For the moment Nathaniel could only wring the other's hand. He tried to speak but his breath choked him.

"I told you in Chicago that I was going to blow up this damned island—if you wouldn't do it for me—" he gasped at last. "I've had—a hell of a time—"

"You look it!" laughed the lieutenant. "We got our orders the second day after you left to 'Arrest Strang, and break up the Mormon kingdom!' We've got Strang aboard the Michigan. But he's dead."

"Dead!"

"He was shot in the back by one of his own men as we were bringing him up the gang-way. The fellow who killed him has given himself up, and says that he did it because Strang had him publicly whipped day before yesterday. I'm up here hunting for a man named Obadiah Price. Do you know—"

"What do you want with Obadiah Price?"

"The president of the United States wants him. That's all I know. Where is he?"

"Back there—dead or very badly wounded! We've just had a fight with the king's men—"

The lieutenant broke in with a sharp command to his men.

"Quick, lead us to him. Captain Plum! If he's not dead—"

He started off at a half run beside Nathaniel.

"Lord, it's a pretty mess if he is!" he added breathlessly. Without pausing he called back over his shoulder: "Regan, fall out and return to the ship. Tell the captain that Obadiah Price is badly wounded and that we want the surgeon on the run."

A turn in the path brought them to the opening where the fight had occurred. Marion was on her knees beside the old councilor.

Nathaniel hurried ahead of the lieutenant and his men. The girl glanced up at him and his heart filled with dread at the terror in her eyes.

"Is he dead?"

"No—but—" Her voice trembled with tears.

Nathaniel did not let her finish. Gently he raised her to her feet as the lieutenant came up.

"You must go to the cabin, sweetheart," he whispered.

Even in this moment of excitement and death his great love drove all else from his eyes, and the blood surged into Marion's pale cheeks as she tremblingly gave her hand. He led her to the door and held her for a moment in his arms.

"Strang is dead," he said softly. In a few words he told her what had happened and turned back to the door, leaving her speechless.

"If he is dying—you will tell me—" she called after him.

"Yes, yes, I will tell you."

He ran back into the opening.

The lieutenant had doubled his coat under Obadiah's head and his face was pale as he looked up at Nathaniel. The latter saw in his eyes what his lips kept silent. The officer held something in his hand. It was the mysterious package which Captain Plum had taken his oath to deliver to the president of the United States.

"I don't dare move until the surgeon comes," said the lieutenant. "He wants to speak to you. I believe, if he has anything to say you had better hear it now."

His last words were in a whisper so low that Nathaniel scarcely heard them. As the lieutenant rose to his feet, he whispered again:

"He is dying!"

Obadiah's eyes opened as Nathaniel knelt beside him and from between his thin lips there came faintly the old, gurgling chuckle.

"Nat!" he breathed. His thin hand sought his companion's and clung to it tightly. "We have won. The vengeance of God—has come!"

In these last moments all madness had left the eyes of Obadiah Price.

"I want to tell you—" he whispered, and Nathaniel bent low. "I have given him the package. It is evidence I have gathered—all these years—to destroy the Mormon kingdom."

He tried to turn his head.

"Marion—" he whispered wistfully.

"She will come," said Nathaniel. "I will call her."

"No—not yet."

Obadiah's fingers tightened about Captain Plum's.

"I want to tell—you."

For a few moments he seemed struggling to command all his strength.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning July 31, 1910.

Topic.—My most interesting missionary item.—Ps. xliv, 1-4; Acts xxviii, 23-29. Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

Every Christian Endeavorer should be possessed of some of the great and interesting events of missions. After all, they are simply the stories of the wondrous works of God in bringing the world to the cross, using men and women as the agents in the work. Moreover, nowhere has God wrought more wonderful works than in this particular field of all His labors, either in nature or in the government and development of men and nations. The story of missions is the most thrilling story in the world's history. Men have lauded great generals, some of whom have practically conquered the world of their day. They have heaped laurels and erected monuments at the graves of millions of soldiers who have borne sacrifices and endured hardships in fighting for their country. But if they only knew the sacrifices of missionaries, their fearlessness in facing hardships to save the souls of men rather than kill their bodies, they would have a higher regard for the missionaries and their cause. Take the lives of men like David Brainard, Marcus Whitney, Mrs. McFarland, the only white woman in Alaska for eight months, and many other home missionaries. Recall the great names of the men and women engaged in foreign missions—Judson, Carey, Livingstone, Moffet, Paton and scores of others. Where in all the world are biographies more thrilling, more courageous, more self sacrificing, to be found? Nowhere, and as Christian Endeavorers we should know not an interesting item, but the entire lives, of these greatest of the world's heroes.

We should not only know the great events in these men's lives, but tell them abroad. Our children should be able to say with the psalmist, "We have heard with our ears, O God; our fathers have told us what work Thou didst in their times in the days of old." Since that God has done still greater things on mission fields, and these things should be made known to all men. Ignorance is the chief source of missionary indifference. Tell men the story, the facts; tell them what God hath wrought and what He is doing today. Interest will be aroused, and active participation will be engaged in by the majority of those who hear. And the timid ones might have hesitated, but even they need no longer do so. Our greatest men from personal observation and knowledge have paid and are paying their highest encomiums to missionaries and their labors.

Knowing the great labors and telling about them will deepen our own interest in God's greatest cause. We will want to be more and do more for missions.

Not Fully Developed.

Christian Endeavor has not been developed to the highest point of efficiency—not yet. While it must remain essentially a society conducted by the young people, it calls for a closer study on the part of the pastor and all earnest church workers; it calls for trained leadership, the teacher himself being thoroughly equipped for the task of teaching them. This work will most frequently fall upon the pastor's broad shoulders, and he will carry the burden joyfully when he realizes that, after all, it is only a seed basket which bears the promise of a harvest for the church unto life eternal. The tasks that committees are set to accomplish will be such as the young people will find worthy of their best efforts and through which they will "learn to live" as Christians and citizens, "by living." Social life also will be encouraged. Not fewer socials, especially for the younger people, but more, will be held. One society in Texas put a dance hall out of commission by organizing clean, healthy socials for the boys and girls. We shall come to recognize the need of "play" and the educational value of it, and possibly in the near future the church will ring with the laughter and the shouts of happy children. The prophet saw merry, playing crowds in the streets of the holy city, and he rejoiced. Why may not we?—Ripple in Christian Endeavor World.

A Message From Mr. Edison.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, recently sent this personal message to the world of Christian Endeavor by Mr. Amos R. Wells, the editorial secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor:

If there is any message I can give that might be of value to your young people it would be this: To be interested in whatever they undertake or may be doing at the moment, to dismiss from their minds everything else but the one thing they are doing at the time and to think only of that one thing in all its bearings, from every viewpoint, and to be master of it. Don't mind the clock, but keep at it and let nature indicate the necessity for rest. After resting go at the work again with the same interest. The world pays big prices to men who know. To accomplish things there must first be an idea of possibility; then the watchword must be "Try," and keep on trying with enthusiasm and a thorough belief in an ability to succeed. If you are convinced that a certain thing can be done, never mind what the world says to the contrary. Experiment if you are really interested. Forget entirely the word disappointment. Failures, so called, are but finger posts pointing out the right direction to those who are willing to learn. So far as I can see, these principles have influenced me in the years that have passed. In addition, I have always believed that hard work and a living general interest in everything that makes for human progress will make men or women valuable to themselves and to the world.

AN ORDINANCE

To License, Regulate and Prohibit Shows and Exhibitions.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That no person or corporation shall, for any price, gain, or reward, exhibit or cause to be exhibited in the City of Plainfield any traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, or give or have or cause to be given or had any theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or have or make, or cause to be had or made, any exhibition of whatsoever nature, or maintain or conduct or cause to be maintained or conducted any theatre, opera house, music hall, or other place of public entertainment, without first obtaining a license therefor, to be granted by the Mayor, as herein prescribed; provided, however, that the provisions of this ordinance shall not apply to a concert or entertainment given for charitable or benevolent purposes.

Sec. 2. That no owner, occupant or other person or persons having the possession or care of any house, building or room or any lot of land within the City of Plainfield, shall suffer or permit any such traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or any exhibition of whatsoever nature such as are mentioned in the preceding section of this ordinance, to be exhibited, acted, shown forth or performed for any price, gain or reward, in or upon his, her or their said house, building or room or lot of land, unless the party or parties so causing such traveling or other show, circus or menagerie, theatrical or variety performance or play, concert or other entertainment, or any exhibition of whatsoever nature as aforesaid, shall first obtain such license in the manner herein prescribed.

Sec. 3. That the license fees to be charged for such licenses respectively shall be as follows, to-wit:

For a license for a circus with or without a menagerie the sum of not exceeding Two Hundred Dollars for each day;

For a license for a concert the sum of not exceeding Ten Dollars for each concert;

For a license for a theatre, opera house, or music hall, the sum of One Hundred Dollars a year; and for a license for any other place or public entertainment, the sum of not exceeding Twenty-five Dollars a year; and each such license for a theatre, opera house, music hall, or other place of public entertainment, shall expire on the first day of January following the date of the granting of such license;

For any moving picture show or entertainment, the sum of not exceeding Ten Dollars for each day;

For any exhibition or entertainment for which the amount of the license fee is not herein specifically fixed, the fee to be charged for such license shall not exceed the sum of Twenty-five Dollars for each such exhibition or entertainment.

Sec. 4. That the Mayor shall have the authority to determine the amount of any license fee within the limits aforesaid, and to decide whether a license is required under the terms of the preceding section when there is doubt upon application, and also authority to grant or withhold a license. Upon the Mayor deciding to grant any license, and the payment of the license fee to the Treasurer of the City of Plainfield or the Chief of Police, and the production of his receipt therefor to the Mayor, there shall be given to the applicant a license which shall state the name of the person licensed and the purpose and length of time or number of exhibitions or entertainments for which the license is granted. The Mayor shall also have authority to revoke any such license upon proof to his satisfaction after reasonable notice to the person or corporation holding such license and reasonable opportunity for him or it to be heard, that such licensed person or corporation, or any person acting on his or its behalf has given or caused to be given any exhibition of any nature whatever of an immoral nature or tendency, or in violation of any law of the State or any ordinance of the City, and after such revocation such person or corporation shall be deemed to be not licensed and be and remain liable under this ordinance in the same manner as if such license had never been granted.

Sec. 5. No moving picture show shall be given at any time or in any place within the said City without the written permission first obtained by the Mayor, in which shall be set forth the time and place at which such moving picture show may be given.

Sec. 6. That any person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall on conviction be subject to a fine not exceeding One Hundred Dollars or imprisonment not exceeding sixty days or both such fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 7. That the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance relating to shows and exhibitions," approved July 9, 1869; the ordinance to amend said ordinance, approved November 10, 1884; the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance to license, regulate and prohibit shows and exhibitions," approved December 8, 1897; the ordinance entitled "A Supplement to an ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance to license, regulate and prohibit shows and exhibitions,' approved December 8, 1897," approved July 12, 1898; and all other ordinances and parts of ordinances which conflict with any of the provisions of this ordinance be and the same are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910, approved by the Mayor, July 19, 1910.

AN ORDINANCE

Concerning the Construction and Repair of Sidewalks and Curbs.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That all sidewalks not already laid out under prior ordinances of said city shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street, and shall be raised, from the curbstone line to the side of the street adjoining in the proportion of one-half inch to one foot, unless otherwise specially directed by resolution of the Common Council.

Sec. 2. That all sidewalks of blue stone flagging or concrete of not more than four feet in width which shall hereafter be constructed under this ordinance shall be constructed so that the nearest edge of the blue stone flagging or concrete shall be the following distances from the curb line, that is to say: On sidewalks having a width of twenty feet or more between the property line and the curb line, a distance of eight feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of twelve feet or more and less than twenty feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of six feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of ten feet or more and less than twelve feet between the property line and the curb line, a distance of four feet from the curb line; on sidewalks having a width of less than ten feet between the property line and the curb line, said blue stone flagging or concrete shall be so laid that the side lines shall be at equal distances respectively from the property line and the curb line; provided, that in any case on application to the Common Council for that purpose, the Common Council may by resolution specially direct the distance which any blue stone flagging or concrete may be laid from the curb line as the Common Council shall deem to be for the best interests of the City.

All sidewalks of blue stone flagging or concrete of more than four feet in width which shall hereafter be constructed under this ordinance shall be constructed at such distance from the curb line as shall be designated by the Street Commissioner on application to him for that purpose, or may start from the curb line itself, if he shall so authorize.

Sec. 3. That all sidewalks in said city shall be well and sufficiently constructed, repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, so as to be even on the surface and so laid and constructed as freely to shed water and for the width of at least four feet free from turf, grass, weeds, stubble and other foreign substances.

Sec. 4. That within that portion of said city described as follows, viz:

Beginning at a point in the southeasterly side of Green Brook at the northeasterly side line of Leland Avenue and running thence along said line of Leland Avenue to the southeasterly side line of Berkeley Avenue produced; thence along said line produced and said line of Berkeley Avenue to the easterly side line of Denmark Road; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Ravine Road; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Charlotte Road produced; thence along said line produced and said line of Charlotte Road to the southeasterly side line of Belvidere Avenue; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Woodland Avenue; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Hillside Avenue; thence along said line to the southerly side line of Randolph Road; thence along said line to the easterly side line of Plainfield Avenue; thence along said line to the southeasterly side line of Sherman Avenue; thence along said line to the westerly City Line; thence along said line to the westerly side line of Evona Avenue; thence along said line to the southwesterly side line of Clinton Avenue; thence along said line to the southeasterly side of Green Brook; thence along the same to the place of beginning, also on both sides of East Front Street from Leland Avenue to Terrill Road; also on both sides of West Front Street from Clinton Avenue to the westerly City Line; also on both sides of North and South Avenues from Leland Avenue to Terrill Road; also on both sides of Central Avenue from Randolph Road to Elizabeth Street; also on both sides of Park Avenue from Randolph Road to the southerly City Line; also on both sides of Plainfield Avenue from Sherman Avenue to the southerly City Line, in all cases in which the sidewalks are not already constructed of blue stone flagging, or concrete, properly laid to the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, sidewalks shall be constructed, repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, composed either (1) of blue stone flagging, smooth and even on the surface, and properly laid under the direction of the Street Commissioner, said blue stone flags to be not less than four feet long transversely to the length of the street, not less than two feet wide lengthwise of said street, and not less than one and one-half inches thick in the thinnest part; or (2) of concrete, to be laid in conformity with the specifications for cement sidewalks as set forth in Standard Specifications for Portland Cement Sidewalks and Curbs, filed in the office of the City Clerk April 11th, 1910. The Street Commissioner shall give the correct lines and grades in all cases.

Sec. 5. Within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in Section 4, in all cases in which sidewalks are not already curbed with stone, concrete or similar substance, properly laid to the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, said sidewalks shall be curbed and the curbs repaired and maintained at the expense of the abutting land owners, the curbs to be either (1) of blue stone not less than four inches thick in the thinnest part and sixteen inches in depth, smooth and even on the surface, or (2) of concrete, constructed in conformity with specifications for curbs as set forth in the Standard Specifications referred to in Section 4 of this ordinance, and laid under the direction of the Street Commissioner. That all return curbs shall have a radius of six feet, no piece to be less than three feet two inches in length. The Street Commissioner shall give the correct lines and grades in all cases.

Sec. 6. That within that portion of the City of Plainfield described in Section 4, all sidewalks and curbs shall be laid and maintained at the grade fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established, and where any sidewalk or curb or any part thereof is or shall become above or below grade so fixed or established, or is or shall become broken or uneven on the surface, such sidewalk or curb shall be repaired, put to grade, relaid or the broken parts replaced, as the case may require, at the expense of the abutting land owner.

Sec. 7. If after the passage of this ordinance the owner or owners of lands affected thereby shall neglect for the space of thirty days to make the improvement to the sidewalks thereof by this ordinance directed and required, the Common Council may cause such improvements to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner as authorized by the statute in such case made and provided. Before proceeding to make any such improvement, the Common Council shall cause notice of such contemplated improvement to be given to the owner or owners of any land thereby affected, which notice shall contain a description of the property affected, sufficiently definite in terms to identify the same, as well as a description of the required improvements and a notice that unless said improvement shall be completed within thirty days after the service thereof it is the intention of the City to make said improvement or cause the same to be made pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs, and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April 13th, 1908. Such notice shall be served as in said Act directed and proof under oath of the publication or service of such notice shall be filed within two days thereafter in the office of the Collector of said City.

If such improvement shall not be completed within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith proceed to cause such improvement to be made by the City under his direction as authorized by this ordinance and said Act of the Legislature.

Sec. 8. When any improvement of the character hereinbefore mentioned shall be made by the City pursuant to said Act of the Legislature, a true and accurate account of the cost and expense thereof shall be kept by the Street Commissioner and apportioned among the several properties improved in proportion to the frontage of their respective lands, and a true statement of such cost under oath or affirmation of said Street Commissioner shall forthwith be filed by him with the Collector of said City, whereupon said charge shall be and remain a first lien upon the lands and real estate thereby improved, and shall bear the same rate of interest as other assessments made under the laws governing said City, and shall be collected in the same manner as assessments are now collected under such laws, and in case of the non-payment of such charges the land and real estate subject to such liens may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments made under such laws.

Sec. 9. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.

AN ORDINANCE

To vacate an unused street on property of Eric N. Erickson and others, extending from West Seventh Street to West Eighth Street, between Central Avenue and Division Street, and being a part of New Street.

Whereas, It is alleged and appears that the hereinafter described unused street, which is referred to and shown only by parallel lines, on a map made by Thomas B. Stillman, Clark Rogers, Nathan Rogers, and Nicholas Rogers, and which said map was duly filed in the office of the Clerk of Essex County, in the State of New Jersey, in the year Eighteen Hundren and Fifty-three, although dedicated as a street, by the filing of the aforesaid map, and although accepted by the City by Ordinance approved November first, Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-one, (in connection with that part of New street lying northwesterly of West Seventh Street and extending to West Fifth Street), has never been opened to public use; and

Whereas, It appears that Delia D. Erickson, widow, Julius E. Erickson, Jean E. Hallock, Roger W. Erickson, Eric N. Erickson, Louise K. Green, Thomas H. Leggett, Bessie T. Hubbard and Ethel L. Titsworth, John W. Murray, Helen R. Swan, Frank L. Clark, Mary Horan, widow, Bridget T. Horan, Mary Horan and Helena E. Horan, and being a part of New street, and is thus described: Beginning at a point in the southeasterly side line of West Seventh Street, distant along said side line southwesterly two hundred and thirty-seven feet (more or less) from the southwesterly side line of Central Avenue; thence southeasterly at right angles to West Seventh Street, or nearly so, along the northeasterly side line of New Street, as shown on the above mentioned map, a distance of four hundred and ninety-five feet (more or less) to the northwesterly side line of West Eighth Street; thence with the northwesterly side line of West Eighth Street, southwesterly fifty feet; thence parallel with the first course, northwesterly four hundred and ninety-five feet (more or less) to the southwesterly side line of West Seventh Street; thence along said side line of West Seventh Street northeasterly fifty feet to the beginning, be and the same is hereby vacated, and relieved of the public use and burden, pursuant to the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Permanent Improvement of Thornton Avenue with Durable Macadam Pavement.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That Thornton Avenue from Park Avenue to Hillside Avenue shall be permanently improved with durable macadam pavement for the full width of thirty feet, that is to say, fifteen feet on each side of the center line thereof, the said durable macadam pavement to be laid and constructed in strict conformity with the specifications particularly set forth in the ordinance of said City entitled "An Ordinance to authorize the issuing of municipal bonds for the purpose of obtaining money from the sale thereof for the permanent improvement of streets and highways of the City of Plainfield, pursuant to Chapter 200 of the Laws of 1898, during the year 1910," approved June 7, 1910; and all work shall be given out upon contract to the lowest responsible bidder, the necessary funds provided, commissioners to estimate and assess benefits appointed, assessments made, and all proceedings in the premises be had and taken in strict conformity with the provisions of said last mentioned ordinance (the provisions of which ordinance are hereby referred to and made a part hereof), and the acts of the Legislature therein referred to.

Adopted by the Common Council July 11, 1910; approved by the Mayor July 15, 1910.

CHARLES J. FISK, Mayor.

SCARCITY OF MILK NOW

Investigation Made in Important Dairy Section Discloses Marked Depletion.

NOT FEEDING IT TO THE HOGS.

Dairymen Deny That They Are Over-Producing and That They Feed Good Milk to Swine.

Putting aside the many statements, conflicting and contradictory, that have been made regarding the milk situation, one fact has been clearly established—that there is a scarcity in the supply. Why this is so seems to be less certain, for there is, apparently, a number of factors of almost equal importance contributing to it.

As representative of the New Jersey dairy farm industry, the northern part of the State was selected for an investigation of the situation and a member of The Press staff was sent there early this week for the purpose. It took him only a short time to learn that neither an overproduction of milk nor anything else is leading farmers to feed good milk to their hogs, as had been stated in certain quarters.

Dairymen of North Jersey disclaim any share in circulating the report that farmers of the section were getting more milk than they could dispose of and were, therefore, feeding it to their hogs. Nevertheless, the statement went forth with an alternative: Were the men who owned the dairies displeased with the prevailing price for the commodity and rather than suffer a loss in shipment or to force a shortage, put the fluid to the best use at home? At first glance, the second proposition seemed to have some reasonable grounds, considering the present price of pork.

To the first statement The Press reporter received a general denial. It was emphatically declared by a score of farmers that the pigs were not getting any share of the daily product of good marketable milk. This applied to the men who were selling through most of the several agencies, or companies, having stations in the upper part of the State. The principal reason why the porkers, or any other animal on four legs, was not getting milk as an article of diet, it was said, was that there was not enough milk to spare for such purposes.

When it came to the second question there was also a general negative answer. It was tempered occasionally by the plaint that the farmers were not getting the price they should receive, all things considered. At the same time the exchange quotation at present is the highest in forty years for July, it was stated.

No farmer could be located in the territory visited who would admit that he was holding back milk from his dairy because he was suffering a loss. Those questioned, while willing to accept as tenable the supposition that there might be isolated cases of stock owners keeping away from the market in part because of prices, or in the hope of better quotations. They could not name, however, any specific case.

A creamery man, who pays exchange prices, was asked if he knew of any such conditions existing, as had been lately reported. He responded by declaring that he would like to meet any farmer who was throwing away, or feeding his hogs, any excess milk.

"I'll take it and be glad to get it; we're below our usual receipts for the month now," he said, and estimated that the shortage so far as his plant was concerned was about five per cent. below the July average. In no instance, so far as could be learned, were the creameries turning away any cans.

The dairymen were a unit in saying that there was a shortage in the production. To show how great an extent opinions differed, the more conservative believed that five per cent. was a reasonable estimate; others thought that it might be greater, while the belief was also advanced in another quarter that the situation was becoming about normal.

The reasons for the scarcity, as stated, were numerous. The chief cause assigned for the decrease in supply, apparently, is the lack of pasturage. Big stretches of field, which under normal weather conditions might supply food for many cattle, were pointed out to the reporter. There was no pasture at all.

Since the close of spring, which brought an abundance of water, there has been so little rain that the herbage is literally burned off. In

NO SEWER PERMIT FOR LUNCH "WAGON"

It transpires that the report of a sewer connection permit having been granted to the proprietor of the lunch wagon, who has backed his unsightly looking and objectionable wagon up on the vacant lot on the west side of Park avenue, adjoining the railroad tracks, is unfounded. While Building Inspector Doane is powerless to order the wagon removed, inasmuch as he has no legal right to do so, the opinion prevails that the proprietor of the wagon will not be able to open his place for business, as he will not get a sewer permit.

Mayor Fisk has taken prompt action on the remonstrances filed by adjoining property owners, and it is safe to say that the owner of the land who would allow his property to be used for such a purpose for the sake of a few dollars in rent will not have a tenant very long.

It is generally conceded that the lunch wagon is a disgrace to the neighborhood, and in all probability the Common Council will be appealed to to find some way to compel the owner of the land to have the thing removed.

SOME DISREGARD THE MAYORS' PROCLAMATION

To guard against any lack of pressure for fire department purposes, the Plainfield-Union Water Company has kept a close watch on all patrons who have declined to respect the mayors' proclamation requesting them to discontinue the use of garden and lawn sprinklers. All subscribers can get their money back at the company's office for the remainder of the term of their agreement. In most cases, there has been a hearty approval of the proclamation in the community's interests, but here and there some disregard it.

Among the many letters received by the Water Company since the proclamation was issued, this one from H. G. Phillips, of 975 Kensington avenue, is a specimen:

"Referring to the proclamation on the water famine, appearing in the evening papers, I desire to say that I for one will gladly discontinue at once the use of my lawn sprinkler. I think it only right and proper under the circumstances that this be done, and I trust the public generally will show their approval of the proclamation issued by both mayors."

MISS HARRIET E. GUION, AGED EIGHTY-SIX, DEAD.

Mrs. Harriet E. Guion, widow of Charles S. Guion, died last night at her home here, aged eighty-six years. Her husband was a coal merchant and the couple were held in high esteem in the community. Mrs. Guion had lived here since 1878 and her husband died eight years ago. Surviving her is a grandson, Godfried Guion Clay, and a son-in-law, Councilman George S. Clay.

The funeral services will be held at Grace P. E. church tomorrow afternoon at 4:30. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector, will officiate. Interment will be made at Hillside cemetery.

Miss Eva Himmelfarb Entertains.

Miss Eva Himmelfarb, of 311 New street, was given a party yesterday afternoon in honor of her sixth birthday. Twenty-five guests were present. The hostess was the recipient of many handsome presents, among them being a gold bracelet, two gold rings, a pearl necklace, a gold chain and locket, and several pieces of china ware. The party lasted from three until seven. A photograph was taken of the assembled guests, to each one of whom a copy will be sent.

Supplies for Temple Baptist.

The supplies for the pulpit of the Temple Baptist church for the month of August have been announced by L. W. Randolph, chairman of the committee. The following ministers have been obtained: August 7, Rev. Charles Fountain; August 14, Rev. Theodore L. Gardiner; August 21, Rev. J. A. Cubberly; August 28, Rev. George Bowers. Communion service will be observed in the church this Sunday morning.

Mrs. F. McKellow, of Laredo, Texas, and her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Loring, of San Antonio, who have been visiting Mrs. Peter Hahn, of East Second street, left for their homes in the southwest yesterday, going as far as St. Louis on the B. & O.

POLITICIANS AT SEA GIRT

More Than 500 Prominent G. O. P. Men Guests of Governor Fort.

JUDGE WM. RUNYON IN CROWD.

Most of the Big Guns of the Party Spent the Day Discussing the Situation—Fowler Was Not There.

Among the 500 guests of Governor Fort at his annual reception and luncheon at Sea Girt yesterday none attracted more attention than Judge William N. Runyon, of this city, the candidate for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Fifth district to succeed Charles N. Fowler, who aspires to a ninth term. There were former governors, judges of the higher courts, members of the Legislature, newspaper editors, State officials and men prominent in all walks of life in the big gathering.

State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees, of Morris county, was on hand with a big delegation of Morris politicians. They freely predicted that Runyon would have a walk-over at the primaries in their county. The Union county politicians were equally certain that there would be no opposition of any consequence against the popular Plainfielder.

Among the Plainfielders present were Mayor Charles J. Fisk, State Supervisor of Roads Robert M. Meeker, Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell, George J. Tobin, Tax Collector William R. Townsend and District Court Judge William Newcorn.

There were some Republican leaders who have had their differences of opinion with Governor Fort. The most notable instance was the presence of David Baird, the Republican leader of South Jersey. Senator Kean was on hand early. He gave no evidence of the least anxiety as to the outcome of his contest for reelection. Edward C. Stokes, an aspirant for the Senatorial toga, was on hand, too, as were Vivian M. Lewis, Banking Commissioner; Mahlon Pitney, the Chancellor, and William P. Martin, the Essex county New Idea exponent.

Of the Democrats who have been mentioned for the nomination for Governor, Frank Katzenbach, who was defeated three years ago by Governor Fort, was unable to be present. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, sent his regrets, while George S. Silzer, State Senator from Middlesex, was present. Edward Kenny, of East Newark, was another Democrat who spent the day in camp.

Charles N. Fowler, present Congressman and aspirant for the United State Senate, sent his regrets. Judge George R. Gray, of the Court of Errors and Appeals, and Chief Justice William S. Gummere were the two prominent representatives of the judiciary of the State.

The board of managers of the Morris Plains Hospital for the Insane held a meeting yesterday morning, as did also the Riparian Commission, Governor Fort meeting with both. The State Highway Commission also held a brief meeting, and discussed plans for spending the $50,000 appropriated at the last session of the Legislature.

To the soldier boys the feature of the day was the review of the 1st add 5th regiments by the Governor. The visitors lined up opposite the two regimental camps, while the regiments were formed in front of their respective camps. When the Governor and his staff rode around the regiments, as the detachment from Battery A roared out the Governor's salute, the crowd cheered vigorously.

Then the two regiments passed in review, and the splendid marching and steadiness of the men in the ranks called forth applause and encomiums for their military bearing. It was indeed a great day for Govenor Fort, but a greater one for the 1st and 5th regiments.

Had Leg Amputated.

After suffering for months with a gradual closing up of the arteries of his left leg, Edwin A. Marsh, a member of the firm of Worth & Marsh, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, had his left leg amputated above the knee yesterday at Muhlenberg Hospital. It was said this morning that Mr. Marsh was getting along nicely. He is a patient of City Physician C. B. Lufburrow.

Miss Willis Improving.

It was said at the hospital this morning that Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis, who was recently operated upon for appendicitis, is progressing nicely and that she is very comfortable.

Walter L. Lewis spent yesterday fishing at Boynton Beach.

LOG CABIN GUN CLUB BECOMES INCORPORATED

The Log Cabin Gun Club, of this city, has filed with the county clerk at Elizabeth articles of incorporation, and the object named in the articles is "to practice shooting with firearms". The incorporators named are Marion S. Ackerman, Elmer E. Bigoney, and Henry E. Butler. The seven trustees for the first year, in addition to the three named above, are Robert Rushmore, David G. Werms. Percy H. Stewart and Samuel Huntington.

The grounds selected for the shooting are those of the Watchung Hunt Club, for which permission has been granted. The former grounds of the club have had to be abandoned owing to their being used for another purpose. The club will begin the season's practice in the early fall.

NOVELTIES PLANNED BY NEW PHYSICAL DIRECTOR

On September 1, Thomas Whittaker, the newly appointed physical director of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association, will assume charge of his duties in the local physical department. On this same date George L. Listman, the present physical director, will go to the Montclair association to take charge of the physical work there.

Mr. Whittaker comes here from Reading, Pennsylvania, where he has been the director of municipal playgrounds this year. He has also had charge of the department of instruction in swimming in the city of Reading. Mr. Whittaker intends to make a course in swimming among the leading features of the work of the physical department for the coming winter.

Although the new physical director has not as yet officially announced his plan of action, it is understood that he will follow the regular routine of physical department work. Mr. Whittaker, however, has a whole lot of new ideas, which he will try to incorporate in the local association's physical department. A Y. M. C. A. football team is being talked of, and if this idea matures, it will be a big help to Plainfield athletics, for at present there is no regular football team here except the high school elevens. Mr. Whittaker will also endeavor to promote the interest of swimming and track athletics in the local high schools. The association is intending to make a renewed effort toward co-operation with the city and borough high schools through its new athletic director.

Mr. Whittaker will fill a long felt for want in this city—that of an all around, imparital, athletic director, who can organize, coach, and direct the athletics of Plainfield in a business-like, energetic, manner. Leagues are to be organized among the school boys and various clubs in the different branches of sport.

Hurt in Planing Mill.

Stanley Wovanoski, of South Second street, an employe of S. W. VanNest in his planing mill on East Fourth street, had his hand caught in the joiner machine this morning and lost three fingers of his right hand and had the other badly lacerated. Wovanoski is at Muhlenberg Hospital, where his hand was dressed.

Baseball.

The Plainfield Baseball Club will go to New Brunswick Sunday afternoon to play the strong nine of that place. The New Brunswick team will present a strong line-up although there has been a disagreement among the players. Tomorrow afternoon the locals will line-up against the strong McNulty team, of New York.

EMPLOYEES DISCHARGED

Central Railroad Dispenses with Services of Looters of Freight Cars.

MEN IMPLICATED IN THEFTS.

Chief of Detectives Gray Discloses Identity of Alleged Thieves Who Had Enough Stuff to Start Department Store.

Whether Garret Garretson, of Harrison avenue, North Plainfield, and W. J. Heiner, of Washington avenue, and Fourth street, wanted to or had contemplated starting a ship chandlery or a department store will, perhaps, forever remain a mystery, but the fact will remain that they made a good start by appropriating enough miscellaneous articles from freight shipped to this city to do both or either and therefore they are no longer in the employ of the Central Railroad of New Jersey in the freight department.

Chief of Detectives J. S. Gray, of the Central, reported this morning that these two men had been dismissed from the company's employ and that the charges preferred against them was stealing from the cars and depot of the company various articles of wearing apparel and other things and that the goods were found on their premises. Several employees of the company were discharged for the same offense some time ago, and the revelations of Chief Gray will account for some of the mysterious loss of goods after delivery had been made of original packages to the merchants of this city. The source of the information by which the thieves were detected could not be learned, but enough was told this morning to convince Mr. Gray that he had caught the right men.

Garretson and Heiner were discharged on July 17 after a search of their homes revealed an assortment of stuff alleged to have been stolen from the local freight house which would have started any ambitious person on the road to fortune. Among the articles found at Garretson's home were a pair of button shoes, two quarts of onions, four cans of condensed milk, two hams, a quantity of salt codfish, a pair of silk booties, and other things. Besides to confessing to these thefts, Mr. Gray said that both men confessed to having tapped a barrel of whiskey from which small quantities were taken from time to time.

The list of stolen stuff to which Heiner confesses is partly as follows: Women's underwear, needle work, 15 yards, two pairs of men's trousers; 1 pair high rubber boots; 1 pair shoes; several pair of sandals; some bacon, butter, lime, condensed milk, canned goods of various kinds, some sole leather, some shoe heels and cut soles, cakes of chocolate, two screw drivers, two carpet-tack pullers, and other trifles.

The other men alleged to have been implicated in the looting of the freight packages and who have been discharged are: Charles Stetler, Geo. Smith and Thomas Martin.

SUPPLIES FOR FIRST M. E. DURING ABSENCE OF PASTOR.

The following preachers will be at the First Methodist church during the month of August, while Dr. Anderson is on vacation::

August 7, Rev. George C. Wilding, D. D., of Perth Amboy; 14, Rev. Harrison S. Elliott, of Cleveland, O.; 21, Rev Nathaniel Brooks, of Bayonne; 28, Rev. Henry Ridgely Robinson, D. D., of Red Bank. All of the above are strong preachers and are well worth hearing by the Plainfield people.

Slevin Case in Borough Court.

The case of Michael Martin, the Italian who was run into and badly injured by John Slevin's automobile on Somerset street some time ago, was heard in the borough court yesterday afternoon before Recorder Dolliver. William A. Coddington represented Mr. Slevin and Harry C. Runyon was the counsel for the complainant. The complaint was dismissed by Recorder Dolliver.

Fire in Old Lumber.

Shortly after four o'clock this morning, a fire broke out in a pile of old lumber in the coal yard at 741 South avenue, belonging to Teneyck and Kelly. After twenty minutes' work, the recall was sounded. The damage was slight.

Small Grass Fire.

There was a small grass fire this morning on Jackson avenue near Watchung. The borough fire department was summoned and quickly extinguished the blaze.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ALEXANDER B. MALLINSON

The funeral services of Alexander B. Mallinson, of West Fourth street, the oldest druggist in this city, who died last Tuesday, were held from his late home yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. The services were largely attended by the many friends and relatives of the dead man. There was also a large representation of the Plainfield Druggists' Association present.

Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mr. Mallinson was an active member, officiated. Dr. Chambliss read several appropriate passages of Scripture and spoke at length of the useful life of the dead druggist. Several solos were sung by Elmer Runyon.

The floral tributes were many in number, among them being a hand some wreath from the Druggists' Association.

The interment, which was made this morning in Hillside cemetery, was private.

JOS. HARRIGAN ELECTED DICTATOR OF THE MOOSE

The Plainfield Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, held a meeting last night in the rooms of the Knights of Columbus. Some fifty candidates were obligated and officers were installed. There were a large number of the brothers present and a most enjoyable evening was passed.

Worthy Dictator, Theodore Stirling resigned on account of other pressing business. Joseph Harrigan was elected as his successor. Secretary Bush, of the New York Lodge, assisted State Organizer Nichols in the installation, after which Mr. Bush made an eloquent address to the order, telling of the ideals, founding and origin of the Loyal Order of Moose. The officers installed last night are as follows: Past Dictator, Andrew McCardell; Dictator, Joseph Harrigan; vice-dictator, Francis J. Blatz; treasurer, C. H. Holstein; prelate, John Green; secretary, J. J. Carty; trustees, H. P. Greenwood, C. W. Fogarty and W. W. Wilson; sergeant-at-arms, William Addis; inner guard, Miles Wilson; and outer guard, Fred Dunn.

On the night of August 16, the grand officers of the order and a team from the Trenton lodge will confer the degree upon the Plainfiel dlodge and close the charter of the local lodge. The meeting will be held in Saengerbund Hall, being preceded by a large street parade, with a full band. Refreshments will be served after the meeting. Delegates from the Camden, Trenton, Lamebrtsville, Milltown, New Brunswick, Perth Amboy, Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken and New York lodges, together with several mayors from these lodges, will be present on this occasion.

JEREMIAH GRIFFIN DIES AFTER TWO YEARS' ILLNESS.

Jeremiah Griffin, of 910 George street, died at his home yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock after a long illness. Mr. Griffin had been ill for the past two years although he had never been confined to his bed. His death was due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. Griffin was a native of Trallie, County Kerry, Ireland, but came to this country when he was a young man. He had been a resident of Plainfield for many years. He was a member of St. Mary's church and of the Holy Name Society. Mr. Griffin is survived by two sons, Jeremiah and Thomas, and two daughters, Jenny and Agnes, all of this city.

The funeral services will be held from Mr. Griffin's late home tomorrow morning at 8:15 and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery directly after the funeral service.

NEW ASST. SECRETARY AT THE LOCAL Y. W. C. A.

Miss Maude Van Belarcom, of Passaic, has been appointed assistant secretary of the Plainfield Young Women's Christian Association. She is a graduate of the Northfield Seminary. Miss Van Blarcom has been employed this summer as social secretary at Mrs. Christie's summer camp for girls at Altamont, New York. She will assume her duties, that of a general assistant to Miss Tapping, the present general secretary, on Monday. It is expected that she will remain here for one year.

Miss Van Blarcom is well known to many of the Plainfield young women already, as she spent the month of May helping Miss Tapping in the Association work.

ACCUSED AS EMBEZZLER

Peter Baker, Public Service Employe, Held for the Grand Jury.

HIS ACCOUNTS ARE SHORT.

Liquor Said to Be the Cause of Young Man's Downfall—Has Not Secured Bondsman.

Charged with embezzling the sum of $8.85 from the Public Service Corporation, Peter Baker, a solicitor for the company, was held in $200 bonds for the action of the October grand jury by Judge William N. Runyon this morning.

Baker lives with his wife and one child at 146 Somerset street, North Plainfield, but was apprehended here yesterday afternoon on a warrant sworn out by William R. Causebrook, local manager of the P. S. C.

The amount named in the complaint does not begin to show the total of Baker's speculations. Up to yesterday additional accounts were reported by the auditor which brought the total up to $42.50, but the investigation into the matter is only partly finished.

According to the statement made by Mr. Causebrook yesterday, Baker was discharged more than a week ago and he was given to understand that if he made good the amount of his alleged stealings proceedings against him would be stopped. He evidently made no effort to raise the money, and finally Mr. Causebrook was obliged to notify the bonding company who had gone on Baker's bond for the sum of $100. The bonding company at once insisted upon the arrest of Baker, and in pursuance of this order the warrant was issued.

It has been alleged that the cause of Baker's downfall was over-indulgence in liquor, although this was not perceptible during the day. His indulgence appears to have been confined to nights, and it is said that while drinking Baker could never get enough to satisfy his craving for the stuff.

This morning, when advised of his rights in the matter, Baker waived examination. He was not represented by counsel. V. W. Nash, Jr., appeared for the Public Service Corporation.

As solicitor for the Corporation, Baker was authorized to collect money. On April 6 he failed to turn over $8.85 alleged to have been collected from a customer, and from that day up to the present time, it is alleged, his habit was to retain part of the moneys collected, but in every instance he gave the customer a receipt in full. It was through the rendering of bills to these people who had paid in full, but whose accounts on the books showed a debit balance, that the alleged stealing was uncovered. After his discharge and separation from the company Baker continued to solicit business, ostensibly for the company, and it is not known just how many people he has importuned to buy gas ranges nor is it known whether he collected deposits on these ales. It was reported to the company yesterday morning that Baker was annoying a woman on East Front street in an endeavor to get her to sign a contract for a gas range, and begging the company to tell Baker to keep away. Up to noon Baker had been unable to secure a bondsman.

LECTURED FOR SPEEDING CARS ON PARK AVENUE.

William Hobbie and William Briggs, automobile owners and drivers, were arraigned before City Judge William N. Runyon this morning on a charge of speeding and reckless driving on Park avenue yesterday afternoon. They were detected by Patrolman Dobson and ordered to appear this morning.

Hobbie has been before the Judge on a similar charge before and for this Judge Runyon gave him a lecture. Both men received suspended sentences, but it is quite likely that they will be more careful in the future.

Seventh-Day Baptist.

The pulpit of the local Seventy-Day Baptist church will be occupied tomorrow morning by Rev. Samuel G. Zerfass, pastor of the German Seventh-Day Baptist church at Ephrata, Pa. The pastor, Rev. Edwin Shaw, expects to be home next week. Rev. Dr. T. L. Gardiner will lead the devotional service this morning.

Miss Ruth Harris, the soprano of the First Baptist church choir, leaves this city Monday for her home in Parkesburgh, West Virginia, where she will spend the month of August.

NOTICE—Beginning next Thursday and during the month of August this store will close at 12 noon. Please be guided accordingly.

VICTIM OF RABIES, HE FORETOLD HIS DEATH

Gripped by rabies, James Hardy, of 46 East Twenty-fourth street, Bayonne, decided Tuesday night that he would be dead in twenty-four hours. He had come home from his work at the Standard Oil plant feeling very ill. He had his son telephone for John Dempsey, an undertaker, and made all arrangements for his funeral, telling Dempsey he would be dead Wednesday. His foreboding was realized and on Wednesday he died after hours of suffering. After notifying the undertaker, who would not believe that Dempsey was really in danger of death, Hardy sent for his family physician, Dr. John Cook, who found him suffering from heart weakness but did not detect any symptoms of rabies. The doctor laughed at Hardy's premonition of death, but Hardy met all his assurance with cool but stubborn declamations that in twenty-four hours he would be dead.

At 9 o'clock that night Hardy was in agony. He clutched his throat and was barely able to articulate. He said he could not breathe at times. He felt that he was suffocating. The pains in his heart were terrible. At times his body was shaken with convulsions. He gasped a request that Father Peter Reilly, of the Church of St. Henry, be sent for.

Father Reilly arrived in a few minutes and found Hardy in delirium. The priest recognized the signs of approaching death. He sat by the bedside calming the sufferer and after a time administered the last sacraments. He made inquiries of the son. There was something to the eye of Father Reilly far different in this case than he had observed before. Cornelius Hardy told him that James Hardy had been bitten by a cat four months ago.

His father had been playing with an evil tempered cat which had been a pet around the Standard Oil works but had bitten several men previously. The cat caught Hardy's left hand and sank its teeth in two fingers. Hardy killed the animal and had his fingers dressed. The wounds gave him little inconvenience and healed in a short time. It was suggested to him that the cat might have had rabies and that it would be a sensible thing if he went to a Pasteur institute for treatment. But Hardy made little of the hurts and went on with his work.

So far as the son knew there were no indications until that afternoon that his father had hydrophobia. The priest was certain, though, that hydrophobia was killing the man. Dr. Cook was called again. Hardy was raving when the doctor got to the house.

The doctor identified the symptoms instantly. They had not been in evidence when he visited Hardy earlier in the day. He tried the patient with water, offering it to him in a glass and then in a spoon. The sight of it threw the man into paroxysms of increasing violence. He muttered constantly. He had a fever of 102 degrees. The action of the heart was weak and very irregular. Froth came to his lips.

Dr. Cook worked over Hardy until morning came, but the doctor's efforts were successful only in mitigating the patient's suffering. Morphine was injected several times before the doctor was certain that his patient did not feel pain. Early Wednesday morning he sent Hardy to the Bayonne Hospital. A few hours later he died.

Miss Helen Riley has returned to her home in Bloomfield, after visiting her grandfather, Thomas Conboy.

Miss Bessie Moran has been a guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hartnett, in Elizabeth, this week.

Miss Kathryn Flemming, of Three Bridges, has been a guest this week of Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer.

Miss Esther E. Amerman is enjoying a two weeks' vacation at Asbury Park.

Miss Pauline Smith, of Bayonne, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. M. T. Hickey.

Misses Edna Nixon and Edna Graham are visiting friends in Quakertown.

Richards and Gaston have completed their work on the Duke estate.

Miss Margaret Meekin, of Newark, is visiting the Misses Greene.

Miss Grace Amerman is spending two weeks in Connecticut.

WESTFIELD.

Westfield Park Commission has passed a resolution asking the Town Council to purchase the ground on Mountain avenue which the voters voted against for a school site, for a public park. It is anticipated that there will be considerable opposition to this project from the voters.

Many of the farmers in Mountainside are compelled to carry water over a mile for their cattle. The brook at the Children's Country Home, that has never been known to fail, is nearly dry and will not furnish a supply of water much longer.

The Police Committee of Westfield Council asks the residents to cooperate with the police department in taking the numbers of automobiles that iolate the speed ordinance.

Dr. Butler reports that in the past six months he has been called upon to kill fifteen dogs, and in each case they gave all the symptoms of rabies.

Vice-President J. R. Connolly, of the Westfield Trust Company, with Mrs. Connolly, started yesterday for a trip through Maine.

SOMERVILLE.

The annual Sunday school excursion left yesterday morning for Asbury Park, carrying scholars from the First Reformed, Methodist, Baptist and Third Reformed churches of Raritan.

Mrs. J. Ross Lake, of West Main street, is spending two weeks at West Point.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Roger are spending a week at Asbury Park.

Miss Herder has been visiting relatives at Pittstown this week.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

William Totten, who was arrested at the show grounds in Plainfield, Tuesday night, on the charge of stealing a bicycle, pleaded guilty to the charge before Recorder Campbell in the borough Wednesday night. Marshal Benson then took the prisoner to New Brunswick to wait the action of the grand jury.

The Methodist Sunday school excursion returned to the borough shortly after nine o'clock last night. The excursionists were a sunburned and tired yet happy lot, for the day had been almost perfect.

The bicycle, which was stolen from L. H. Cramer by William Totten, has been returned to its rightful owner. The wheel was in possession of Roy Bray, of Plainfield avenue, Plainfield.

George W. Day attended the luncheon given by Governor J. Franklin Fort at Sea Girt yesterday.

At a meeting of the Dunellen Fire Department last night, several important matters were discussed.

Miss Carrie Hyel, of Prospect avenue, left yesterday for a month's vacation on the coast of Maine.

Holy Communion will be observed in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

John Harkins and family moved back to New Brunswick yesterday.

The Borough Council holds its regular monthly meeting, Monday night.

Miss Louise Trust has returned from a visit to Lake Hopatcong.

Rev. and Mrs. Earnest Brown will go on their vacation Monday.

Chancellor Pitney has signed a decree of divorce for Mrs. Anna Ida Buck, of Burlington, from George W. Buck, on the ground of desertion.

Miss Avis Irene Aldrich, of Sherman avenue, is in the Adirondack Mountains.

FOR THE JERSEY SENATE.

Ex-Judge Zabriskie Opposes Bergen County Clerk Samsey.

Ex-Judge David Zabriskie, an ex-Assemblyman, of Ridgewood, has thrown a bomb into the Bergen county. I intend to make my fight as a himself a candidate for State Senator to oppose County Clerk John R. Samsey. Judge Zabriskie is styled a progressive Republican. He issued the following statement yesterday:

"I have decided to make a contest for the Republican nomination for State Senator from Bergen county. I intende to make my fight as a representative of certain well-defined principles which I think ought to be enacted into law in the interest of the general public.

"I favored, and if nominated and elected will vote for an act empowering the Public Utilities Commission to fix just and reasonable rates to be charged by railroads and other public service corporations, to enable the commission to enforce its findings in court by the employment of experts to make a physical valuation of the property or any other means. I also favor changes in our primary and election laws extending the direct vote system to the nomination of Governors and Congressmen."

SEARCH FOR HERMIT'S GOLD.

Crowds Looking For Carey's Supposed Hidden Wealth.

Spurred on by tales of rolls of bills and pots of gold coins secreted about the shed at the corner of West Side avenue and Montgomery street, Trenton, where John Carey, who died there Monday, had lived for fifty years a hermit, a score or more of residents in the neighborhood are today going over the place with a fine comb in the hope of coming upon hidden wealth.

Carey, who was one of the most unique figures in the city, died after an illness of several weeks from a complication of diseases. He was reputed to have acquired considerable property, which he had turned into cash, and the tale has been circulated that he hid his money about the old shack in which he had lived. So far as is known, he had no relatives and no one around there knows anything much about him. At one time he carried on a good business in this city as a florist, but retired about forty years ago and since that time has lived as a recluse in the place where he died.

Funeral services for him were held yesterday from St. Aloysius's church, and the body was interred in Holy Name cemetery.

ROUTE OF JERSEY BOULEVARD.

Commission Fixes It, But Must Wait War Department's Consent.

The Boulevard Commission met yesterday at Sea Girt and agreed upon a route for the State highway. It will start at Atlantic Highlands and run along the shore through Seabright, Long Branch, Elberon, Deal, Allenhurst, and Asbury Park.

The boulevard will cross Wesley Lake at its upper end and then will follow the lake to the ocean front and return inland to the main road, returning to the ocean front through Belmar to Spring Lake and Sea Girt, to Manasquan over the Manasquan inlet, to Point Pleasant, Burrsville, Lakewood, Toms River, Tuckerton, and New Gretna, crossing the Mullica River to Port Republic.

From there the highway will touch Cologne, Egg Harbor, Mays Landing, Tuckahoe, Seaville, Cape May Courthouse, and end at Cape May Point.

Three bridges will be required for the proposed modifications of the present route, and until the consent of the War Department has been obtained the work cannot be started.

To Regulate Premiums.

Members of the executive committee of the New Jersey League of Building and Loan Associations voted at a meeting at Atlantic City yesterday to recommend the appointment of a special committee at the annual convention at Trenton in October to draft a bill regulating premiums to be charged by building and loan associations for the loan of money to shareholders.

Object to School Site.

Some of the residents of Terrace Park in Westfield do not want a schoolhouse in Broad street, near Stanley oval, and have been circulating a petition which will be presented to the Westfield Board of Education asking that the trustees refrain from placing a school in this section, which the residents claim is property restricted for residences only.

POLICE ASKED TO HUNT FOR W. P. SHAPTER.

Speculation as to the whereabouts of Walter P. Shapter, of Summit, has been renewed by the announcement that the New York police have been asked to look for Shapter and the suggestion that he may have been the victim of foul play. The report to the New York police was made Wednesday night, it is understood, by Frank Shapter, of Summit, brother of the missing man.

As already told, Walter P. Shapter disappeared from Summit July 7, saying he was going to Staten Island to look after some electrical work. He had about $5,000 with him at the time.

There is an equal lack of information as to the present whereabouts of Mrs. Andrew Wilson, who left Summit about the same time Shapter did. The Shapters and the Wilsons were friends.

Johnstown Flood Survivor Dies.

Salvadore Giglio, a barber, died suddenly last night at his home in First street, Elizabethport. He was one of the victims of the famous Johnstown flood, in which he lost his wife, three children, his home and $12,000. He and one child, a boy, escaped. He was for several years a barber on the steamboat St. John, of the Central Railroad, and shaved General Grant a number of times. He was fifty-four years old, a native of Italy and lived nine years in Elizabeth. He is survived by his second wife and five sons.

Doctor Stephen A. Aldrich, dentist, of Grant avenue and Fourth street, will spend the following two weeks at the Thousand Islands.

We desire to inform our Patrons that we received all sizes (from 34 to 44) of those Dutch collar Cross barr waists we had on Sale, and will be Sold again at 59c.

Pianos and Player-Pianos

MATHUSHEK & SON PLAYER-PIANO is the most advanced instrument of its type on the market today, and in its capacity for individual musical expression and for the artistic rendition of music, whether popular or classic, it cannot be surpassed, for it places the control of tempo and phrasing entirely in the hands of the performer, enabling him to give expression to his moods and emotions quite as if he were playing the piano manually.

Our experts have spent a number of years in producing this instrument, and every detail has been carefully thought out and perfected so that it may, without exaggeration, be described as the most perfect Player-Piano Mechanism in the world.

G. O. P. STATE COMMITTEE MEETS AT NEWARK AUG. 3.

State Chairman Murphy Wednesday issued a call for a meeting of the Republican State committee in Newark August 3. The session will be held in the rooms of the county committee, Halsey and Academy streets, and is for the primary purpose of getting matters in shape for the primaries and the Gubernatorial convention to be held in September.

It may be that Mr. Murphy will utilize the occasion for the purpose of issuing an address supplementary to the letter put out three weeks ago, in which the work of Congress was eulogized.

Voting Machine Elections.

The result of the Plainfield and Paterson votes on the voting machine issue Tuesday was what was expected. The almost unanimous decision against the machines shows how the people feel toward these voting contrivances. Plainfield has now been rid entirely of them, while Paterson has thrown them out in nineteen of the twenty-one districts where they had been placed. This ought to be enough in the way of an expression of opinion to satisfy the State Legislature that the people want the voting machines wiped out entirely. The question of honest or dishonest voting is not involved in the desire to put an end to the plan of voting by machinery. The people have tried the devices faithfully and have found them entirely unsatisfactory.—Elizabeth Journal.

more favored locations, where large streams have not entirely dried up, the low-lying meadows afford some grazing, but in general the cows are suffering for the lack of natural food, and in consequence are shortening up in the quantity of their daily milkings.

Other factors were told of, which have, the farmers say, contributed to the decrease in the milk supply, as contrasted with the claim to the contrary. The cost of production is one of these. Labor, feed, to say nothing of the price of cattle, are all higher, and, it was added in some quarters, the requirements of boards of health are items which increased the burden of the farmer and result in another cause for less milk—less cows.

Cattle of the better milk producing breeds, which sold five and six years ago at from $48 to $68, are now bringing $57 and over. Ninety dollars is not an excessive price to pay for a good milch cow. This is held on good authority to be one of the reasons why stock is not being imported as extensively as formerly.

The present exchange price for milk is three and one-half cents per quart, or $1.40 per forty-quart can. This is, as stated, a record for July. The farmers hold that at this price milk is not as high as it ought to be, but they are not in control of the situation. The Dairymen's League, formed several years ago, has now 50,000 cows subscribed and is forming a permanent organization. The league takes in dairymen in the Northern Jersey territory and in Orange county, N. Y.

Members of the league say it is up against a peculiar proposition in that it may be characterized as a combination in restraint of trade. It was the original plan of the leaguers to secure a sufficient number of cattle to be able to at least hold the balance of power so far as regulating the supply of milk is concerned, and lawyers are now said to be engaged in framing the organization so that it will not conflict with any statute prohibitions.

GOVERNOR TOUCHED BY INAUGURAL VISITOR

Governor Fort was asked the other day what had been his most amusing experience since becoming the chief executive of the state. He replied, and here it is:

"Probably the most amusing experience I have had during my period as Governor was one which occurred on the day I was inaugurated. During that afternoon I shook hands with several thousand persons, and as each one came to me he was introduced by a member of the military staff, who first asked each person his name.

"Along toward the end of the afternoon a rather seedy-looking individual came up to Col. Gilkyson, one of the aides, and said that he knew the Governor, and that there was no necessity for telling his name, so the colonel allowed him to take my hand.

"I had no recollection of having seen him before, and you can imagine my great surprise when he leaned over and whispered in my ear:

"'Governor, I want to congratulate you,' and then more softly said, 'Say, I'm broke, can you let me have the price of carfare to Freehold?'

"If there hadn't been so many people coming along the line, I might have helped him out, but the possibilities for future demands were too great."

Boy Dies From Overstudy.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Richmond returned to Passaic yesterday from Mountaindale, N. Y., with the body of their son, Harry, who died there suddenly on Tuesday night. Young Richmond was a member of the Passaic High School class of '11 and one of the leading athletes in the school. Overstudy and excessive indulgence in athletics had weakened his constitution, and on the advice of physicians he went to Mountaindale for a rest. He died from a hemorrhage of the brain.

Russell Miller, of Union street, is staying at Asbury Park.

The Crowning Glory of the Shoemaker's Art is to Produce Dainty Pumps For Pretty Feet.
It's something of a task to turn out a well balanced, true fitting pump with graceful lines at the instep and prettily poised at the heel. But our Shoemakers do it. Do it because they know how and have regular pump lasts to do it on. Search the town over and you'll not find smarter looking, better fitting pumps than ours, and, this is important, too, the price is no greater than elsewhere, oftentimes less.

BIG AVIATION MEET FOR $30,000 IN PRIZES

The greatest aviation meet in the United States will be held at Asbury Park from August 10 to August 20, under the auspices of the Asbury Park Aero and Motor Club. Prizes aggregating $30,000 will be competed for by the most famous aviators of this country and Europe, while a popular feature will be contests and exhibitions by well-known amateurs.

Some of the daring bird men who will enter the lists are Walter Brookins, the protegee of the Wright Brothers, who has developed into a prodigy; his driving partner, Coffyn; Hoxsey, Johnstone and La Chapple. In addition, it is expected that Glenn H. Curtiss will attempt to establish a new high speed record in a race twenty-five miles to sea and return for a $10,000 prize. A similar prize will be awarded to the aviator who beats the world's altitude record of 6,175 feet, recently made by Brookins at Atlantic City. Clifford B. Harmon has also been invited to give demonstrations with his machine.

Flights are scheduled for every day except Sunday, the 14th, from 4 to 6 p. m., and at such other times as weather conditions will permit. August 20th will be amateur day, and on August 13 a hot air balloon contest between Leo Stevens, of New York, and Frank Wilson, of Cincinnati, will take place.

A huge aviation field, delightfully situated at Interlaken, on the northwestern boundary of this city, and now being pushed to completion, will be the scene of the meet. The field will be enclosed by a 15 foot canvas fense nearly two miles in circumference, while a grand-stand with a seating capacity of 12,000 is being erected. Parking spaces capable of accommodating a thousand automobiles and twice as many carriages will also be provided. The free field, or concourse, will permit 30,000 more persons to witness the events.

There will also be a "midway" laid out on one of the broad avenues leading to the grounds, most of the attractions and side shows being those that are booked for the Interstate Fair at Trenton. The director-general of the meet will be Mahlon R. Margerum, who for several years has so successfully managed the Interstate Fair. The executive committe is headed by President J. M. Ralston, of the Seacoast National Bank, and Mayor T. Frank Appleby, and many of the most prominent citizens of Asbury Park and Ocean Grove are enthusiastically active in fostering the enterprise, which is being financed largely by popular subscription. Incidentally, it has been decided to make the general admission to the field fifty cents and to the grand-stand section one dollar. Spe cial transportation facilities will be provided by the railroads from all points in the East.

WHY DID SHE DO IT? IT HURT MORE THAN ONE.

There is no accounting for the caprices of extreme youth, especially the vagaries of the female mind in absolute babies. But as one woman said yesterday "what a shame!" and her companion exclaimed "isn't it dreadful."

It was all of the latter. A child, not more than eighteen months old, who lives with its parents not more than a mile from East Front street and Sandford avenue, sat complacently on the bottom step of the front porch yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock when another child of the same sex holding the discarded stick of an umbrella in her hand stealthily approached and without warning whipped the weapon around and inflicted a resounding smack on the upturned face of the younger child.

Only a miracle prevented the steel ferrule of the stick from penetrating the eye of the younger child and with a scream she fell on the step holding one little hand to the injured face and calling for "Mamma." The one who had inflicted the cruel blow sneaked down the side of the house and pretended not to know that anythin unusual had happened and in fact it is doubtful if the mother of the smaller child knew why her little one was weeping.

Who is going to fathom the impulse that will account for the action of the older child. But, as one of the passing women exclaimed, "what a shame!" and she didn't know that a reporter of The Daily Press witnessed the incident.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Fire destroyed an old barn on the Adam Muff property on Prospect avenue, Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon, about 5 o'clock. The blaze at one time threatened the entire neighborhood, the dry weather making the woodwork burn like tinder. Only the prompt response and good work of the Fire Department, under Chief Meyer, saved the adjoining properties from destruction; as it was, the Department had four fires going at once, the Muff house and Mrs. Benjamin Clause's house both catching fire at the same time from the heat of the blaze and falling embers. These two side fires were soon under control, and the loss on the two houses will not exceed $300. When Chief Meyer thought he had the trouble about over, Harper's mill across the street was found to be on fire, a burning ember having fallen on the roof. Quick work held this last fire to a small blaze, with only a few dollars damage. The cause of the fire is unknown, although it is thought that children must have been playing about the place with matches, or some one had carelessly dropped a cigar butt or match about the place. It cannot be laid to spontaneous combustion, as there was no hay or anything in the barn which would cause combustion.

The local ball team plays Bound Brook on the latter's grounds tomorrow afternoon. This will be the second of a series of games, the local team winning the first game by the score of 3—2. Deegan or Brewer will do the pitching for Manager Albert.

The new chemical engine had its first real tryout on the Muff fire yesterday and worked perfectly and it is safe to say that it saved its purchase price on its first alarm.

The Board of Education are having the usual summer repairs made on School Building No. 1. New gutters are being put in and other improvements made.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Stevens, of Front street, enjoyed a days' outing yesterday, trolley-riding around Staten Island.

Miss Anna Ryan, who has been visiting Miss Sadie Lee, of Front street, has returned to her home at Dunellen.

Lester Larnagan, of New York, is spending two weeks as the guest of Frank Lee, of Front street.

John Reick has returned from a stay of ten days with relatives in New York state.

Small Chimney Fire.

There was a small chimney fire this morning at 10 o'clock in a house at 1115 West Third street, owned by John C. Hafner. The damage was slight.

Letter-carrier James E. Bailey and wife, of Summit avenue, left today for a two weeks' vacation at Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Morrow, of Woodland avenue, left this afternoon for Kennebago Lake, Maine, where they will spend several weeks.

Miss Rose Rothberg, of West Third street, and her cousin, Miss Rose Davis, of Boston, will spend the next two weeks at Long Branch.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The local team will play the Marathon team, of Newark, again tomorrow on the home grounds. The score of the game of June 26 between these two teams was so close that it was hard to pick between the two teams as to which was the stronger. On tnat day the Dunellen club won by a score of 7 to 6.

According to Manager Adams, of the locals, the Marathons will bring a much stronger team to Dunellen tomorrow and the game ought to prove exciting. Three of the Marathons' best players were missing in the last game. However, Dunellen will make the visitors hustle to win.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION AT SARATOGA, N. Y

Representatives of the good roads movement from every part of the country met at Saratoga, yesterday, in the National Good Roads Congress, which continued in session until today. Congressman William Sulzer is presiding officer. In outlining the scope of the movement, he declared improved highways are of paramount importance to the commercial and farming interests of the country. He said:

"When we consider that the agricultural production of the United States for the past eleven years totals $70,000,000,000, a sum that staggers the imagination, and that it cost more to take this product from the farm to the railway station than from such station to the American and European markets; and when the saving in cost of moving the product of agriculture over good highways instead of bad would have built millions of miles of good roads, the incalculable waste of bad roads in this country is shown to be of such enormous proportions as to demand immediate reformation and the exercise of the wisest statesmanship."

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

E. G. Miller has presented the Paulsboro M. E. church with an individual communion set.

The entire family of Harry Rawling and two of the children of John Hackett, of Millville, who were stricken critically ill with ptomaine poisoning, contracted, it is thought, from impure milk, are said to be out of danger by the physicians.

Representative Eugene F. Kinead, of Jersey City, gave to Street and Water Commissioner John Heavey yesterday a check for $250 to be used in improving the playground at the old reservoir grounds in Manhattan avenue, Jersey City.

Wesley Simmons, of Millville, was struck and killed Wednesday night by an express train from Wildwood while walking across the tracks of the West Jersey Railroad. He was prominent in Cumberland county Republican politics and was a former sergeant-at-arms of the New Jersey Senate.

Three large barns on the stock farm of Edwin D. Rogers, near Medford, were burned Wednesday night. The fire started by spontaneous combustion in newly packed hay. Twenty horses were saved, among them several well-known trotters and pacers. One hundred tons of hay and ten tons of baled hay, wagons and harness were burned. The loss is about $8,000.

Supreme Court Justice Garrison, in a letter yesterday to Prosecutor Scovel, said that he would try the indictment against Joseph Schley for the murder of Peter Sykes on August 16. In all probability the trial of John Higgins and James J. Hoyle, indicted for aiding prisoners to escape and conspiracy, will take place on August 8. These defendants will be tried before Judge Joline, who will return from his vacation for this purpose.

Charles Jung, who is under $2,500 bail as a suspect in opium smuggling operations through the port of New York, was re-arrested in Atlantic City Wednesday by Isaac Wilson, customs inspector for New York, and a squad of federal agents. Tong rivalry is said to be back of the arrest, and it is asserted that Wah Kee, who is the rival for the Chinese leadership in Atlantic City, aided the government men in finding four cans of opium and a smoking outfit buried in a yard adjoining Jung's place. Police officials express the opinion that they were placed there by enemies of Jung, who was held for a hearing before Commissioner Morgan, in Camden.

Fears for the safety of the racing yacht Volat, owned by Edward Harris, of Atlantic City, which left for Holly Beach last Sunday and had not been heard from up to late Tuesday night, were dispelled yesterday. Harry Vail, senior member of the Marine Equipment Company of Philadelphia, who was in charge of the yacht when it started down the coast, returned yesterday and stated that the Volat ran upon a shoal in the Inside Waterway, near Sea Isle City, late Sunday afternoon, and remained a prisoner for eleven hours, in spite of all efforts to set it afloat.

Big Bones Found at Gladstone.

In the dooryard at the home of Mrs. Rachel Melick, at Gladstone, is what is considered a portion of the remains of a prehistoric skeleton. Italian laborers are busy cutting down the hill between Gladstone and Chester in the road which is being macadamized, and it was while at this work that the skeleton was found buried in a rock. It was in a limestone deposit and about ten or twelve feet below the surface. The object appears to be the leg and foot of a huge animal, and it was embedded in the solid rock when discovered.

What a New York Woman Said—

Every once in a while the Newark newspaper cartoonists regale us with pictures showing long streams of shoppers leaving Newark for New York, or "Old Father Newark" holding up his hands in dismay at our lack of railroad facilities.

These funny pictures are INTERESTING enough and GOOD enough as far as they go, but they don't show the OTHER SIDE of the Newark-New York question.

It isn't a case of "all going out and nothing coming in" by any means.

You would be surprised to know what a considerable business we do with Manhattanites and we suppose the OTHER Newark shops get their share, also.

Here's a fragment of conversation the writer overheard yesterday as he sauntered through a busy aisle:

"You in Newark, dear! Why, what possesses you?"

The person to whom this question was put, apparently a New York woman, replied: "Why I have been coming to Newark to shop for two or three years. I find that I can do ever so much better here. What I save more than pays me for my time and railroad fare. You'd be surprised, J————, if you knew how many New York women came to Newark. I'm for Bamberger's every time."

Significant, isn't it?

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

Feb. 13, 1873.

Here is the way in which brother A. J. Shampanore, of the White House Casket, gives notice that there will be a death in a certain man's family:

"Wm. Taylor wishes us to give notice to Ike Hall's dog, that if he ever comes near biting him again, he (the dog) will get a patch of sole leather on the under part of his bone mill.

Runaway—A horse attached to a common wagon, the property of Mr. Searle, became frightened while standing in front of French's Mill, on Monday last and ran away, taking his course through Cherry street, where he collided with the grocery wagon of Freeman & Philpitt, somewhat damaging that vehicle. The horse was finally stoped near Second street. The wagon to which the animal was attached was sadly demoralized. Mrs. Searle, who was driving the horse, received slight injuries by being thrown to the ground.

Mr. T. O. Doane has purchased the interest and route of Mr. T. T. Barrett in the milk business, and will supply old customers and as many new ones as will give him the opportunity with pure and fresh milk.

The recent revival in the various churches of this city seems to have had beneficial results, as was attested by the number of converts received into the churches last Sabbath. In the 2nd Presbyterian church, 62 persons were received into the church on confession, and 15 by letter. In the M. E. church, 40 were received on probation. In the 1st Baptist church, 16 were baptized, and in the 2nd Baptist 11 received the same rites.

A chance for parties desiring to purchase real estate is offered in the sale of the property belonging to Mrs. Caroline Ross, on Front street, opposite Elm place.

Feb. 27, 1873.

There are 111 boys and 79 girls at the Children's Home, Trenton.

Personal—We note the arrival in our city of our friend and former townsman, Alex. Titsworth, of the firm of Titsworth, Scott & Co., Montgomery, Ala. He looks as though the Southern climate agreed with him.

Mr. Wm. D. Maxson arrived home on Friday last from his trip to Mexico, whither he went some months since on business. We are promised some items in reference to his journey and sojourn there, which we shall lay before our readers shortly.

On Sunday, 9th inst., the store of Messrs. T. J. Hines & Co., in Flagg's Block, was burglariously entered and a quantity of penknives stolen therefrom. At the same time J. M. C. Smith's hardware store, next door, was also entered and $1.50 in cash taken. Chief Gilhies, after working up the case, on Tuesday last arrested five young lads named respectively, Frank Moncton, Lee Young, Hight Young, Rob Skinner alias Rob Walker, and Tom Taby. One of them admitted throwing away three of the knives out of a car window, between this city and Westfield, as he was on his way to the latter place a few days after the robbery, he being afraid they would be found upon him.

New Firm—As will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, Mr. Wm. Swaim has retired from he firm of Swaim & Son, leaving the business to his sons, who will continue at the old place, where may always be found a complete stock of paints, oils and painters' materials. Swaim Bros. are also agents for the Patent Enamel Paint Company.

Fifty dollars reward and no questions asked is what we will pay to anyone who will find a place in this city where a finer assortment of fancy goods and trimmings are for sale at lower rates than at Peck's.

So Ephemereal!

It fadeth from my longing view,
Each hour it groweth less;
It passeth like the morning dew
Beneath the sunny stress.
I ope the casket where it lies—
It shrinketh in a trice!
Where is the treasure that I prize—
My fifty pounds of ice?

The Courage of Captain Plum

By JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD

Illustrations by Magnus G. Kettner

(Copyright 1908 by Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"A good many years ago," he said, as if speaking to himself, "I loved a girl—like Marion, and she loved me—as Marion loves you. Her people were Mormons, and they went to Kirtland—and I followed them. We planned to escape and go east, for my Jean was good and beautiful, and hated the Mormons as I hated them. But they caught us and — thought — they — killed—"

The old man's lips twitched and a convulsive shudder shook his body.

"When everything came back to me I was older—much older," he went on. "My hair was white. I was like an old man. My people had found me and they told me that I had been mad for three years. Nat—mad—mad—mad! and that a great surgeon had operated on my head, where they struck me—and brought me back to reason. Nat—Nat—" He strained to raise himself, gasping excitedly: "God, I was like you then, Nat! I went back to fight for my Jean. She was gone. Nobody knew me, for I was an old man. I hunted from settlement to settlement. In my madness I became a Mormon, for vengeance—in hope of finding her. I was rich, and I became powerful. I was made an elder because of my gold. Then I found—"

A moan trembled on the old man's lips.

"—they had forced her to marry—the son of a Mormon—"

He stopped, and for a moment his eyes seemed filling with the glazed shadows of death. He roused himself almost fiercely.

"But he loved my Jean, Nat—he loved her as I loved her—and he was a good man!" he whispered shrilly. "Quick—quick—I must tell you—they had tried to escape from Missouri and the Danites killed him—and Joseph Smith wanted Jean and at the last moment she killed herself to save her honor—as—Marion—was going—to—do, and she left two children—"

He coughed and blood flecked his lips.

"She left—Marion and Neil!"

He sank back, ashen white and still, and with a cry Nathaniel turned to the lieutenant. The officer ran forward with a flask in his hand.

"Give him this!"

The touch of liquor to Obadiah's lips revived him. He whispered weakly:

"The children, Nat—I tried to find them—and years after—I did—in Nauvoo. The man and woman who had killed the father in their own house had taken them and were raising them as their own. I went mad! Vengeance—vengeance—I lived for it, year after year. I wanted the children—but if I took them all would be lost. I followed them, watched them, loved them—and they loved me. I would wait—wait—until my vengeance would fall like the hand of God, and then I would free them, and tell them how beautiful their mother was. When Joseph Smith was killed and the split came the old folks followed Strang—and I—I, too—"

He rested a moment, breathing heavily.

"I brought my Jean with me and buried her up there on the hill—the middle grave, Nat, the middle grave—Marion's mother."

Nathaniel pressed the liquor to the old man's lips again.

"My vengeance was at hand—I was almost ready—when Strang learned a part of the secret," he continued with an effort. "He found the old people were murderers. When Marion would not become his wife he told her what they had done. He showed her the evidence! He threatened them with death unless Marion became his wife. His sheriffs watched them night and day. He named the hour of their doom—unless Marion yielded to him. And to save them, her supposed parents—to keep the terrible knowledge of their crime from Neil—Marion—was—going—to—sacrifice—herself—when—"

Again he stopped. His breath was coming more faintly.

"I understand," whispered Nathaniel. "I understand—"

Obadiah's dimming eyes gazed at him steadily.

"I thought my vengeance would come—in time—to save her, Nat. But it failed. I knew of one other way and when all seemed lost—I took it. I killed the old people—the murderers of her father—of my Jean! I knew that would destroy Strang's power—"

In a sudden spasm of strength he lifted his head. His voice came in a hoarse, excited whisper.

"You won't tell Marion—you won't tell Marion that I killed them—"

"No—never."

Obadiah fell back with a relieved sigh. After a moment he added.

"In a chest in the cabin there is a letter for Marion. It tells her about her mother—and the gold there—is for her—and Neil—"

His eyes closed. A shudder passed through his form.

"Marion—" he breathed. "Marion!"

Nathaniel rose to his feet and ran to the cabin door.

"Marion!" he called.

Blinding tears shut out the vision of the girl from his eyes. He pointed, looking from her, and she, knowing what he meant, sped past him to the old councilor.

In the great low room in which Obadiah Price had spent so many years planning his vengeance Captain Plum waited.

After a time, the girl came back. There was great pain in her voice as she stretched out her arms to him blindly, sobbing his name.

"Gone—gone—they're all gone now—but Neil!"

Nathaniel held out his arms.

"Only Neil,"—he cried, "only Neil—Marion—?"

"And you—you—you—"

Her arms were around his neck, he held her throbbing against his breast.

"And you—"

She raised her face, glorious in its love.

"If you want me—still."

And he whispered:

"For ever and for ever!"

THE END.

The "Square-Pot" of the
BOYNTON FURNACE
Solves the House Heating Problem

We are saying a great deal about the square fire pot in our furnaces, hot water heaters and boilers — and with reason, for it is the actual solution of the house heating problem.

PATENTED

Our "square pot" (shown here) has the largest grate surface—consequently admits most air to the fire.

Its perpendicular corners and corrugated sides offer least resistance to clearing — hence an accumulation of dead ashes and clinkers is an unknown thing in a BOYNTON. That's why a BOYNTON fire is a live fire, and full of intense heat.

This "square pot" is our exclusive patent and is found in no other line of heaters. Other BOYNTON "features" are also vast improvements over the kinds most commonly in use.

Ask the BOYNTON man in your town.

NEVADA DIVORCE DECREE TESTED IN NEW JERSEY

The suit for separate maintenance brought by Mrs. Minnie Lister against George T. Lister, and pending the trial of which Vice Chancellor Garrison at Jersey City has granted Mrs. Lister $5 a week for the support of her son, is another case in which the Court of Chancery is asked to determine the validity in this State of a divorce decree granted in Nevada. Should Mrs. Lister be successful in her suit her husband will have to support two wives, he having married again after the disputed decree of the Nevada court was granted.

The defendant in this suit was formerly the president of the Vacuum Renovating Company of New York and had offices at 546 Fifth avenue, heard directly from him, but that married December 18, 1890, at Patterson, and after a residence of eighteen months in that place moved to Hoboken, where they lived at 718 Hudson street. They have one child, Roy J. Lister, who is a high honor student at Stevens Institute.

In the bill for separate maintenance filed by Mrs. Lister she sets forth that she and her husband lived happily together until October, 1907, when, she charges, her husband came to her with an offer of $4,000 if she would obtain a divorce from him. Upon her refusal to consider any such proposition, she says, he treated her with indefference and cruelty and in the following month remained away from home for three weeks. She asserts he threatened and entreated her at various times after this to bring about a divorce, but in the month of December appeared to have a change of mind and told her that his treatment from then on would be better. She says he confessed that there was a woman in the case; that he was afraid she would come to the house and create a scene.

After other complications, incident to which Mr. and Mrs. Lister went to Newark for a short time to escape from what Mrs. Lister charges a threatened visit of the woman to their home, the couple again became estranged, and January 2, 1908, Lister left home. His wife says that since she went to his New York office that night and obtained $25 from him she has not seen him nor Langford House.
her son received letters from Reno, Nev., and other places.

Celebrates 100th Birthday.

Haddonfield was kept busy yesterday in celebrating the one hundredth birthday of Mrs. Mary Thackara, familiarly known as "Aunt Mary Thackara," and the oldest resident in this section of the country. From early morning until late last night a steady stream of postals, went to the Potter street home of the centenarian. Samuel Thackara, husband of the aged woman, who died in 1874 when eighty years old, was a veteran of the War of 1812.

NO BOOMS FOR ASSEMBLY IN THE MINORITY PARTY

There is not the slightest indication at the present time as to who the men are who will be chosen to make up the Democratic Assembly ticket. None of the leaders, so far as can be learned, are making a stir to find good timber and the slate will probably remain in its present unfilled condition until the Democratic outing, which will be held on Wednesday, August 17.

Apparently there are few Democrats who are in any way anxious to get in the Assembly race and the few who are and who could be counted upon to accept are not cote-getters and consequently not the kind of candidates the leaders care to run. The Democratic Assembly ticket, as in former years, will probably remain unprepared until the eleventh hour. The outing in August occurs one week before the time for the filing of petitions, which must be filed at the office of the County Clerk by August 24. The necessity for getting on the job at the earliest possible moment has apparently not been realized up to date.

Abram P. Morris, of Union, who was an Assembly candidate last year, prominent local Democrats believe, will run again. Mr. Morris ran on the ticket last year with Joseph T. Hague and Franklin Halliday. John Woodruff, a prominent Democratic worker in the First ward in Elizabeth, and identified with the Independent Social Club of that ward, has also been mentioned as a candidate. Woodruff is popular in the downtown wards in Elizabeth, and a speaker of ability. He is a member of several large fraternal organizations.

For Congress, County Chairman W. E. Tuttle is the only Democrat who has been prominently mentioned. He will probably be the candidate.

HANGS HIMSELF IN CELL.

Former Jersey Politician Had Been Committed for Sanity Test.

Harry Reed, a bartender, who recently threatened City Collector Robert Davis as Davis was about to enter St. Peter's Roman Catholic church in Jersey City, committed suicide yesterday afternoon in the Hudson County Jail by hanging himself with a towel from one of the bunks in his cell. He was committed to jail to be examined as to his sanity the morning he accosted Davis and asked him for money. On being refused he threatened to kill the collector, and was arrested.

Reed had lived for several years in Jersey City and figured in political fights. He went to Davis, who is the Democratic leader in Hudson county, several times, and obtained money. He finally became so troublesome, it is said, that Davis was obliged to call a halt.

PERSONAL.

E. M. Snyder and family, of Prospect avenue, left today for Boston.

Letter-carrier F. W. Bailey and wife, of Duer street, left today for a visit in Beverley, N. J.

A. V. Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, leaves tomorrow for Selkirk Beach, where he will be the guest of F. G. Sherman for the next two weeks.

Mrs. J. H. Carman and her son, L. Garthwaite Carman, of Watchung avenue, have gone to Cape Porpoise, Maine, where they will stop at the Langsfort House.

Russell Vroom, son of P. A. Vroom, of Stone street, has returned from a two weeks' visit in North Branch, Somerset county. He visited his uncle, Peter Vroom, and his cousin, James Woods.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Kenney and family, of Sandford avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kenney, of Watchung avenue, will leave on Monday for Kenney Villa, Lake Hopatcong, where they will spend the month of August.

Victory for Chalmers "30" in Glidden Tour a Victory for the Public as Well as for the Car

The Contest Board of the American Automobile Association has declared the Chalmers "30" car, entry No. 5, driven by William Bolger, winner of the 1910 Glidden Tour, and has awarded the Glidden Trophy to the Chalmers Motor Company.

Think what this means. The Glidden Tour—the most famous and most strenuous reliability contest for motor cars in the world—won by a stock touring car—a duplicate of which you can buy for $1,500.

Think what this means to automobile buyers. Those who have said: "Wait until we can buy a real car for a medium price, then we'll have one," need wait no longer. We know of no stronger proofs that could be given that it is now possible to buy a real car at a medium price than the Chalmers "30" has given in the past two years—the Glidden victory being the crowning triumph.

All that any car can do this car has done. In fact it has proved conclusively that it can do more than most cars can do, for it has succeeded where others have failed.

In every Glidden Tour some car has won pre-eminence, and some car was bound to gain pre-eminence in this year's tour. But always before a car costing $4,000 or more has been the winner.

That a car costing only $1,500, the lowest priced car in the tour with only one exception, should win the most trying automobile contest ever held is more than a sensation—it is a revolution—and the effects of it will be felt in the automobile business for many a day to come.

This tour is not only a victory for the Chalmers Motor Company. It is a victory for the public—the public, which is always demanding of the manufacturer—not high priced cars, not low priced cars—but good cars at right prices—cars with an unusual dollar for dollar value in them—the utmost-value-for-the-price kind of cars.

* * * * * * * * * *

Of all the Glidden tours yet held, that of 1910 was the longest, and by far the hardest. None except those who made the trip will ever know of the many obstacles met and overcome in this 2,851-mile contest, which started at Cincinnati and went "by way of Dallas, Texas," through thirteen states to Chicago.

Words and pictures cannot make plain the wracking cobblestone roads of Kentucky—the stump-studded forest trails of the Tennessee mountains— the swamps of Arkansas—the deep and treacherous sands of Texas—the mud of Kansas, the bridgeless southern streams, or the sweltering heat that punished cars and men alike.

One day in Arkansas the Chalmers "30" was compelled to cover sixty continuous miles on first and second speed, yet it never over-heated.

In Oklahoma all the cars had to run for miles along the railroad over the ties. How long would any machine in the world, except an automobile, withstand such punishment?

Dal Lewis, who has laid out the route for every Glidden Tour, says that no other could even compare in hardship with the 1910 tour.

The final outcome of the contest was predicted when the "30" was the last car to surrender its perfect score. It had a perfect score for five terrific days after every other car on the tour had been penalized.

It is the opinion of the experts who made this tour that no car in the world could have completed it with a perfect score.

Yet from Cincinnati to Louisville—to Nashville—to Sheffield, Ala.—to Memphis—to Little Rock—to Hot Springs—to Texarkana—to Dallas—to Lawton, Oklahoma—to Oklahoma City—to Wichita, Kansas—eleven consecutive days out of the sixteen—through the hardest part of the trip—not a single point could be assessed against the Chalmers "30," although a representative of a competing company was in the car every minute trying to find some fault on which a penalty could be assessed.

At Dallas local motorists offered to wager 10 to 1 that this car could not retain its perfect score until noon of that day because of the deep sand it would have to drag through en route to the noon control, but it did.

Furthermore, the Chalmers "30" made a better showing in the final technical test than any of its rivals. In this important examination it was assessed only 75 points as against 84 for its nearest competitor.

The "30" was not penalized on any fundamental feature of construction, not on motor, or clutch, or transmission, or on the frame, or the wheels, or axles or springs; only on minor things, such as body bolts, shackles, muffler, and fender irons.

It still had a brake good enough to stop it within the required 50 feet.

* * * * * * * * * *

The car which made this wonderful showing is absolutely a stock car in every respect—not even our competitors have questioned that. It is the same car you can buy in any Chalmers dealer's salesroom for $1,500.

In winning the Glidden Tour the Chalmers "30" has only maintained a record it had already established. For this car has never been defeated in any important contest of speed and endurance by a car of its own power and price class. It has repeatedly defeated cars of much higher price and greater power in all kinds of contests.

Think of the Indiana trophy race, the Merrimac Valley trophy, the Santa Monica race, the Massapequa trophy in the Vanderbilt race, won by setting a new world's speed record; the showing at Atlanta, where it finished first and second in every event entered for a week, winning the Candler trophy by doing 120 miles in 117 minutes; the Denver to Mexica City trip; the gruelling test of 208 miles a day for 100 successive days; path-finding for the 1910 Glidden Tour, and, finally, winning the Tour. What other stock car in the world, at any price, has such a record as this?

* * * * * * * * * *

What better car can you want than a Chalmers "30" at $1,500? What more can you buy with any amount of money? You could buy a seven-passenger car, or you could buy more power. That is all. If you want a seven-passenger car, all right. As for more power, you can get it if you want to pay for it, but you do not need it on any car not carrying more than five.

The Chalmers "30" which won the Glidden Tour carried four passengers and baggage over every mile of the route. It had power enough to pull through streams, through swamps and through sand. It had speed enough to make every control on time; it has as much speed as any one can use.

And in addition to endurance and reliability you cannot buy more beauty, either of line or finish, than you get in a Chalmers "30." No car, no matter what the price, affords more eye-delight than the Chalmers.

What more do you want, then, in a car, than you can get in the Chalmers?

* * * * * * * * * *

There has been much talk lately about automobile extravagance, about people spending too much money on automobiles. No man need feel that he is guilty of extravagance in buying a Chalmers "30" at $1,500. It would be hard for him to invest the same amount of money in any better way. A car like this will treble the time of any business man. It means greater efficiency in business, and, at the same time, more time away from business. It means healthful enjoyment for all the family, too.

The automobile has come to stay. It is a sign of progress. It is a necessary part of modern civilization, and the people will no more give up the motor car than they will tear down trolley wires and again hitch horses to the street cars.

The automobile business is here to stay, and for those companies which have given full value for the prices asked this business is as sound as the Rock of Gibraltar, and will remain so for a long, long time to come.

Although some people predict this is going to be a slack year, our sales records do not show any support of the prediction. The increased volume of our business since we announced our 1911 cars has been a surprise to us.

This proves to us that we have been on the right track all the time; first, in not trying to build too many cars, but in building the limited number we have built just as well as they could possibly be built; second, in selling these cars at medium prices and at a reasonable margin of profit to ourselves; third, in taking care of our owners just as well as we knew how after the cars had been sold.

* * * * * * * * * *

After all, automobiles are built for those who buy them; and Glidden Tours are conducted for the benefit of the very same people. The thousands who contemplate buying cars during the 1911 season have had nearly all the real big questions answered by the Glidden Tour—the question of design, of materials, workmanship, endurance, reliability.

The price you already know, so the question of appearance is about the only one left. As to that, the new 1911 models will be on exhibition at the local show rooms within a very short time.

We invite you to examine them. If the lines, the color, the finish suit you, you can safely buy one, for, remember—it's a Chalmers—the car that won the most trying test that automobiles ever were put to—the Glidden Tour of 1910.

LEWIS LEADS IN RACE

Banking Commissioner Strong for Gubernatorial Nomination, It Is Said.

NOT A SMOOTH ROAD FOR HIM.

John Kean, Notwithstanding All Opposition, Appears to Have Inside Track For Winning Another Term.

Trenton, July 30.—With primary day only six weeks off, Banking and Insurance Commissioner Vivian M. Lewis, of Paterson, continues to lead in the race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. The fact that he seems to be the most formidable aspirant in the Republican camp has its political disadvantages as well as advantages. Mr. Lewis is striving to keep himself free from alliances with candidates for the United States Senatorship toga, but he is not having an altogether smooth road to travel in this direction. For instance, whisperings float down to the State House from Essex county that former Governor Franklin Murphy, who wants to succeed John Kean in the Senate at Washington, is manuevering to link his political fortunes with those of Mr. Lewis.

The former Governor believes that a combination between himself and the Banking and Insurance Commissioner would vastly enhance the strength of their respective political booms. Mr. Murphy has assured Mr. Lewis that he (Murphy) will be able to control the Essex county delegation to the State convention, and these delegates will rally to the Lewis standard if the Passaic man will agree to help swing the majority of the Legislature into line next winter for the former Governor as an aspirant for the United States Senatorship.

Although Mr. Lewis declines to discuss the subject, it is well-known that the Murphy proposition has been put up to the former. Mr. Lewis, however, holds aloof from any deals to tie up his Gubernatorial chances with Senatorial candidacies.

Former Assemblyman William P. Martin, of Newark, laughs at the claim of former Governor Murphy that he will have the Essex county delegation to the State convention at his beck and call. As the Progressive candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination, Mr. Martin declares that the result of the primary election will show that the "regulars," as Mr. Murphy's factionists are called, will be in the minority among the Essex county delegates to the State convention. Mr. Martin says that the Progressives are better organized in Essex county than ever before, and that thousands of commuters in the Oranges and elsewhere, angered by the raise in the commutation rates and failing to secure relief through laws enacted by the "regulars," will turn against the latter on primary day and elect delegates pledged to the Martin candidacy. Similar conditions prevail in other commuting counties, says Mr. Martin. The Progressives are very confident of lining up a bulk of the Hudson county delegates for Mr. Martin.

The candidacy of Pierre P. Garven, the Hudson county prosecutor of pleas, who made it hot for the "Beef Trust" last winter and spring, and who has avowed himself a Gubernatorial candidate on a Progressive declaration of political principles, is not taken seriously by the "new idea" people.

Unless there is an unexpected shifting of support, the ambition of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, to occupy the office of chief executive will not be satisfied this year. While Somerset county will present his name to the State convention, it will be largely in the way of keeping his name to the front with a view to a nomination three years hence.

All the politicians are interested in what David Baird, of Camden, is going to do. For a certainty "Uncle Davy" says only one thing—"I am in the race to be elected United States Senator, and I'll stay in until the finish." Of course, "Uncle Davy" carries South Jersey around in his vest pocket, politically speaking. It makes him mighty interesting and important. All South Jersey apparently yields to the Camden gentleman when it comes down to a question of what is to be done in Republican politics. It is generally believed that Mr. Baird favors Commissioner Lewis for Governor, but he hasn't said so out in the open.

When one gets right down to the hard pan of opinions among the politically sagacious on the question of the Senatorship, the impression is gathered that John Kean, notwithstanding all of the opposition, has the

JAMES J. CORBETT WITH HONEY BOYS

Arrangements have been definitely concluded by which James J. Corbett will become a member of George Evans' Honey Boy Minstrels the coming season. Contracts have been signed and when the Honey Boys are seen at the Plainfield theatre on Wednesday evening, August 10, the audience will see the first appearance on any stage of James J. Corbett in black face.

He will act as the interlocutor of the show and in the scenic bower of "The Crimson Trellis" first part, where all is black face as in the good old days, Mr. Corbett will have to black up just the same as "Bones" and "Tambo." Later on during the performance he will be seen in his famous monologue in which he will present a model of sartorial elegance and in white face tell his hearers all about the recent quarrel in Reno.

The engagement of James J. Corbett with the Honey Boy Minstrels is without a question the record contract for an interlocutor in the world's history of minstrelsy, his salary being sufficient to pay the entire expense of some of the minstrel shows in the good old days. Corbett has an unusually interesting talk prepared on the affair at Reno and his engagement at the American Music Hall Roof in New York has packed its capacity for the past three weeks. Plainfield will be second to New York in hearing Mr. Corbett.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS ADD TO BABY CAMP FUND

Two little girls, of the borough, Evelyn Bacon and Ruth Martin, came into the Daily Press office this morning with a contribution of five dollars for the Baby Camp fund. The money was raised by the girls at an ice cream festival, which was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Ruth Martin, 8 Craig Place. Ice cream, cake, candy, and lemonade were sold from two o'clock until six. The lawn was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting. The girls were assisted in their work by Mrs. John Harsell, Mrs. J. G. Martin and Mrs. W. E. Bacon.

This contribution brings the total up to $114.00, as follows:

Received to date:

Seventh-Day Baptist church Women's Society for Christian Work	$10.00
Mrs. Remsen Taylor	10.00
Mrs. A. R. Sheppard	5.00

THREW GREEN APPLES BUT DIDN'T MEAN IT.

A quartet of small boys were brought before Judge William N. Runyon in the city court this morning charged with having been annoying pedestrians along Watchung avenue near Fourth street by pelting them with unripe apples.

The four youngsters, none of whom was over eleven years old, did not deny throwing the fruit, but claimed that they were using one or two apples in lieu of a baseball and that one of the people passing was accidentally struck. One little fellow acknowledged that he did throw an apple at one of his boy friends, but it was not done with malicious intent.

All four told the judge that they were sorry that they had unwittingly caused anybody trouble and promised to never repeat the offense. They were dismissed.

Dismissed by Justice Snape.

The complaint of Mary Broskcom, of the borough, against Hervey Vroom, of this city, which was brought up yesterday before Justice of the Peace Snape was dismissed in accordance with the new state law. A new complaint will be filed and the case heard before Recorder ination. Newell's percentage was Dolliver. Vroom was represented by Counsellor Wm. G. DeMeza.

HOME FROM STATE CAMP

Y. M. C. A. Boys Return from Outing at Lake Wawayanda.

WERE SUCCESSFUL IN SPORTS.

Joseph Sattells, Jr., Wins Quoit Championship—Boys Pass Examination As Life Savers.

After a pleasant vacation and with a goodly addition of avoidupois on them, sixteen boys of the local Y. M. C. A. returned home yesterday afternoon in company with C. E. Bingaman, George L. Listman and Charles Line, directors in the Plainfield association, from the Y. M. C. A. state camp at Lake Wawayanda.

This is the largest delegation that has represented Plainfield at the camp in many years. In all contests and meets with the associations from other cities in the State, the local boys showed up nobly, not only reflecting credit upon themselves but also upholding the name of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The success of the boys from this city is largely due to their efficient coaching, training and organization at the hands of Mr. Bingaman, the boys' work secretary of the city association. Each member of the local delegation entered into the camp spirit with unusual energy and this was largely responsible for the success of the state camp this year.

The Plainfield boys made themselves useful about the camp as well as having a good time. A ten foot well was dug and built by the local boys on the main land to supply the camp with water. The work was done under the direction of Mr. Bingaman. The camp has named the spot, "Plainfield Well." In addition to this, three rustic benches were made by the Plainfield delegation and the corner, in which they are placed, is known as the "Plainfield Corner." A fund was also started by the boys themselves to purchase some useful article for the camp next year.

In the athletic events at the camp, Plainfield took several honors. Joseph Sattells, Jr., won the championship of the second section at quoits, with Franklin Newell and Gilbert Lewis qualifying in the finals. Joseph Sattells will compete in the state tournament in a few weeks for the quoit championship of the state camp.

Franklin Newell, Craig Blair and George Leighs and Ray Manley passed the Volunteer Life Saving examination. Newell's percentage was ninety-seven, which is an excellent record, considering the difficult examination. Hoyt Thompkinson and Charles Moraller were given buttons for having learned to swim at least twenty-five yards. Joseph Sattells, Jr., Benjamin Cooley, Robert Duuy, and Hoyt Tompkinson received buttons for having learned to dive. Gilbert Lewis and James McNamee were given gold buttons for each teaching one fellow to swim.

During the whole encampment the boys enjoyed the best of health and the average increase in weight was five pounds. Every member of the party has a heavy coat of tan by which to remember the experience.

Those who camped for four weeks are: Benjamin Cooley, Robert Duuy, Hoyt Tompkinson, Russell Lee and Joseph Sattells, Jr. In the two weeks party were: Craig Blair, Russell Berrien, Irving Manley, Raymond Manley, Richard Pennock, Franklin Newell, Collis Case, Gilbert Lewis, Charles Moraller, James McNamee and George Leighs.

Communion at Warren Chapel.

The regular communion service will be held at Warren chapel, tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, will be in charge for the last time prior to his vacation. The supplies at Warren chapel during Mr. McKelvey's absence will be as follows: August 7 Rev. C. W. F. Attlee; 14, Rev. Dr. F. A. Holtzhauser; 21, open; 28, Rev. F. B. Newman, of Trenton.

The Carnival at Oak Tree.

There will be a carnival on the grounds of the Marconnier chapel at Oak Tree on the evenings of August 23 and 24 for the benefit of the chapel. Besides moving pictures there will be a shooting gallery and a typical country store. There will be refreshments of all kinds for sale on the grounds, and lots of good music. Everybody will be welcome.

GAVE EUCHRE FOR ST. MARY'S CONVENT

Mrs. John Walsh, of 307 Madison avenue, gave a euchre party and lawn fete at her home, last night, for the benefit of St. Mary's Convent. The grounds were illuminated with one hundred electric lights and Japanese lanterns and decorated with numerous large flags and bunting.

A profusion of cut flowers and potted plants were used in the decorative scheme. A feature of the affair was Mme. Tomi, the gypsy wonder, who revealed the past, present and future to many delighted patrons. There were twenty-five handsome awards, after which dancing was enjoyed. Music was furnished by Allen Squires' orchestra.

Rev. Father Bogan was an honored guest and he read the rules of the games and otherwise entered into the spirit of the enjoyable occasion.

AMEDEO CHURCH RUN DOWN BY AN AUTO

Amedeo Church, a shoemaker in Watchung, was badly injured yesterday afternoon by being run down by an automobile. He was brought to the office of Dr. Pittis in this city, where his wounds were dressed. His injuries consisted of severe lacerations in the face and neck. Church was able to be about today.

There was a rumor around town this morning that Church had attempted suicide early this morning. But the report was without foundation. The rumor started from the fact that Church was seen in Plainfield yesterday in an intoxicated condition and with his head done up in bandages. It is said that he threatened to shoot himself and so, when the ambulance was seen going in the direction of Watchung at five o'clock this morning by those who had heard about Church, it was immediately supposed that he had carried out his threat. The ambulance had been summoned, however, for another case entirely.

TROLLEYS HELD UP BY DISABLED TRUCK

Traffic was tied up for some time this morning at Richmond and Second streets, when one of the four horse trucks, belonging to the Hand Storage Company, broke down. The truck was carrying a sixteen-ton drop forge base from the Spicer Universal Joint Company's plant on Fourth street out to its new plant at South Plainfield. In turning into Richmond stret from Second street, one of the pieces of flagging, which forms the gutter at this corner, broke under the weight and let one of the truck's wheels drop. This caused the breaking of the spring on the truck. The trolley service was blocked for half an hour when the broken wagon was moved out off the way.

The route over Richmond street had to be taken by the truck on account of the weakness of the other bridges which span Cedarbrook.

JUNIORS ENJOY READING OF "LES MISERABLES."

The Junior Club of the Young Women's Christian Association held its regular Friday night meeting in the association parlors last night. Mrs. Jane B. Hart, of Watchung avenue, entertained the club, finishing the story of "Les Miserables," which she started to relate a week ago. Mrs. Hart's description of the famous French novel was much enjoyed by the club members.

A party for Friday evening, August 12, is being planned by the juniors. All the club is urged to be present.

Company K to Get Pay.

Company K, Second Regiment, will assemble in the armory on next Wednesday at 8 o'clock to receive their pay for their work in the recent maneuvres at Gettysburg. The order calling for this meeting is signed by Captain Kitchell and the soldier lads are expected to have all their accoutrements ready to turn in at that time.

Funeral of Mrs. John Powers.

The funeral services of Mrs. John Powers were held at 9 o'clock this morning from St. Joseph's church, Rev. Father W. H. Miller, the pastor, officiating. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

WHO OWNS THE LICENSE?

Duker Bought It for the Company But Later Withdrew and Left the Tags.

FORMER HEAD MUST EXPLAIN.

They Sell Bananas, But As to Who Has the Right Is a Mystery—Newark Firm Split As to Ownership of Permit.

If George Duker owns the license card and his partners in the firm of Duker and Company own the tin license tags, who has the right to sell the bananas?

That is the question which will have to be adjudicated by Judge William N. Runyon when Mr. Duker presents himself in the City court, if he ever does.

Several of Duker's partners were in the court room this morning hoping that Duker would show up and explain his action in keeping the blue card receipts issued with each license and using it to peddle bananas in this city, while his former partners are haled to court for not having the card.

So far as could be learned this morning Duker was a member of the firm of Duker & Co., but withdrew several weeks ago to go it a'one. Whether he sold out to his partners or not is a moot question, but the fact remains that he is trading with the blue card while the other four members of the firm are trying to carry on business with the tin tags.

Of course it is contrary to the ordinance for two persons to trade separately with but one license, and it is necessary to determine who has the right to us the license which will become plain when Duker comes forward with his story. All the other members of the original firm were in court this morning, but Duker failed to put in an appearance.

Judge Runyon decided that the other members of the firm, of which Joseph Massino is the head, could sell their bananas until Duker had been apprehended and explanations made. Massino declares that Duker is no longer a member of the company and that the company want the original license, as they have bought out Duker's interests. The firm, which is a Newark concern, was represented by W. V. Nash, Jr.

REV. DR. ANDERSON TO SPEAK AT NETHERWOOD CAMP.

At the Netherwood Fresh Air Camp tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church will be the speaker. There will be special music, Miss Laura Gesswein and Miss Jessie Haynes being the soloists.

These meetings are unusually interesting, and it is wonderful to see how the children from the East Side of New York join in these services and how vigorously they sing the gospel hymns. It is well worth anybody's while to attend and by being present add encouragement to the workers who are doing so much for the little ones and their mothers. Miss Sarah Curry, who is in charge of the camp, earnestly hopes that the people of this city will help the work along by attending the services.

Union Service at First M. E.

The union service of the First Baptist, Trinity Reformed, First Presbyterian and First M. E. churches will be held tomorrow night at the First M. E. church, and Rev. Dr. Pogson a well-known Baptist clergyman of New York, will preach. A feature of this service will be the music to be furnished by the quartet choir of Trinity Reformed church.

Dunellen Bank Exempt.

As the system of assessing bank stock is fixed by law on the amount of capital surplus and undivided profits added together, from which is deducted the taxable property and its exempt securities in Middlesex county, the First National Bank, of Dunellen, will not be taxed for anything this year. This is the edict of the Middlesex County Board of Taxation.

Held Ritual Service.

After the religious services at the funeral of Ellis Simonson, at his late home, 26 Watchung avenue, last evening, Somerset Council, No. 104, conducted the services provided by their ritual, with George Watts as councillor and P. H. Latourette as chaplain. The regular business meeting of the lodge was held after the funeral services in the lodge room.

Herbert Grant and Miss Hazel Grant, of Randolph road, will return from the Adirondacks this evening.

REFUSES OVERTURES OF CO.; GOES TO COUNTY JAIL

Failing to secure a bondsman, Peter Baker, the alleged embezzler of funds of the Public Service Corporation, was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth, this morning.

Yesterday afternoon Baker was given a final chance to make an effort in his own behalf, but it seemed that he did not care to do it. Superintendent W. H. Chandler, of the Newark office, who came here yesterday, offered inducements to Baker to divulge the amounts and names of those from whom he had secured payments of bills of the company, but Baker replied indifferently to the propositions put to him and laid blame upon officials of the company instead of accepting their overtures for mitigating the alleged crime.

Mr. Chandler, it is said, offered to secure bail for the accused man if he would only tell where and when he had received and appropriated moneys of the company to his own use. Mr. Chandler even proposed to secure bail and allow Baker to refund the amount fo his alleged stealings at the rate of two dollars a month if he would make a clean breast of the affair. This offer was made purely on behalf of Baker's wife and child, but the only reply received by Mr. Chandler was "I'll think it over."

This action by the accused man has alienated the sympathy which was at first felt for him and the law will now have to take its course. Much sympathy has been expressed for Baker's wife.

ARRESTED HER HUSBAND; CONSTABLE WOULDN'T

Asserting that the constables of Middlesex county refused to do their duty by arresting her husband for whom she had sworn out a warrant, Mrs. Catharine Brunjes, of New Market, took the trouble to serve the warrant herself this morning and captured her husband in this city, leading him to police headquarters, followed by a crowd of the curious. But owing to the fact that the allegations contained in the warrant were committed in Piscataway Township, Judge Runyon said he had no jurisdiction in the case.

Constable Robert Pierce, of Dunellen, took Brunjes to New Market at the suggestion of Judge Von Minden, who appeared in the city court in behalf of Mrs. Brunjes.

In the warrant for Brunjes' arrest it is alleged that he used vile and indecent language to her while under the influence of liquor and also abused her. Mrs. Brunjes took the wagon in which her husband had driven over from New Market back to their home.

WILL COST HIM $25 IF HE LETS HIS DOG RUN LOOSE.

Because he owns a vicious dog which up to last Monday had not been licensed, Viggo Mortenson, of 990 West Third street, was threatened with a $25 fine by City Judge William N. Runyon this morning if the animal is let loose again. Patrolman Dobson brought Mortenson to court this morning to explain why the animal had not been licensed before, but this dereliction was overlooked when Mortenson produced the license.

According to the patrolman neighbors of Mortenson had complained of the actions of the dog who, it was alleged, had attacked several people in the neighborhood and had torn the skirts of one woman and viciously attacked another smaller dog. Mortenson said he was quite willing that the dog be killed, but declared he had not heard any complaints about him.

Congregational Supplies.

Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich and son, of West Seventh street, will leave Monday for Waterville, N. H., to spend the month of August. They will be registered at Elliott's Hotel. Rev. Dr. J. B. Clark, of New York, will occupy the pulpit on August 7, and Rev. Dr. James M. Whiton, of New York, on August 14. The church will be closed after the latter date until the preparatory service on September 9.

Proctor's Good Show.

The show at Proctor's theatre this week is one of the best presented in many weeks. Every one of the four acts is a headliner and judging by the patronage the bill is making a hit. The pictures are better than ever. The theatre is one of the coolest places in the city.

AUTOMOBILE STRUCK POLE

John Gehle and Four Companions Hurled Out of Car—Gehle Injured.

WAS TAKEN TO MUHLENBERG.

Were Trying Out Repaired Car—Unfamiliarity With Road at Manning's Corner Probable Cause of Accident.

Ignorant of the roads and naturally confused, John Gehle, of 115½ South Orange avenue, Newark, in company with four companions driving a seven passenger Rambler from Newark, collided with a telephone pole near Manning's corner this morning about 3 o'clock with the result that Gehle is in Muhlenberg hospital with a fractured leg and cuts about the head, and the other men who were slightly bruised have returned to their homes in Newark.

According to stories told to the police and facts gathered elsewhere, the party of five were trying out a car which had been in the garage of the Newark Automobile and Machine Company for repairs. The route led through Westfield, Cranford, Scotch Plains and this city and they were evidently intending to return by way of the mountain roads and Summit when the car took its jump for the telephone pole.

Immediately after the accident one of the men got into communication with Gus Barfuss and Mr. Barfuss went to the scene of the accident and took Gehle in his automobile to Muhlenberg hospital after Dr. C. A. Gesswe'n had been aroused and had given first aid to the injured. Dr. Gesswein accompanied the injured man to the hospital and made a thorough examination of his injuries. He found that Gehle had a bad fracture of the right leg and possibly was injured internally besides having been severely cut by flying glass from the broken wind shield. The other men who were only slightly injured had their wounds dressed and departed. The car was badly damaged.

It was first supposed that the accident was the result of a joy ride, but L. R. Thompson, the superintendent of the garage who was in the car, said that the car had been in the garage for some time being overhauled and that he and his companions were giving the machine a final tryout before turning it over to its owner. The car will need some more repairs now. Mr. Thompson said the car left Newark about midnight and it was the intention to go as far as New Brunswick and back, but unfamiliarity with the roads was alone responsible for the accident.

At the spot where the collision with the telephone pole occurred there is a sharp turn and unless one is thoroughly acquainted with this particular part of the road an accident is probable, especially at night.

Those in the car besides Gehle and Thompson were Paul Hoffman, 107 Howard street; Charles Warner, 115½ South Orange avenue, and M. C. Barbour, 318 Broad street, all of Newark.

RYDEROWISKI MAY LOSE HAND As RESULT OF ACCIDENT.

Joseph Ryderowiski, eighteen years old, an employe of the Ransom Concrete Company, will probably lose the greater part of his left hand as the result of an accident at the works, yesterday. He was working on a milling machine, when the cutter caught his hand, lacerating it and breaking several bones.

Dr. C. A. Gesswein was called to the plant, where he dressed the injured hand. Later the young man was treated at the physician's office. Dr. Gesswein believes that it will be necessary to amputate the greater part of the hand.

J. H. Greene, Jr., Wins Match.

J. H. Greene, Jr., of this city, and George H. Hansel played an 18-hole golf match on the links of the Cranford Golf Club, in which rM. Greene won on the eighteenth hole by one up. On the sixteenth hole Mr. Greene was two down and three to go, and he won the next three holes, thereby winning the match. Mr. Greene made a score of 112 and Mr. Hansel's card showed a 96. Medal play Mr. Greene was sixteen strokes more than Mr. Hansel.

Plainfielders at the Lake.

Among the Plainfielders who enjoyed the New Jersey Central excursion to Lake Hopatcong, yesterday, were Mrs. J. H. Buchanan and daughter Mary; Mrs. Bishop and daughter Elizabeth; Miss VanFleet, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Thorn, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bailey, Miss Wilhelmina Vroom, Miss Mary Compton, Miss Nellie Giles, Arthur Jeffery.

EDUCATION COSTS MOST

Police and Fire Departments Next in Estimated Expenditure.

ALTOGETHER COST $222,750,000.

Average Per Capita Expense $8.67 During 1908—Comparison With Costs in Other Cities and States.

About $405,000,000 were spent in 1908 in maintaining and operating the city departments of the 158 largest cities in the United States having an estimated population of 30,000 or more in 1908, whose financial statistics for that year have been collected by the Census Bureau at Washington and are analytically presented in its annual report on the statistics of cities for the year 1908.

The maintenance of schools represents ninety-five per cent. of the total expenses of cities for "education' and cost more than any other municipal function, while the protection of life and property by the police, fire and associated departments was second in cost. These two functions of education and protection of life and property cost fifty-five per cent. of about $405,000,000, which was the total expense of maintaining and operating city departments. For the whole group of cities the average per capita expense for schools was $4.70; for police departments, $2.25; and for fire departments, $1.72. These per capita averages vary greatly among the several cities. Salt Lake City expended $8.18 per capita for schools; Newton, Mass., $8; and New York, Boston, Washington, Newark, Denver, Springfield Mass., and Sacramento each expended over $6 for the same purpose, while Montgomery expended only $1.63; Charleston, $1.81; Norfolk, $2.15; St. Joseph, $2.17; Memphis, $2.19; Knoxville, $2.28; and Manchester and Galveston, each $2.34.

The increased cost of maintaining the government departments of cities in recent years is illustrated by the fact that in 147 cities of over 30,000 population in 1902 it was $13.36 per capita, while for the same cities in 1908 it was $16.81.

The costs of maintaining the police department during the same interval for the same cities have risen steadily from $1.90 to $2.26 per capita; the fire department, from $1.33 to $1.72; health conservation, from $0.22 to $0.30; sanitation, from $0.91 to $1.38; highways, from $1.72 to $1.83; and schools, from $3.69 to $4.70.

The city of over 300,000 population with the smallest running expenses was New Orleans, with Milwaukee a close second.

Expressed in per capita averages, the cities of over 300,000 population with the highest expenses were: Boston, $27.58; New York, $24.71; and Washington, $24.64; and those with the lowest were New Orleans, $12.76, and Baltimore, $13.34. The cities of from 100,000 to 300,000 population, with the highest and lowest per capita payments for expenses, were Denver, $24.44, and St. Joseph, $5.65. Of the cities having from 50,000 to 100,000 inhabitants, the highest was Yonkers, $19.35, and the lowest, Savannah, $7.20. Of those having from 30,000 to 50,000 population, the highest was Sacramento, $20.34, and the lowest, Joplin, $5.83.

WESTFIELD.

The differences between John H. Frazee and his neighbor, Thomas Doud, have not as yet been settled. Complaint under the law to keep the peace was made by Doud against Frazee yesterday. Frazee will be given an opportunity Saturday morning before Justice of the Peace E. R. Collins to show why he should not give bonds to keep the peace, especially regarding Thomas Doud and the members of his family.

Louis Hess, Charles H. Ruby and Pauline Rhymer, all of Union township, were arraigned before Justice of the Peace E. R. Collins here Thursday afternoon by County Detective John Gallatian, charged with selling malt liquors without a license. All three entered a plea of not guilty and waived examination, giving bonds in the amount of $100 to appear before the next term of court.

A. A. Fairbairn, of Westfield, is one of the judges at the Morris county horse show.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The residents here have been warned by the Water Company to cut out the use of the lawn and garden hose sprinkling for a time, on account of the low supply at the company tanks at Netherwood. It is said that some of them have been using the sprinkler both day and night in an effort to save their lawns and gardens.

The only preaching service at the Baptist church tomorrow will be the morning service at 10:45. The B. Y. P. U. will hold its meeting as usual at 7 p. m. in the parlors of the church.

The local ball team are playing at Bound Brook this afternoon. The weather permitting, a fair sized crowd of fans will be in attendance helping to root out a victory.

John B. Stiliger, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Frederick K. Clark, of Front street, has returned to his home in New York.

Rev. Mr. Hollingshead will lead the weekly prayer and praise meeting tonight at the Methodist church.

Briant Johnston, who has been enjoying a two weeks' sojourn at Asbury Park, has returned home.

Weather permitting, there will be a clam bake held tomorrow on the mountains near Murray Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Parsells, of New Brunswick, have been visiting relatives at Glenside Park.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

At the Presbyterian church tomorrow morning, Rev. Ernest Brown will take for his subject, "The Significance of the Lord's Supper," following which the communion service will be observed. The evening subject will be, "Thoughts Suggested by the Vacation Season."

Sylvester Rhinehart proved himself to be a hero, yesterday, when he plunged into the brok in back of Pennock's place and rescued little James Greenhalgh from drowning. The young boy had gone under three times when Rhinehart pulled him out.

The regular meeting of the fire department Thursday night was well attended, eighteen members being present. Routine business was transacted and H. B. Wyckoff was elected secretary in place of W. W. Wyckoff, who resigned.

Richard Pennock, of Madison avenue, has returned from a two weeks' camping trip at the Y. M. C. A. camp at Lake Wawayanda.

David Touzeau and family, of Oradell, are visiting at the home of Mr. Touzeau's brother, James Touzeau, of Front street.

Rev. Dr. W. A. Knox will be the preacher at both services in the Methodist church tomorrow.

Dr. and Mrs. Thorn J. Hogan have been attending the annual dental convention at Asbury Park.

The regular monthly meeting of the Common Council is called for Monday night.

C. E. Tinsman, of New Market road, was slightly ill yesterday.

Elston Lowrie, of North avenue, is camping on Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Nellie Dodwell is spending her vacation at Mauch Chunk.

Miss Kathryn Moynihan is visiting at Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Sarah Brower is visiting in Syracuse, N. Y.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Rev. J. J. Allen, of the Baptist church here, will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church at Carmel, N. Y., tomorrow, and his place will be supplied by his brother, Rev. Arthur V. Allen, of Philadelphia, and his theme for the morning service will be "Righteousness." In the evening an open air illustrated service will be held on the church lawn. On August 7 the church will be closed.

A woman from here while driving a horse and runabout came very near meeting with a serious accident while rounding the corner of Park avenue and Front street, Plainfield, yesterday. The horse slipped on the brick pavement, falling completely to the ground, skinning both his knees and bruising the woman considerably.

The Young People's ice cream social, last night, was well patronized considering so many residents are out of town, and a fair sum was turned into the treasury for the benefit of the church.

Miss Belle Mullison gave a party of young children an afternoon of pleasure by spending the time boating on beautiful Spring Lake. She herself manipulated the oars and did so very gracefully.

Notwithstanding the long dry spell, Spring Lake and the surrounding streams have not varried one inch while New Market Lake and Tier's Lake in Plainfield are almost dry.

J. H. Jones, who resided on a farm here for many years, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Peter Johnson, of Plainfield avenue.

DeFassett, of New York, has bought the Fred Endress farm and intends to move upon it and farm it himself.

Miss Moore is visiting friends in the village.

NEW JERSEY AUTOISTS WILL BE ARRESTED THERE

The recent conference between Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith, of New Jersey, and the State Highway Commissioner of Massachusetts, regarding the automobile retaliatory troubles, has availed little, according to the latest move of the Bay State authorities. The Massachusetts commissioner has placed in the hands of all superior police officers, judges and other officials throughout the state letters explaining the new restrictions imposed on visiting machines from New Jersey. This is what the Massachusetts people say:

"From now on all New Jersey motorists who come into this state without having in advance secured a Massachusetts license will be placed under arrest, taken into the nearest court and fined.

"Visiting machines from any state in the Union except New Jersey may be operated here for ten days without registration, but New Jersey autoists are not even to be given a chance to come into the state for a license. They must do that by means of the mails. If a man in Newark wishes to motor to Boston or any other point in the state he must first write to the Massachusetts Highway Commission and secure application forms. Then, after filling out the blanks, he must wait until they are returned, properly approved, before he may venture the trip with safety. Otherwise he may expect arrest and a fine.

"All this is because the authorities here feel that the New Jersey lawmakers were unfair in refusing to grant in their state the privilege to visitors which are granted here and in other states. Consequently the discrimination against the New Jersey people who come here.

"The State Highway Commission was authorized to take the retaliatory measures just inaugurated by the last legislature. The new statute became effective July 10."

T. E. Currin, Jr., of the First National Bank, will return on Tuesday from his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Broadbent and their son, John Edward, are visiting relatives in Wilmington, Del.

The Misses Edna and Abbie Van Cleaf, of West End avenue, have returned from their two weeks' vacation, spent at Asbury Park.

HARVARD'S BIG OFFER FOR AIRSHIP CONTEST

Prospects that Harvard's airship meet in September will be the most important ever held in America, which recently appeared dubious because of trouble between Glenn Curtiss and Charles K. Hamilton, improved yesterday, following the announcement that the committee will make satisfactory arrangements so that both the flyers will compete.

In all twenty-one of the foremost airmen of the world, among them, in all probability, the Wrights, will compete. The prize list follows:

	First	Second	Third
Speed	$3,000	$2,000	$1,000
Altitude	3,000	2,000	1,000
Duration	2,000	2,000	1,000
Distance	2,000	1,000	.....
Slowest lap	1,000	500	.....
Getaway	100	50	.....
Accuracy	500	250	.....

Fastest time between Soldiers' Field and Boston light and return.....$10,000

For the most accurate throwing of "bomb" on "battleships," $1,000 and the Harvard Cup.

In case any world's record is broken in any of these events, $1,000 will be added.

Additional prizes will be announced later for novice competitors.

The list of cash prizes already total $40,000, to which must be added many valuable pieces of plate, including the $1,000 Harvard Cup for accuracy.

JERSEY CENTRAL SUES FOR A MILLION DOLLARS.

Claiming $1,000,000 damages due to freshets, the Central Railroad has brought suit for that amount against the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company.

A summons was served Thursday on Richard C. Lindabury, as registered agent in this state of the Lehigh.

The Central operates a railroad owned by the defendant corporation, which runs from Easton to Mauch Chunk, under a lease under the terms of which the lessee was to be reimbursed among other things, for moneys expended for damages caused by freshets.

Some five years ago there occurred freshets, which the Central Railroad claims, resulted in damages that necessitated the expenditure of $1,000,000 for repairs.

From that time to the present there has been a dispute as to whether all of this expenditure was directly due to the floods or whether a part of it was not due to natural wear and tear, which latter reparation, the defendant company contends, must, under the terms of the lease, be made at the expense of the lessee.

Inability to settle the matter in controversy out of court has now resulted in the institution of a suit in the Supreme Court.

F. C. Burner, of Jackson avenue, is in Atlantic City today attending the Metropolitan Convention.

Word has been received from Nelson Ramsey, who is in London, England. He reports a smooth trip across the water and everything going nicely.

SUES PREACHER FOR DIVORCE.

The Rev. G. C. Carter, Once Expelled from Church, the Defendant.

Mrs. Anna B. Carter, of Vernon Township, through her counsel, Addison P. Rosenkrans, of Paterson, has started suit for divorce against the Rev. George C. Carter. The suit is brought on the statutory ground. Efforts are being made to find the clergyman, who is said to have charge of a church in upper New York state.

The couple were married on Sept. 16, 1891, and it was while Carter was preaching in the Baptist church at Old Bridge, Middlesex county, that he became acquainted with sixteen-year-old Elsie Smith, an orphan. As a result of their friendship he was brought up on charges, and at a conference of Baptist ministers held in Trenton he was expelled from the church.

When Mrs. Carter heard the rumors about her husband's conduct she refused to believe them, but when the case was brought before the ministerial association and Carter was proved guilty, she left him, taking with her their fourteen-year-old boy. After that Carter worked as a painter and paperhanger, but is now said to be in charge of a church again.

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel who has been at Lindsay Best's camp, Sabael, Adirondacks, will return home tonight. Mr. Howard will occupy Rev. G. Kennedy Newell's pulpit at St. Cloud's Presbyterian church at both morning and evening services on Sunday. He will be in Plainfield until the early part of September.

Newark's even break in Toronto yesterday was not quite good enough, inasmuch as the Rochesters won another game from the Providence Grays. The Bengals, however, are still a shade over three games to the good. Baltimore played a tie game in Buffalo and kept its hold on third place. The Jersey Citys won from the Montreals. The Bengals will play two games in Buffalo today; the Skeeters will play a double-header in Rochester; the Providence team will play in Montreal, and the Baltimores in Toronto. There will be but one game played tomorrow, the Providence Grays going up against the Royals in Montreal.

Vacation Clearance

We emphasize this vacation clearance sale. Not that we are trying to rid our shelves of unseasonable goods, for now is the time to wear these; not because they are undesirable, for we never had any shoes but the right kind. However, it is nearing the end of the season, and in order to retain our position of always being able to offer you something new, we have put a price on our remaining stock to clear our shelves for new goods. If you will come in and look them over, you will find something to interest you, and prices that will appeal to you as much as the shoes.

GOVERNMENT PLANS FOR POSTAL REFORMS

If the Federal administration adopts a suggestion soon to be made by the Postmaster-General, Representatives in Congress may be shorn of nearly all the patronage now allotted to them. The Postmaster General is going to urge that all postoffices of the second and third class, with salaries ranging from $1,000 to $2,900 a year, be covered by the classified service. At the same time, however, it will be pointed out to President Taft that the experiment of applying the merit principle to the appointment of fourth-class postmasters has proved a failure.

By an order issued by President Roosevelt a few months before he left the White House, the civil service commission was empowered to appoint fourth-class postmasters in the New England and Middle Atlantic states, and in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin. Mr. Roosevelt had long believed in the classification of postmasters, and yielding to suggestions made by several reformers, consented to authorize an experiment in the states named. It has not worked out satisfactorialy, and postal officials are convinced that in time all fourth-class postoffices will be at least partly removed from the control of the civil service commission.

It is explained by the officials that the application of the civil service commission rules to fourth class offices has not proved satisfactory owing to the difficulty of securing lists of eligibles. The compensation of fourth class postmasters ranges from a few dollars to a figure just below $1,000 a year. The communities supporting fouth class offices are small. Their population is never over a few thousands, and sometimes only a few hundred, and the number of available candidates, therefore, is limited. The authorities have found it difficult to induce people to take civil service examinations in such communities, with the result that in many instances the administration of the postal business has been hampered.

Doubt is expressed by postal authorities that the merit principle will be abandoned entirely, so far as fourth class postmasters are concerned, but it is being suggested now that these appointments should be made direct by the postmaster-general, the applicants to be subjected to a simple written examination designed merely to test their business ability.

As to second and third class postoffices they are located in fair sized towns, and the compensation, it is said, is large enough to attract desirable candidates. Postal officials believe that appointments to second and third class offices could be filled successfully by certification of the civil service commission. While they do not expect the administration to adopt the idea at once, they are hopeful that the reform will be formally urged at no distant date. Under a policy inaugurated by Postmaster-General Cortelyou, postmasters generally are retained in office now as long as their records are satisfactory, but this rule may be defeated on occasion by senators and representatives.

Every effort is to be made by department authorities to induce the administration to favor the classification of second and third class offices. Postal officials believe that for a great many years to come offices of the first class, such as New York, Chicago, and St. Louis, will be used to reward political service. For the present they will devote their energies to removing second, third and fourth class offices from the realm of politics, trusting to public sentiment eventually to force the classification of first class offices.

Leonard Bennett Surprised.

Thursday night Leonard Bennett was pleasantly surprised at his home, 310 Jackson avenue, Netherwood. The party was tendered him in honor of his going on a visit to his native country, England. There were a large number of his friends present to enjoy the good time, including his sister, Mrs. E. D. Young, who is about to pay a visit, with her two children, to Halifax Yorkshire, England, and Mrs. Nayler, who came from Bradford, England, three months ago to visit her son, Mr. Gowen Naylor, is also returning by the same boat, the Arabic, White Star line. The evening was enlivened with games and music. Mrs. E. D. Young sang two solos. Before the guests departed to their homes refreshments were served.

BRIDGE WHIST FOR CHARITY.

Editor The Daily Press:

It will probably interest many of your readers to know that a bridge whist party will be given by the guests at Truell Hall, Saturday evening, August 6th, for the benefit of the Baby Camp fund of the Children's Day Nursery, which is being raised by the King's Daughters; the prizes have been dnoated and expenses guaranteed so that the entire gross receipts will go to benefit the fund.

Some of us who do not care very much for the whist part of it, but who are in hearty sympathy with the object, intend to chip in toward swelling the fund, and hope to be able to raise a good sum for this beautiful charity; if any of your readers would like to contribute by taking part in the whist party or by cash donations, they may send same to the undersigned, or to any of the guests at Truell Hall.

Very truly,
GEO. R. CORNWELL.

MR. SMITH EXPLAINS.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of 29th inst. appears an article entitled "Employes Discharged" and the closing paragraph reads in part as follows: "The other men alleged to have been implicated in the looting of the freight packages and who have been discharged are * * George Smith * * *."

I must take serious exception to the casting of any such stigma upon my name. For almost forty years, in one capacity or another, I have been employed by the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, and during that whole time, no man can honestly say that I have been dishonest in any respect.

At my time in life it is hard enough to have been thrown out of a position through an unfortunate misunderstanding, without having to bear the burden of being publicly proclaimed as dishonest.

I ask that you give my denial the same publicity as has been accorded the original article.

Respectfully,
C. M. SMITH.

inside track for winning another six-year term in the Senate. Mr. Kean himself is all serenity. At the Governor's reception at Sea Girt on Thursday he did not seem to have a political care. When some one asked him if Congressman Fowler would get his political scalp this fall the Senator only smiled and remarked that he had been in the game a long time now and he still had a good head of hair. "And I hope to have my hair cut in Washington for the next six years," commented the Senator.

ALEX. GILBERT IS CHOSEN TREASURER OF NEW ASSN.

Alexander Gilbert, of West Eighth street, president of the Market and Fulton Bank, New York, has been chosen treasurer of the National Currency Association of the City of New York, which was organized under the terms of the Aldrich-Vreeland law.

Twenty-seven national banks of Greater New York, representing nearly all the members of the Clearing House, joined the new organization.

MOTOR LAW BAD, SAYS ASSEMBLYMAN EDGE.

Assemblyman Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic county, in an interview yesterday concerning the retaliatory legislation of New York, Pennsylvania and other States directed against motorists of this State because of the temporary tax levied here on motorists from all other States, declares the law, while producing a nominal revenue only, means an annual loss to hotelkeepers, garages, other tradespeople and motorists of several hundred thousand dollars.

As a remedy Colonel Edge, who fathered a bill to repeal the law which provoked the retaliatory legislation in other States, suggests the appointment of a commission of two or three members of the Legislature from New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Connecticut and this State to be named by the govenors of these states for the purpose of suggesting legislation that might solve the problem.

SPEED VIOLATIONS SAID TO BE BAD FOR ROADS.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith will take notice of the complaint of Road Commissioner Frederick Gilkyson as to the violations of the speed law on the road between Point Pleasant and Lakewood, which the Road Commissioner declares is seriously damaging the road there.

The matter has been brought to the attention of Commissioner Smith, and he stated that although the inspector force is very busy investigating complaints, he would detail Inspector George W. Thompson to take charge of patroling this road at the earliest opportunity. He will probably start on the work on Monday and remain until the conditions have been remedied and the motorists compelled to observe the law. The road department has just finished repairs on this road, and Commissioner Gilkyson is anxious that it be kept in first class condition.

PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION FORMULATES WORK RULES.

Trenton, July 30.—After four weeks of hard work preparing to administer the law passed by the Legislature last winter regulating the operation of public utility concerns in New Jersey, the Public Utility Commission has just formulated the rules to govern the filing of complaints and the conduct of hearings in reference thereto as directed against any steam railroad, street railway, gas, electric and telephone companies, all of which come under the jurisdiction of the law fathered by Senator Wakelee and Assemblyman Pierce.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will leave August 3 for a trip abroad. He will return home the middle of September.

BRYAN STILL IN POLITICS, SAYS "JIM"

When a reporter for The Daily Press today asked James E. Martine if he had noted the fact that the press of the country generally referred to Mr. Bryan's recent defeat in Nebraska, "as his elimination from politics, in the future," Mr. Martine said, "the man that so calculates, counts without his host, they do not know Mr. Bryan. I need not a ree with Mr. Bryan in every thought and idea, but I know he is honest and courageous. I admire him very much. We are personal friends. I believe him an earnest and conscientious Democrat and that he will be a factor in American politics as long as he lives."

The reporter then asked, "Do you believe he will again be a candidate for the Presidency?"

"No, I do not," Mr. Martine said. "He has said so, and I believe it would be courting defeat for our party to again nominate him. My hope is that he may represent the state of Nebraska in the United States Senate."

"Then you do not feel that the Democratic party is dead," the reporter inquired, to which Mr. Martine replied: "You will find us a very lively corpse this fall. You need not be wearing any crepe for us. We will be on the firing line when the battle is called."

Funeral of Mrs. J. E. Guion.

The funeral of Mrs. Harriet Emily Guion was held from Grace church at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, officiated. Mrs. Guion was a communicant of Grace church for many years and was also actively identified with all its interests. The burial took place in Hillside cemetery.

Pastor Broek's Vacation.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will start Monday morning on his summer vacation. Accompanied by his brother, Rev. Albertus T. Broek, of Newark, and his family, he will go to Detroit, by the way of Niagara Falls, and thence to Grand Rapids, where the two d'vines will visit their mother. They will be away the month of August.

—Reduced rates to Flemington Fair, via New Jersey Central, August 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Round trip $1.15. Special service returning nights, August 3 and 4. See agents for circulars and time tables.

Growing & Saving

The report of the condition of
The Borough National Bank
June 30, 1910, shows over $150,000.00
in individual DEPOSITS.

Mr. Brisbane says—"The moment a man begins to save, however little, he establishes a habit that would be the salvation of nine men out of ten."

The above shows two things—OUR BANK IS GROWING AND OUR PEOPLE ARE SAVING.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A two weeks' campmeeting is being held at Masonville.

The Paulsboro Reporter is the name of a new weekly to be started in that town.

Arthur J. Collins, of Moorestown, cleared almost $1,000 on an acre of gooseberries this year.

Walter L. Huff, of Woodbury, has announced his candidacy for Mayor on the Republican ticket.

A cow belonging to a herd of Isaac Low, of Thoroughfare, is reported as suffering with anthrax.

Miss Louise Grevell, of Williamstown, has been elected principal of the public schools at Jarrstown, Pa.

So inadequate is the supply of gas at Pitman Grove that a movement is on foot for the establishment of a municipal plant.

An inquest into the death of J. Wesley Simmons, who was killed by a train at Millvile on Wednesday night, was held yesterday.

Dr. Bossett Kirby, of Woodbury, will probably be a candidate for Assembly from Gloucester county, representing the Axis wing of the Republicans.

Paulsboro Borough Council is about to break up the last spooning place in town, corner of Third and Beacon streets, by placing an arc light at that point.

Potatoes being shipped by the Burlington County Farmers' Exchange from both Moorestown and Masonville are bringing from forty-three to forty-eight cents per basket.

Internal Revenue Collector William McCoach, of Philadelphia, has purchased the cottage on Brighton place, Ocean City, owned by the Norman Musselman estate.

The Republican primary fight in Cumberland County will be the most bitterly contested in years, with former Governor Stokes leading one faction and Assemblyman Nichols the other.

A large audience witnessed the presentation of "Uncle Rube" in the Hippodrome at Ocean City Thursday evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church.

Stricken ill in the Camden County Jail, where he was confined in default of a bond guaranteeing the support of his wife and children, Frederick Higbe, thirty-nine years old, died soon after his admission to Cooper Hospital Thursday.

A struck panel of forty-eight jurors from which will be selected to try Joseph Schley on a charge of murdering Peter Skyes, was drawn Thursday at Camden by Deputy Sheriff Starn. The case will be tried on August 16.

Battery B, Field Artillery, of Camden, is in receipt of a letter from Brigadeier-General W. W. Wotherspoon, United States army, complimenting the command on its efficiency and conduct at the recent encampment at Gettysburg.

Arrested at Atlantic City on Wednesday on a charge of smuggling opium, Charles Wong, a Chinaman, was lodged in the Camden County Jail yesterday. He will be given a hearing before United States Commissioner Morgan next Wednesday.

GUNS AT SEA GIRT FOUND DEFECTIVE.

Camp Fort, Sea Girt, July 30.—With the Fortress Monroe catastrophe still fresh in their minds, the guardsmen of the First and Fifth Regiments are giving silent thanks that neither of the two guns stationed here for saluting purposes have swung them into eternity or at least the hospital. There is abundant reason for thanksgiving, according to those understanding artillery. It is known that when an attempt was made to discharge one of the guns for a national salute during the encampment this week it refused to go off. The artillerymen were unable to get a noise out of the piece until they had used water on the breach and inside the gun proper. This caused wonder among several prominent militiamen and they inquired the reason.

It developed that the guns are nearly thirty years old, having been cast in 1881. To operate them it is necessary for the men to use a lanyard to pull the primer, a very antique method, and it is necessary to use a very large charge of powder every time a salute is fired.

That the guns remained in service has occasioned no little comment among military men here.

Next week Battery A, of East Orange, will have the opportunity of using real up-to-date guns in their drills and salutes, a fine outfit having been shipped here from the Rock Island arsenal of the Federal government.

Want Slot Machines Removed.

Letters written by a committee of five citizens have been sent to Governor Fort and Chief of Police Malcom B. Woodruff, of Atlantic City, calling the attention of the executive and the local head of the police to the slot gambling machines now in use in that city, and asking that they do their duty and have them removed.

Woman's World

The Prettiest Woman In Japan, Princess Fushima.

PRINCESS FUSHIMA.

The prettiest princess of the mikado's realm, Princess Fushima, and her husband, Prince Fushima, a second cousin of the emperor of Japan, are visiting in this country. The princess is a fascinating little specimen of femininity of the oriental grande dame type, with olive tinted complexion and the dark, lustrous eyes and hair peculiar to her countrywomen. Like most of the high caste Japanese, she speaks very good English, and while in Washington, where the Japanese royalties were recently entertained by President Taft and the official set, the princess won all hearts.

Her shy, appealing little manner was in marked contrast to the confidence and assertiveness of the smart American woman. Paris was writ in large letters all over the costumes of the princess, and she wore them with a charming grace. But how commonplace seems even a French creation compared with her own Japanese robes!

Princess Fushima, like the empress of Japan, is in sympathy with the higher education movement for women which in Japan has lately made such wonderful strides. While in New York city the princess bought a number of American toys which she said would delight her three small sons.

The royal Japanese visitors are making a tour of the world by way of Europe and the United States.

A Plea For the Collar.

Technically there can be no objection to it. The rounding neck, the Dutch collar or whatever you want to call it is perfectly correct. There is no reason known to Mme. Grundy why it shouldn't be worn for business.

As a matter of fact, however, it does not look businesslike. You know the girl who affects low cut collars in the office.

She is dressed well enough, is neat and trim, only you find yourself wishing she looked a little more businesslike.

It's the collar.

"If only that girl would come to work just once," you say, "with a good stiff uncompromising linen collar around her neck or a high straight stock that looked as if it meant business, how rejoiced I should be!"

And that long expanse of uncovered neck—you cannot think of anything else when you are near the girl. It exercises some horrid fascination over you. You forget her perhaps charming face, her trim frock, her most attractive manner. All that enters your consciousness is that neck.

Does not this impression on the average observer seem rather a big price to pay for a comfort which is, after all, largely imaginary?

Housewife Hints.

Shrink and set color of children's garments before making up. They soil so quickly that it is not worth while to run risks by waiting until afterward.

A good mixture to set color in cotton materials is one tablespoonful of turpentine, a handful of salt and a pail of cold water. Put goods in overnight.

When icing runs put it back on stove on top of asbestus mat and stir until proper consistency. This can be done after sirup is added to white of egg.

Spreading a little flour on top of a cake will sometimes prevent icing from running.

Feathers that have grown grimy can be given a bath in alcohol, after which they are shaken until dry.

Vegetables for salad must be dry or the dressing does not amalgamate and loses its flavor.

Summer Comfort.

Is there a woman living who does not dislike an oily, shiny face, especially the nose, chin and forehead?

Those who do their own work are often annoyed by this. No matter how often they wash, it seems of no avail.

Here is a simple, harmless and effectual remedy any one may safely try:

Cooling lotion for face, neck and hands.

Dissolve in a pint of camphor water quarter of an ounce of pure glycerin, an eighth of an ounce of pulverized borax, quarter of an ounce of boracic acid. Put all in a bottle, shake well and it is ready for use.

Apply whenever warm, as this is cooling and very refreshing.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

Good Form

The woman who intends to have week end visitors or house visitors of any sort needs to consider one thing before inviting the outsider into her home—is the prospective guest worthy of the honor? Is she to be trusted with one's life, ergo one's reputation? If not madam must not issue her invitation, and if she sees fit so to do once the stranger is within her gates all must be given her—full confidence in her integrity and entire liberty in every move that concerns her health and happiness.

As the hostess' captiousness sometimes comes from feeling that the visitor of a week or more is outstaying her welcome, the English custom of arranging a visit within a prescribed period is an excellent one. If you ask Miss Guest to come on the 15th and stay until the 20th you have no reason to complain unless she prolongs her stay. This arrangement for the coming of the guest and her going puts the whole visit on a pleasant and easy basis, and the hostess and guest of good sense abide by all the requirements of politeness and kindly feeling as long as the visit lasts.

An Engagement Tea.

One of the newest ways of announcing an engagement is for the prospective bride to give a tea and invite all her friends and the friends of her parents. You either invite them by note telling of the engagement, or you may send visiting cards on which are written a day, date and hour, and on their arrival tell them the news. When invited by visiting cards, as suggested, tea and cakes should be served, following the procedure precisely of any other afternoon tea. Even when an engagement is announced in this way it is the custom to write notes to one's intimate friends, telling the news before they can hear it from outsiders. Such a note may read:

My Dear Aline—I want you to be among the first to know of my engagement to Jackson Frothingham, which we shall announce at a tea on Wednesday afternoon. I hope you will come in then, for mother and I will be at home at 5 o'clock. I know you will congratulate me when you know how happy I am, and I want you to take Jackson into the friendship which you and I have enjoyed for so long.

MARTHA.

An announcement note of this kind should be acknowledged by the recipient.

Care of Linens.

As linen forms a large percentage of spring and summer dresses it is advisable to study a method for preserving the beauty of this fabric. No linen should be starched. True, linen has a crisp, clean finish when starched and ironed, but it rumples easily, and one wearing makes a garment unfit for a second appearance. Instead dampen the goods considerably and iron until perfectly dry. Iron as much of a garment as possible on the wrong side to raise the thread.

In washing blue linen add vinegar to the last rinsing water. Place a teaspoonful of soda in a gallon of water when dipping a lavender. Use no bluing in tans, but supply it plentifully in the rinsing water for white, blue and pink. Green should not be dipped into indigo water. When the green begins to fade dip it into a sour solution of water and vinegar and hang it in the shade to dry. Dress linens are not unlike table linens as to laundry work, as hard pressing on damp material furnishes a certain amount of stiffness sufficient for such fabrics. Use a very large iron for pressing large pieces.

Shopping Etiquette.

If you have waited until this eleventh hour to do your summer shopping there are some little decencies you must not fail to remember. Most of them center about your obligations to the store people, though the comfort of mommer and hubby and the children is also concerned.

Among my woman friends there are two sorts of shoppers whose methods I have taken pains to observe with the desire, however, to learn rather than to teach. The correct form of shopping is a wonderful gift, implying as great a saving of body and soul as of money, and I am one of the unfortunate ones who come out of these gladiatorial contests the worse for wear in every way.

The saints in my shopping calendar are the women who get through their buying without breaking any of the hearts behind the counter—the dear women who have always a gracious word for the tired saleslgirls, who know what they want before they go to the shop and buy it without haggling, dawdling or bad temper.

How to Register at Hotels.

When registering at a hotel a married woman writes her name in full, as "Mrs. George Mills Brown," with her town and state following. An unmarried woman writes hers "Miss Jane Blank," with her city and state. Street addresses are not given. That the full name be given is very important in case of accident, as the use of initials renders identification more difficult. People often have similar initials that represent names quite different. An unmarried woman should never omit the prefix "Miss."

J. F. DRYDEN MAY GET DR. L. D. WARD'S SEAT

Although the question as to who will succeed Dr. Leslie D. Ward as first vice president of the Prudential Insurance Company has not yet been considered by the directors of that corporation, it is generally conceded by those who are best qualified to speak about the matter that the place will go to Forrest F. Dryden, the present second vice president. In that event it is likely that the other two vice presidents of the company will be each advanced a place and that either Richard V. Lindabury, the general counsel, or John K. Gore, the actuary, will be made the fourth vice president.

In support of this slate it is pointed out that it has always been the policy of the company to not only recognize, but to reward, merit in its official family and among its employes. As a rule when vacancies have occurred they have been filled by the promotion of those next in line. That has been made possible largely through the Prudential's course in so training its officers and employes that each has what is to all intents and purposes an understudy in the person of his immediate subordinates.

It is said that in the business of the corporation this method is followed down even to the office boys, and that in putting the theory of the thing into practise the company keeps an exact record of the work of each member of its large force. With a system of debit and credit marks and the recognition of suggestions for the improvement of the company's methods or the increase of its business, the officers and employes from the highest to the lowest are pretty well on record, and, all other things being equal, the logical candidate for a vacancy is the one next in line.

On this groundwork of reasoning it is contended that with Mr. Dryden's advancement the directors will move the other officers a step forward. In that case Jacob E. Ward, a brother of Dr. Ward and the present third vice president, would be made "second vice." Wilbur S. Johnson, the fourth vice president and comptroller, would then, in the natural order of things, be made third vice president. That move would leave the office of fouth vice president vacant and there, in the minds of the slate makers, arises the first real doubt as to what will be done.

In a way there is no direct heir to that place. It may be filled by the selection of one of several men without in any way reflecting on the others or being considered by them as a failure to receive what might be regarded as their due. In view of that situation the vacancy on the fourth vice president may be filled either by the selection of Mr. Lindabury or the election of Mr. Gore, or possibly one of the other officers.

It is likely that if the higher officers of the company are advanced some promotions will be made among the junior officers and their immediate subordinates, but just what these changes will be none of the slate-makers has attempted to figure out. Whatever is done in the matter will probably be decided upon at the meeting of the directors next month.

It is not likely, however, that the vacancy created in the company's board of directors by Mr. Ward's death will be filled for some months. Up to the present time no one has been publicly talked of for this place.

As for the vacancies created by Dr. Ward's death in the boards of directors of the Fidelity Trust Company and the Union National Bank it is not likely that anything will be done for some time. The probability is that no action will be taken by either bank for several months.

In those institutions, as in other large enterprises, the disposition is to cut down the number of directors, and it would not be surprising if both these banks, instead of electing a successor to Dr. Ward, simply reduced by one the size of their boards.

SEABRIGHT PLANS FOR ITS CARNIVAL.

Seabright, July 30.—Plans are maturing for the river carnival to take place August 6 on the Shrewsbury. Bridges, grand-stands and the cottages along the waterfront will be brilliantly decorated with colored lanterns and incandescents for the parade of water craft in the evening, and there will be a fine display of fireworks. In the afternoon there will be several swimming events of interest. Thomas Howland, who is in charge of these, has invited a number of expert swimmers to compete, among them J. P. Mantell, who will be pitted against three other experts, who will swim in relays.

A Wedding Eve Quarrel

By R. S. PHILLIPS

"If you do go"—Anne pouted, and Anne's style of pout was almost as deliciously distracting as her smile—"you can just consider everything, everything"—emphatically, and the stamp of a small foot added weight to the assertion—"at an end between us!"

"But, honey, don't be unreasonable. It's become almost a time-honored custom."

"Bachelor dinners on the eve of your wedding may be the custom, but if you really loved me as you say you do, you would spend our last unmarried evening with me—with me only." There was a suspicion of tears in Anne's clear eyes.

"Anne! It's quite time this nonsense stopped." Having tried cajolery, harassed Robert Warren vainly supposed that a bit of sternness in his attitude might prove an antidote to his capricious love's unreason.

The pretty nose assumed a greater altitude, and a little slipper began to beat a devil's tattoo upon the soft rug. After deep contemplation, Anne said but two words—"Oh! Indeed!"

Often had just these two words reduced that stalwart man to abject submission. Now, however, the abject element was altogether lacking.

"Very well!" springing to her feet and drawing her five feet nothing to the fullest height, which allowed a little more than normal measurement on account of Louis XIV. heels, "Go to your bachelor dinner, and tell your precious ushers that it heralds your reentrance into single blessedness! I'm glad! Glad! Glad! Robert Warren," tempestuously, "that I've found you out before to-morrow!"

And, with a tragic gesture that Duse would not have scorned, Anne swept her chiffons out of the room. The tragic pose changed quickly, however, to something rather pathetically human, and Anne subsided in a miserable heap among the cushions of the wide window seat.

Warren, left alone, mused wrathfully upon the inconstancy of woman in general and one in particular. He argued bitterly to himself that he had never dreamed his hitherto "darling Anne" could be so vixenish. Such a ridiculous matter to create a teapot tempest—as if all eligible bachelors didn't give their particular chums a dinner chance to wish them godspeed upon the troubled sea of matrimony.

"I didn't kick a bit about her bridesmaids' luncheon," he muttered, resentfully, kicking spitefully at a fat hassock, "and I'm sure I wanted to see her this afternoon, too!"

Then he stopped and tried to imagine a life with Anne left out of it—dainty, dimpling Anne, who was sunshine most always, with just enough prettily cloudy weather for effective contrast. Yes, life without Anne was utterly out of the question. He wondered miserably if she would "make up." Well, poor unfortunate man could only fail in such a venture. He hastened into the hall in search of an obliging maid, to whom to intrust his mission. There he encountered the miserable, sobbing heap on the wide window seat.

"I won't do it, Anne!"—gathering the fascinating bunch of misery into his strong arms.

"Really, really, Bob!"

"Really, Anne!"

"Then you can—and must. I only wanted to be sure, dearest, that you would give it up for my sake."

Which last sentence only made Bob Warren ponder all the more deeply upon the inconstancy of woman in general and one in particular. However, he didn't argue the matter, but kissed Anne instead.

Matches.

Three millions of matches, according to the statisticians, are turned out every minute of the 24 hours of the day by the civilized natives of the earth. This is a consumption of seven billions a year, and it is said that half of them are burned in the United States. Matches are cheap and very insignificant compared with some other articles of wood, but the manufacturers complain that they are beginning to find the raw material for their product scarce. Only the choicest portions of the best trees are suitable. Sapwood, knotty or cross grained timber will not do. Instead of being a by-product of other articles of manufacture, the little match is turned out at hundreds of mills over the country where the by-products are bulky objects like doors, sash, shingles, siding, posts and cord wood. The pines, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow are the most suitable match timbers.

Savings and Losings.

The British P. O. savings bank is raising hob about carrying petty current candy accounts of the kids. Say bootblacks and newsboys will deposit a quarter, and take it out two cents at a time. Now, every such transaction costs the government exactly 11 cents, same price as a $100 transaction. Still, it seems to Tip if a youngster can put in a shilling at interest, and has candy resistance enough to purchase only two cents' worth at a time, such young Rothschilds should be encouraged, even if it does cost the government a matter of a thousand or so pounds more or less per annum.—New York Press.

Stone Roads
ELIZABETH, N. J.

Proposals are asked for the construction of a Macadam Road in Union County, New Jersey, known as Springfield Avenue and Shunpike Road, beginning at Turkey Road and extending northerly to Westfield Avenue, all in the Township of Springfield.

The length of the work to be done is 1.131 miles.

The width of the macadam is to be made 16 feet. The widths between the gutters will be 33 feet.

Bids may be presented on the following different types of work.

1. Macadam, with asphaltum binder.
2. Macadam, with Amiesite surface coating.
3. Macadam, with Warrenite surface coating.
4. Macadam, with Filbertine surface coating.
5. Macadam, with Healley Good Roads Company's surface coating.
6. Macadam, with Tarvia surface coating.

Plans, profiles, specifications and cross-sections of the work may be examined at the office of Jacob L. Bauer, county engineer, 130 Broad Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Bidders must enclose with their bids a certified check for $1,000.00, made payable to the order of John N. Cady, Director of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, as a guarantee that should the work be awarded to such bidder, the said bidder will enter into an agreement within the stated time, with the Board of Chosen Freeholders, for the carrying out of this work.

Bids for the above described work will be received by the County Road Committee of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, at the Court House, Elizabeth, New Jersey, at 2:30 p. m., on Wednesday, August 10, 1910.

Each bid must be enclosed in a sealed envelope, with the name of the bidder written plianly upon the outside of the envelope. The certified check must also be enclosed with the bid.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids, as they may deem best for the interests of the County of Union.

Bidders must be prepared to satisfy the Committee that they have had experience in doing the class of work bid upon, and that they have the necessary plant and means to carry out the work, in case the same should be awarded to them.

JACOB L. BAUER,
County Engineer.

CURE YOUR KIDNEYS.

Do Not Endanger Life When a Plainfield Citizen Shows You the Cure.

Why will people continue to suffer the agonies of kidney complaint, backache, lameness, headaches, languor, why allow themselves to become chronic invalids, when a certain cure is offered them?

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use, because it gives to the kidneys the help they need to perform their work.

If you have any, even one, of the symptoms of kidney diseases, cure yourself now, before diabetes, dropsy or Bright's disease sets in. Read this Plainfield testimony:

Mrs. M. Newman, 532 West Fifth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "A constant pain in my limbs was the principal symptom of my kidney trouble. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and soon after I began taking them, the pains in my limbs disappeared. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole afents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

LITERARY

The August issue of the Woman's Home Companion is called "The Grand Time Number," and it lives up to that title in every particular, giving ideas for summer enjoyment of every sort. The fiction is of the light, happy variety with, in most instances, the atmosphere of vacation days charmingly depicted. "Mlle. Mystic," a midsummer comedy by Anna Steese Richardson, will doubtless be acted in many gardens during the summer, and a remarkably timely article on the Outdoor Play, by Walter Prichard Eaton, will help in a large measure to make al fresco theatricals the popular thing during the summer.

The Fiction Number of Scribner's Magazine has one of the most distinguished lists of contributors that has ever appeared in a single number, although the record of previous Fiction Numbers for twenty years has been remarkable. The great Victorian Novelist, who but recently died, George Meredith, leads the number with "The Sentimentalists," a comedy which had such a charging performance in London recently and is probably to be seen in one of Mr. Frohman's theatres in this country. The brightness of the dialogue and the air of polite comedy, with the ever-present Meredithean wit, make it a real piece of literature by the master of the Comic Spirit. The last scene is in blank verse. Mr. Roosevelt's article describes two of his most picturesque experiences. He was one of the first white men to see and describe the killing of a lion by th Nandi tribesmen, armed only with shields and spears. It is a thrilling narrative. He then pictures a unique journey of one hundred and sixty miles from the shores of Lake Victoria Nyanza to Albert Nyanza.

The leading feature of the August number of "Success Magazine" is a most absorbing novelette called "Molly Make-Believe," by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott. It is a story of unusual originality and fascination. Fred Bates Johnson, in his article "The Homesteader in Western Canada," gives an honest exposition of what the chances are for the settler in that remote region of North America. "Tariff Making by Barter and Sale" by Arthur I. Street, in his series: "Uncle Sam in Blunderland" contains extracts from interviews with Senators who have had a leading part in the making of our tariff, and also shows the real way the tariff was made. In "The Preacher and a Potato" William Justin Harsha describes in a very interesting way his profitable step from the pulpit to the farm.

Among the many excellent and instructive articles which appear in the August Wide World, those on "Unknown Arabia" and "The Mysterious Ruined Cities of Yucatan" are perhaps the most interesting. Both are written by travelers who are apparently intimately acquainted with their subjects. The "Pumpkin Festival at Nice" and "Witchcraft in Wales" are also full of remarkable and little known facts. W. Lacey Amy writes of "The Town that was Born Lucky"—Medicine Hat, which is situated over an immense area of natural dry gas which supplies all the heat and power necessary to run the city. Among the purely adventurous articles are "A Tragedy in the Gulf Stream," "The Lure of Gold," "The Queen-Mother's Plot," "Jeff Kent, Outlaw," and "The Execution of Ning Wo." The illustrations, mostly from photographs, are as numerous as they are interesting.

Upton Sinclair, who not long ago published some startling details of his experiences with the fasting cure, has written for the current issue of Physical Culture a recital of some further investigations into this novel method of health-building. This magazine has also arranged to publish a series of articles by Raymond Duncan, who, with his family, has of late created quite a furore in Eastern cities by reverting to the costume and manner of living of the ancient Greeks. That Duncan is far from being a scatter-brained crank his writings amply attest, and the introductory portions of the material he has prepared for Physical Culture are uncommonly readable.

A notable contribution to the fiction of the month will be found in the first part of a serial story by Edith Wharton entitled "The Letters." There are four lively short stories, as well as an instalment of May Sinclair's serial "The Creators: A Comedy." For those who are watching with interest the evolution of the church in its relation to human affairs, and who have noted what many believe to be the signs of an impending change in the nation's religious life, the Rev. Washington Gladden's paper on "The Municipal Church," in the August Century, will be rich in suggestiveness. Dr. Gladden delves down to some of the bastic truths of Christianity, and from a careful analysis of these truths and their bearing on Christian living builds up an ideal organization the realization of which, he contends, would go far toward solving many of the problems of philanthropy, while at the same time it would strengthen church unity. Already something resembling Dr. Gladden's proposed Municipal Church has been started in Columbus, Ohio.

In addition to the usual group of twenty-eight portraits of our most beautiful actresses, The Red Book Magazine for August contains the portraits which will follow in the September issue, have been selected by a committee of representative critics, as the thirty foremost actors identified with the American stage.

If anyone is desirous of learning the complete details of the controversial career of the Administration, he should read "The Administration on Trial," which begins in the current number of the Metropolitan. Therein, during the next few months, each member of prominence of the two houses of Congress will write his defense or complaint—Messrs. Payne, Bristow, Norris and Clark this month. The story of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks by Lindsay Denison is interesting. In "Amusing the People" Frederic Thompson gives the psychology of the summer amusement. "Fifth Avenue," a retrospect by James Barnes, is illustrated with some splendid etchings by Walter Hale. Gouverneur Morris, Stephen French Whitman and Jacques Futrelle have done some of their best work in providing fiction for the August Metropolitan.

The August Everybody's Magazine is a fortunate combination of delightful summer fiction with articles of wide interest and true importance. As pertinent to the coming campaign, Frederic C. Howe contributes, under the title, "Ask Your Congressman," a suggestion of real practicability looking toward the betterment of national conditions. "Boy-Power Applied," by Frederick Mather Caldwell, is the story of a juvenile republic where the youths we call "delinquent" are given a fair chance to redeem themselves—and do it. "The Question 'How?'" is one of Dr. William Hanna Thomson's essays in fine philosophy, always uplifting and suggestive. "Instead of an Article" is an inside story of magazine editing, with some correspondence about Pittsburg between the editor and Mayor Brand Whitlock of Toledo as the text.

To work two afternoons in the hayfield under a baking sun, side by side with his own farm laborers, scarcely sounds like an attempt at a Cincinnatus pose. Facts like this have had much to do in endearing Mr. Roosevelt to the great masses of the American people. When we reflect how a European potentate or great man, as the phrase goes, would return to his estate after such a triumphal tour through Europe, after such a reception in his own country as Mr. Roosevelt had, we inevitably picture all manner of luxury, a train of flunkies, and the like. The picture of Mr. Roosevelt's working side by side with his farm hands is surely a more bracing one and a far more admirable. At least it is so in America, where the majority happily still believes in that type of summer holiday, rather more than in that spent about the Newport Casino.—From "Roosevelt the Husbandman," by Henry James Forman, in the American Review of Reviews for August.

LIBEL CASES DROPPED.

Hostilities Which Have Excited Freehold Now Ended.

Freehold, July 30.—Promising to not repeat the acts charged to him, James M. Allgor escaped indictment for criminal libel, Prosecutor Applegate agreeing to nolle pross the true bill. Allgor, who operates an ice cream parlor, has been at loggerheads with the wealthy residents at Seabright and along the Rumson road. He charged that there was a conspiracy to boycott him, and one Sunday morning the rich strollers were puzzled to see a line of old clothes in Allgor's yard labeled with allusions to borough officials. These were seized by the authorities.

Last spring Mr. Allgor erected a board fence fifteen feet high next to a $10,000 house erected by Mayor P. Hall Packer, and later he painted on the fence that the place "was broken into and robbed, my clothes line and clothing cut down and stolen."

Following this he is charged with being the author of a circular in which the parties who took his clothes line are referred to as a "gang of outlaws" and that one of them was the foreman of the Grand Jury. It was these acts which led to the finding of the indictments.

Now, Mr. Allgor, through his counsel, promises to remove the objectionable sign, erect no more, nor print or publish like attacks upon the officials of the two wealthiest summer resorts in the State.

Singer Wants Tax Reduction.

Elizabeth, July 30.—It is expected that the Singer Company will appeal to the County Board for the Equalization of Taxes for a reduction in the increase of $1,000,000 in the personal assessment of the factory as fixed by the local Board of Assessors. The previous assessment on the personal property of the Singer Company was $1,000,000.

Long Run of Ambulance.

The longest trip ever made by the Alexian Hospital ambulance of Elizabeth was made Thursday, when it went to the Mountainside Hospital, Montclair, to get Andrew Sagkow, a telegraph operator on the Erie Railroad, who was badly burned on the face, arms, hands, neck and chest in an explosion. The injured man is thirty-five years old, single, and boards at 85 Division street, Elizabeth. It took the ambulance from 6:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. to make the round trip.

SECURITY

is the first essential to consider when you think of opening a bank account.

It's easy to invest money but to do it intelligently and safely is a matter that requires sound judgment, backed by years of experience.

Instead of taking risks that bring large returns, it is the policy of this bank to first secure our principal—although the profit to us may be small.

This, backed by ample capital and surplus, gives our depositors the thing most desired—

GIRL STRIKERS RETURN.

Win Most of the Disputed Points in Rahway Factory.

Rahway, July 30.—The strike at the Milbury Atlantic Manufacturing Company was settled yesterday. All the strikers returned to their work with the exception of one girl and the former forelady, Mrs. Robert Tombs, who will not be taken back.

The firm made the following concessions: Agreed to close at 12 o'clock noon during June, July and August, and at 4 o'clock Saturday the balance of the year, and to increase the employee's wages from $1.50 to $2 per week and those less experienced from 50c. to $1.50 per week.

Mrs. Milbury states that on account of mismanagement more than 100 bathing suits have been ruined.

Chalmers MOTOR CARS

Announcement of 1911 Models

IN announcing the Chalmers models for 1911, the most noteworthy fact is that in all vital features they remain the same as the cars that have created world's records for efficiency, endurance and speed—such as winning the Indiana and Massapequa trophies—blazing the way from Denver to Mexico City and mapping the path for the Glidden Tour of 1910. Trade papers last year gave the Chalmers the title of "Champion Cars."

The best evidence of Chalmers merit, however, is not the trophies won in tests of all kinds, but thousands of satisfied users, the majority of whom have the means to purchase cars of any kind.

Look over the list of automobile buyers in your own community and see if this statement is not true. Talk to some of the Chalmers owners; their enthusiasm will prove our claims.

In general, the greatest improvement on the 1911 Chalmers consists in refinement of detail, like the artist's final touch to the masterpiece. Lines have been beautified in body and fender, so that—viewed from any angle—no car, whether it costs $5,000 or more, affords more eye-delight than the Chalmers.

In detail—the curves just back of the tonneau doors have been straightened out, making the low, rakish, straight-lined bodies which every maker strives so hard to obtain. The seats have been lowered, adding materially to the riding comfort.

The tonneaus of both "30" and "Forty" have been made longer and wider. The fenders have been changed slightly, adding to the graceful appearance of the car and at the same time affording greater protection from water and mud.

The angle of the steering post has been changed slightly so as to allow more space between steering wheel and driving seat.

The brackets supporting the running boards are fastened inside the frame, making the exterior of the car appear perfectly smooth.

The battery box has been placed under the rear floor and a tool box big enough to hold a pump placed on the left running board, a change that every driver will praise.

New style carburetors are used on both motors and their economy and uniformity of operation under all conditions will surprise every buyer.

On the "30" we furnish a Bosch magneto, big new-style gas lamps, Prest-O-Lite tank and a special Chalmers top— all for $200 additional.

As in former years, the Chalmers principle is not to make as many cars as possible, but to make them as good as possible. Chalmers cars are built on a quality, not a quantity basis. We regret that we could not furnish cars of the 1910 models for all who wanted them. We fear that some may have been offended at being told they could not get the cars they wanted: It is sometimes harder to tell a man he can't have a thing than to show him why he ought to have it.

We would like to take care of everyone who wants a Chalmers car, and yet it is not our ambition to build cars in very large quantities; hence we would advise you to place your order early.

Deliveries to customers begin August 1st.
